

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. EASTERN CHRONOLOGY.

The Christian year 1862 corresponds with the Indian Bengalee year 1259, and Samvat year 1909. Mahomedan year of the Hegira 1268, which began 27th October, 1851, and will end 14th October, 1852. Parsee year of Yezdegerd 1221, which began 27th September, 1851, and will end 26th September, 1852. Chinese year 4488 (or 49th of the 75th cycle), which began 1st February 1851, and will end 19th February, 1852. Siamese and Burmese civil year 1214, which began 2nd April, 1851, and their religious year 2394, which began 31st May, 1851.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

It is gratifying to be in a condition to commence the year 1862, as we began the past year, with an announcement of the continued political tranquillity of the vast dominions now comprehended under the name of "British India." That this state of repose may be prolonged; that time and opportunity may be afforded for those moral and social ameliorations which are needed by its population, and which the Government are anxious to accomplish, but which the interruption of political quiet would retard, must be the devout wish of all who feel an interest in the welfare of the millions composing that population.

The hazards to which our Indian Government is exposed, however, may be faintly discerned in the renewal of the fierce religious dispute betwixt the Mahomedans and Parsees at Bombay, which, at the date of the last accounts, had subsided, but, like a smothered flame, this dangerous strife broke out afresh.

It will be recollected that a Parsee newspaper, published at Bombay, in Guzerattee, contained a memoir of Mahomet, accompanied by a lithographed portrait. There was nothing in the memoir disrespectful to the Prophet; but, besides the repugnance which good Mahomedans feel to all pictorial representations of so divine a personage, the print was so badly executed, that they deemed it a premeditated insult, which they resented. The measures adopted by the authorities, and the judicious steps taken by the Cazeer, on the one part, and the leading Parsees on the other, brought about a seeming adjustment of the difference, and the Mohurram festival, when Mahomedan jealousy is easily excited, passed off without commotion.

On the 22nd November, the Parsees were again attacked, without apparent cause. A party of Mahomedans broke into a Parsee fire-temple, where they committed wanton outrages, and were only prevented by the arrival of the police from desecrating the sacred fire itself. On the 23rd, large masses of Mahomedans assembled, many of them armed with clubs, prepared to attack the Parsee quarter. The magistrates and police were assailed with stones, but, with the assistance of some lancers, they routed the rioters, who, however, kept reassembling in large bodies for several hours, and it was not till many were hurt, and 100 made prisoners, that they were dispersed. The Parsees took no part in the riot, and behaved remarkably well. On the 25th, a party of Mussulmans perpetrated a disgraceful outrage upon the cemetery of the late Framjee Cowasjee, into which they forced an entrance, dragged down the brass lattice-work which protected several bodies in the "Towers of Silence," and defiled the place.

The Government now issued a "notice," warning all parties against joining in these disturbances, and inviting the aid of the respectable and influential individuals of either community, in allaying the animosities which prevailed between the members of the two persuasions. An increased force, civil and military, was also collected to preserve order, which was at length restored. A meeting of the leading Parsees and Mahomedans (to the number of above fifty) took place at the residence of Mr. Lumsden, the judicial Secretary, at which Sir Erskine Perry, Brigadier Wylie, and Major French were also present. Sir Erskine delivered a conciliatory speech; and an apologetic paper in Guzeratee was read on the part of the Parsee editor. Whereupon the Cazee, on behalf of himself and his countrymen, accepted the apology, and promised peace.

From this civil broil we turn to the operations of the British force in the Momand country, which our last Summary left at the village of Dubb, employed in constructing forts in the district, and there they remained at the date of the latest advices from the camp, the 14th of November. The fort at Dubb was making very slow progress, owing to the sandy nature of the soil. A detachment of the force (the 2nd Irregular Cavalry) was stationed at a place called Muthae, to keep the hill-men of that neighbourhood in check. Not a single casualty had occurred on our side from the fire of the enemy, and they had latterly been rendered more chary than ever of approaching our camp, by falling into an ambuscade, which severely punished their temerity. The Momunds had assembled under Saadut Khan, the chief of Lallpoora, to consult as to ulterior measures, being greatly perplexed by the intention to erect forts in their country. It is believed that Saadut Khan has hitherto held aloof from the doings of his eastern clansmen, and that he will not now commit himself to support them. A reinforcement of forty-five men from each of the regiments at Peshawur had left that station to join the force under Sir Colin Campbell.

Rahamdad Khan had posted himself about half a mile above Minchinees, where the river is hemmed in by rocks. Here he continued to lay a tax on the "jalas," or floats, and had even raised it from eight to sixteen annas on each. The hill Momunds are represented as walking about among our tents without let or hindrance, as it is no easy matter to distinguish between the hostile and the friendly tribes, all being equally characterized by filth, raggedness, and ruffianly appearance.

Captain Coke had returned to Kohat, having taken possession of the Talbaland Khel, of Maree-oboo, and Maree-ab. The force never actually went to Dour, as the annexed territory lies between Hangoo and Meeranzaie. The people are said to be well pleased at the prospect of being our subjects. The force was attacked but once, in the following manner:—

"Lieut. Garrett, of the Engineers, started from Capt. Coke's camp to go to the top of a hill close by. He was accompanied by ten men. As these straggled somewhat in going up, he had only three of them when he approached the top of the hill. Just as this small party reached the crest, up sprang ten Wuzerees, matchlock in hand. They fired one round at Lieut. Garrett, and then took to their heels as fast as they could down the hill. Lieut. Garrett had his whiskers singed by a ball, and one of the men with him, belonging to Coke's regiment, was shot through the brain and of course killed on the spot. The Wuzerees never stopped to see what execution they had done, fortunately supposing that the officer must have had a large body of men with him."

The Wuzerees had not molested our troops, to any extent, for some time; but a fort is being erected at Bahadur Khel, in the Salt Range, upon which an attack was made by a party of that tribe, who were gallantly repelled by the detachment on out-post duty, and suffered a loss, in killed, of eleven men.

The Lahore Chronicle quotes a letter from Mooltan, dated 20th of November, which states that orders had been issued to the whole of the field force at that station, to hold themselves in readiness to march, on service, at the shortest notice.

Affghanistan appears to be on the eve of a sanguinary civil war. Dost Mahomed Khan was still alive, but his recovery is considered hopeless. The present accounts confirm the report that he had named his son Afzul Khan his successor, who had ceded the precarious boon to his younger brother Goolam Hyder. This person had taken his father's place in the Dewan Kanah; but it is said that, every night, the maliks of the Koh Daman, and the chief oolama of the city, accompanied Moodad Khan, Populzaie, and the son of Meer Waiz, to the house of Sultan Mahomed; and it is generally asserted that they had sworn to make him ameer on the death of Dost Mahomed. On the other hand, the Kuzailbashies and Ghilzaies remain true to the cause of Afzul and Goolam Hyder. The latter has been politic enough to conciliate Peer Mahomed, by restoring to him a valuable jagheer, of which he had lately deprived him. A foreshadowing of the commotions likely to arise on the ameer's death has been afforded by the conduct of the Hazarabs near Ghuznee, who, as soon as the rumour reached them, at once refused to pay the revenue, and retired to their fastnesses. In the country in Turkistan, lately conquered by the Afghans, the people had taken up arms against Akram Khan, who had only 3,000 men with him at Balkh. From Candahar we learn that Kohundil Khan retains possession of the wives and family of Rahamdil Khan, and refuses to deliver them up—even at the Ameer's request—unless Rahamdil Khan will trust himself in his power.

Dost Mahomed will leave no fewer than twenty-one children.

Maharajah Gholab Singh, the ruler of Cashmere, is reported to be in a dying state. He is said to be suffering from dropsy, and in all probability will not long survive this attack.

The intelligence from the Nizam's capital details the means by which the financial difficulty was got over.

"The minister's arrangements to meet the stipulated payment of the 31st October fell short by a large balance, which the Nizam agreed, but not till the last moment, to supply from his treasury.

The deficit is said to be thirty lacs, and the Nizam supplies this sum, not in the current coin of the realm, but in pagodas, sequins, bullion, and jewels. This would import an impoverished treasury; but for that very reason it sets an example to the minister not to forego his right to demand money from the subjects and servants of the state. The country in which the community has an interest has been saved by the sacrifice of the sovereign's personal property, and an obligation is thereby imposed upon the community to respond to the example, and upon the minister to see that they are made to respond to it. The Nizam proceeds to make his payments immediately; the resident's instructions were stringent. He was not permitted to give time beyond the day, as the property is really to be delivered over. His instructions have been conformed to essentially in their spirit, though not perhaps according to the letter."

Oude is still a scene of internal disorder. Zemindars are in arms, setting at defiance a large force of regular troops, commanded by European officers.

The ill-treatment which British subjects have suffered for a long time past at Rangoon has induced the Supreme Government of India to despatch a force thither, under the command of Commodore Lambert, R.N. The compensation to be demanded for damages sustained by British subjects is said to be very considerable, and if the Burmese should be found contumacious, the Commodore has orders to inflict chastisement on the offenders without awaiting further orders.

The Commissioner in Scinde has issued a notice to merchants and traders of all nations connected with the commerce of that province, that two annual fairs will be established, one at Kurrachee, to be held every year, from the 1st of December, for sixty days; the other at Sukkur, in Upper Scinde, commencing every year on the 1st of January, and to last for forty-five days. The first fair at Kurrachee was to commence on the 1st of December, 1851. The first fair at Sukkur was to commence on the 1st of January, 1852. This measure is considered of the highest importance to the prosperity of Scinde.

The Governor-General had left Simla, and was expected at Roorkee on the 24th of November, whence he would proceed to Hurdwar.

The Commander-in-Chief marched into cantonments at Jullunder on the 16th November.

Intelligence of great moment, if authentic, had reached Calcutta, by the way of Tibet, from China, announcing the advance of the insurgents upon Peking, the flight and abdication of the emperor Hien-fung, and the occupation of the throne of the Celestial Empire by the chief of the insurgents, Teen-teh, the representative of the Chinese Ming dynasty, which will thus displace the Manchoo family. This intelligence was brought by a lama, or Buddhist priest, from L'Hassa to Sikkim.

OUDE.

Our latest intelligence from Lucknow is of the 12th instant:—"Thakoorpershad, the ex-chieftain of Bettyah, where Elderton lost his life, and the uncle of Gunga Buksh, who was decapitated last year at Lucknow, has lately made an incursion into his former Zemindaree. He plundered four villages of the Dewah and Koorsee district, burned the huts, murdered several ryots, and threatened the lives of the men who were cutting the jungles. To prevent a similar occurrence, and the realization of the thakoor's menaces, a company of Barlow's corps, with one gun, were sent last week to Bettyah. This district was one of the worst governed in Oude; especially as the Paseses, a very low caste of professional thieves, are its principal inhabitants. They seldom cultivate the land, and the only honest employment they sometimes perform, is chowkedarry work. Gunga Buksh and Thakoorpershad found them very useful in robbing and plundering for them, when they were in power. They are small but strong and well-built men, and remarkable for their contempt of danger and extreme cunning. Khan Aly Khan, the Chukklidar of this district, has however managed to give the Zemindars of Koorsee and Dewah some confidence in him, by fixing the revenue at a certain rate for three years, for which period he obtained his amildaree. This will induce them to cultivate the land with more industry, and less fear of being robbed of their harvests by the Chukklidar's men. There were no less than twelve forts in the Elaga (district), of which six were formerly held by Thakoorpershad, and were remarkable for their strength; four by Nawab Ally, the Talooqdar of Mahmoodeabad, who, when at peace with the Government, keeps 2,000 armed men in his pay, and two by Rujpasees, or chiefs of Paseses, one of whom can at any time call in the aid of 5,000 men. Of Thakoorpershad's forts, four were dismantled by the Oude Government at Colonel Sleeman's representation. This account of a district in Oude will give you the best idea of the state of the country. Captain Magness has just had an engagement with Mohammed Hossein, the robber Zemindar of Baichogurh, in the Jugdispore and Sultanpore district. The fight commenced with cannonading, but when the enemy's fire slackened, the sepoy's stormed the fort, and succeeded in entering. The chief, however, managed to escape, and carry off his wounded, leaving his nephew and three of his principal soldiers on the field, and eight men prisoners in the hand of the assailants. Magness lost but two men.—Englishman, Nov. 22.

The Englishman's Lucknow correspondent writes:—"In my last I briefly alluded to the resident's interview with the King, and of the arrival of despatches. I am able now to enter into the particulars. The King had taken a very ill-advised step; he wrote to Lord Dalhousie a letter, inquiring after his health, and despatched it direct. This was to have been, of course, a mere pretence to open a direct communication with the head of the Supreme Government. The letter was returned, and Col. Sleeman was requested, in doing so, to mention to his Majesty, that all communications must be sent through him, as the Governor-General's representative at Lucknow, and that no others would be received but those transmitted through the usual channel. The revenue affairs and the deplorable state of the country were also alluded to by him; they were the chief subjects of conversation between the King and the resident."

THE BENGAL MILITARY FUND.

A special meeting of the subscribers to the Bengal Military Fund, was held at the Town-hall of Calcutta, on the 10th Nov. There were present only thirty-five members, including four clergymen and five medical gentlemen. At first there arose a difficulty as to the chairman, until Col. Brooke was prevailed upon to act as president. The business of the day commenced with a speech from Col. Sage, who expressed the wish of upwards of 300 subscribers that the meeting should waive a scrupulous observance of certain old and nearly obsolete rules, and proceed to consider several questions of great importance that had not been mentioned in the advertisement. He then alluded to the anxiety that generally prevailed with regard to the solvency of the fund, and condemned himself and his brother directors for not having published the last letter of Major Hannyngton, which would have proved that the fears entertained by the Ferozepore meeting were not justified by the actual state of the accounts. "Nothing," observed the gallant colonel, "nothing that was honest need dread publicity. The army should know everything. Everything should be laid clearly before them, except perhaps some petty details, such as the allowance of passage money to a sick officer, or the grant of a pension to an officer's widow." The first resolution was then read, and Col. Sage, in the name of his numerous proxies, proposed that the subscriptions and donations to the Military Fund, for all professions, should be carefully revised by the fund actuary. On this a desultory and irrelevant conversation arose—discussion it was not—in which Major Marshall and the Rev. Messrs. Eteson and Gawn bore the principal part; but at length, notwithstanding a somewhat captious amendment proposed by Lieut. Douglas, the original resolution was adopted by all. The same unanimity, however, did not exist with respect to the propriety of discussing the questions not specially brought before the meeting, and on Lieut. Douglas reading aloud articles 27 and 32, it was declared by a majority of 15 to 11 that the meeting "was not competent to entertain other propositions." Col. Sage and Capt. Melville on behalf of their proxies, then entered a formal protest against this decision, and gave notice to the directors to call another special meeting. And thus terminated the proceedings of the day.

Among the military an excitement prevails with regard to the Bengal Fund, the state of which is such as to cause feelings of the deepest anxiety. A correspondent, who appears to have given the subject the most careful consideration, estimates the losses from unforeseen contingencies such as some speculations, and the consequences of Lord Gough's campaigns, "which brought widows on the fund by dozens, at some ten lacs of rupees." "When there was only the Widows' Fund, the number of its members was under 500, and as late as the 30th of April, 1826, the married members of the united funds were only 495; at the end of last year the number was 1,342, or 271 per cent. of the number in the year 1826. The number of persons in the service has increased also, but nothing like the increase of marriages. This state of things was not foreseen or provided for, and yet it is plainly owing to the existence of the Fund which, by securing a provision for the widow, acts directly as a stimulus to marriage, by removing what otherwise might be an insuperable obstacle." Independently of this, it is further surmised that the condition of the Fund has been radically unsound from its commencement, and such seems to be the opinion of Mr. Davies, the actuary employed in 1828 to investigate the case. This unfavourable view has also been adopted by Mr. Farr, who unhesitatingly declares that the "Military Fund is in a critical position." We trust, however, that these fears are exaggerated, and that the Fund will for many a day be found equal to meet every claim that may arise.—Delhi Gazette, Nov. 25.

THE ENGLISH AND ORIENTAL SCHOLARSHIPS in the Agra College are henceforth to be open to all youths, of whatever creed or wherever educated, who choose to conform to its rules, and who pass the required examination.

EXPEDITION AGAINST RANGOON.—The eyes of the Burmese are to be opened to the error of their doings in persecuting and oppressing British subjects resorting to Rangoon. On the 19th inst. a naval expedition left Calcutta to enforce apology and reparation, or to inflict chastisement on the offenders if found contumacious. This Cromwellian embassy is to consist of H. M.'s steamer Fox, 42, H. M.'s steamer Serpent, 12, with the H. C. war steamers Tenasserim and Proserpine. The Serpent and Proserpine are to join the force in the Irrawaddy river. Commodore Lambert, who commands the expedition, will present a long bill for damages sustained by the subjects of his Royal mistress, and in the event of its not being promptly settled, he is to take possession of Rangoon. The total is so large, that it is thought the commodore will have to hold the place in pawn, even should the representatives of his golden-footed majesty be found not quite unwilling to meet the demand. Capt. Lewis, of the merchant ship Champion, the latest British victim of Burmese extortion, accompanies the expedition as a witness, we suppose, to prove the validity of the claims to be presented and enforced. Lieut. Thomas Latter, 67th regt. N.I., an accomplished Burmese scholar, and Mr. Edwards, an equally accomplished linguist, formerly attached to the embassy at Ava, go as interpreters. The decision of the Governor-General to call the barbarians to account for their wrong-doings has given general satisfaction here. It is not thought likely that there will be any bloodshed, the common belief being that the mere appearance of the armament off Rangoon will frighten the authorities into anything,—in the shape of promises and explanations at all events. One indispensable condition to a peaceful settlement of the matter is, that we are to have a resident, or consular agent, at Rangoon or Ava, backed, of course, by a war vessel on the Irrawaddy, for the protection of British interests.—Hurkaru, Nov. 22.

CRUISE v. PRINGLE.—The Sudder Court has at last disposed of the old case of "Cruise v. Pringle," after investigating it and deliberating upon it for above two years. We have not yet heard what is to be done to the great gag of Purneah, but we are sure that the inquiry has ended very unfavourably for his character. We know this, because the Court,—or its register at all events—has refused to let the proceedings and their results be laid before the public, thus affording indisputable evidence that the reputation of a brother civilian would suffer by the record of his doings published with the authority of a judicial decision. Such attempts at secrecy are suicidal, as where they are successful they only give ground to believe that things are worse than in reality they are. Another and more modern case of "Cruise v. Pringle," on a charge of bribery, has been sent down by the Commissioner, Mr. Brown, and this, it is probable, will occupy the Court for another period of two years or so. We may suppose, too, that it will be officially burked like the present one, unless it happens to go in favour of the defendant.—Hurkaru, Nov. 15.

THE BRITISH-INDIAN ASSOCIATION is at last formed. A meeting of native gentlemen was held at No. 3, Cossitollah, on the 29th October, at which the following resolutions were passed:—"That a society be formed under the denomination of the British-Indian Association." "That the following gentlemen form the Committee of the British-Indian Association:—Rajah Pertab Chunder Singh, Rajah Sutto Churn Gosal, Baboo Hurro Coomarr Tagore, Baboo Ramanath Tagore, Baboo Doorgachurn Dutt, Baboo Joykishen Mookerjee, Baboo Hurreemohun Sen, Baboo Aushootos Day, and Baboo Ramgopal Ghose." The main object of the Association is to watch the proceedings of Government with reference to native interests, and take the necessary measures for obtaining a redress of grievances by representations to the local rulers or an appeal to the British Parliament.

MR. BLUNT, late of the civil service, has commenced a suit against the Company for 2½ lacs of rupees, being the amount which he has paid to the Civil Service Fund in excess of the half value of his annuity.

CAPT. WATTS.—The long pending case of Capt. Watts against the Agra Messenger, for libel, is yet on the board. The proceedings recorded are the argument and decision on a demurrer by the plaintiff to a plea of justification based on an allegation of the facts. The Chief Justice has allowed the demurrer, on the ground, that were the statement of facts proved true, the comments were more severe than the case warranted. His lordship, however, alluding to the sale by Capt. Watts of his shares in the North West Bank at more than they were worth, Capt. Watts knowing the real condition of the bank, observes that "he could not say that a man of nice honour and strict morality would act as the plaintiff, on the assumption of the truth of these facts, must be taken as having acted."—Hurkaru.

NATIVE CHRISTIANS.—Gannendro Mohun Tagore and the Rev. K. M. Bannerjee have announced a course of lectures on Christianity.

THE RAILWAY.—The Friend of India informs us that the question between bridges and level crossings has been settled in favour of the latter in the case of the Calcutta Railway. The same paper states that, in consequence of the small quantity of rain which fell during the last season, it is not deemed advisable to lay down the ballast on the line of embankment now ready till after it has had the benefit of being well settled by one hearty rainy season. The intermediate period will be employed in the construction of the bridges and other masonry, and the preparation of the ballast, and the contractors will thus have an opportunity of extending their attention to the new lines in the second section which have been respectively allotted to them.

THE MACKAYS.—The Hurkaru quotes a letter from Juanpore which mentions, not positively, but as a report, that the Government intends to decline prosecuting the Mackays, because of the expense.

AFFRAY AT PESHAWUR.—The Delhi Gazette of the 12th November announces the occurrence of a serious affray in the streets of Peshawur, between the two Great Mussulman sects, the Sheeahs and the Soonies. The latter reviled the former, who were carrying their Tazeeah, until the Sheeahs turned on them, and attacked them with stones and sticks. The fight became general, and about fifty persons were severely wounded, before the kutwal could succeed in separating the combatants.

THE SHIPPING TRADE.—The Calcutta Morning Chronicle draws a melancholy picture of the prospects of the shipping interest in the port of Calcutta. There are now upwards of two hundred vessels in the harbour, and more coming in, and freights are down at the unprecedentedly low rates of thirty shillings per ton for light freight, and twenty-five shillings for dead weight.

RE-EMPLOYMENT OF DISMISSED OFFICERS.—The Government of the North-West Provinces has published the following extract from a letter from the Court of Directors. "We consider it so injurious to the service, that men who have been dismissed for misconduct from one department should be considered eligible for re-employment in any other department, that we must entirely discountenance such a practice. It is a wholesome check upon negligence and dishonesty, for the servants of Government clearly to understand, that probity and diligence are the only means of retaining employment under Government."

THE BONUS SCHEME.—The slowness of promotion in the civil service has exercised the ingenuity of its members in devising a remedy for the evil, and numerous have been the schemes proposed and advocated in the different journals. The most feasible one, however, appears to be that suggested at Agra, and it is understood that nine gentlemen of high standing in the service have signified their intention to retire immediately, if this bonus scheme should be carried out. In this case an almost unprecedented amount of promotion will take place, and new and younger blood will be infused into the various departments. —Delhi Gaz. Nov. 25.

LIEUT. WALKER, of the Bombay engineers, has completed his survey of the Peshawur district, notwithstanding several fanatical attempts upon his life. He has now gone to Bunnou.

HIGH PRIEST OF OUDE.—The Lucknow correspondent of the Englishman sends the following interesting notice of the nature of the office held by the high priest of Oude, the only officer of the kind now left in India:—"This functionary exercises in Oude the highest judicial authority, from which there is no appeal. It is his province in particular to determine matters of religion about which there is any dispute, and doubtful cases of inheritance, but now even criminal cases are brought before him. His office, as judge in criminal cases, is conferred on him by the king, but his degree, and his right to interfere in and decide on law cases, is given him by the Arabian Mushtahid of Kerbelah, who, on his being dubbed doctor of theology, sends him the turban of high priest. The Mushtahid is greatly respected and venerated by the Sheehs for his learning and piety, and looked upon by them as little less than a saint."

BENGAL COAL COMPANY.—At a meeting held on the 14th November, a dividend of 6 per cent. was declared on the operations of the past year, and it was agreed that the company should be registered under the new Act. The directors showed that the net profit realised during the past twelve months amounted to Rs. 1,12,390, leaving on hand the whole of this season's coal, and a portion of that of last season.

THE LATE RAJAH KRISHNAUTH ROY.—It is said that, by virtue of the grant by royal letters patent from the Crown to the East-India Company of all fines and forfeitures that in England fall to the Crown only, the Company mean to claim the whole of the personal property of the late Rajah Krishnauth Roy (six or seven lakhs), on the ground that it lapsed to the Crown by the verdict of the coroner's jury of felo de se. The Rajah had willed a very large sum to the Education Service, but the will was disputed at law, and the Education Service disappointed of an addition to its means that it sadly stood in need of. It may now, perhaps, obtain the legacy through the hands of the Government. It is said that the family of the Rajah will contest the claim strenuously. We are not aware that the question has been ever solemnly decided, how far the English law of forfeiture applies to Hindoos or Mahomedans in India. The question, if now raised, will probably be carried home to the Privy Council. —Hurkaru, Nov. 8.

CATASTROPHE.—The Calcutta papers record a catastrophe, which occurred near the town on the 10th instant. One of the Mysore princes, Prince Gholam Mahommed, has for many years been in the habit of making a distribution of warm clothing to the poor at the beginning of the cold season. The gift has this year been delayed, and yesterday a vast crowd of beggars, hearing that it was to be distributed, rushed in at one of the gates, and in the struggle and confusion which ensued, about thirteen men were crushed to death. —Friend of India, Nov. 11.

BENGAL COFFEE.—At a meeting of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India, an interesting communication was made from Major Hannyngton, forwarding sixteen seers of coffee seed, from a garden in Chota Nagpore; he believes, that coffee of excellent quality may be produced in that station, but feels doubtful whether the cultivation will prove profitable, as it requires an extraordinary degree of care and attention.

GWALIOR.—The Agra Messenger, of 15th November, says that a force consisting of a detachment of the 2nd cavalry, under Lieut. Alexander, together with Warburton's battery, to which will be added two large mortars and two howitzers, and the 6th regiment of infantry, were to move from Gwalior on the 18th, to attack the fort of Buragaoon.

A CASE OF IMPORTANCE to all persons engaged in merchandize in Calcutta was decided in the Small Cause Court. A mercantile house agreed to ship some sugar on board the Monarchy, at 3*l.* 10*s.* per ton. They subsequently refused to perform their contract, and the agents were compelled to accept sugar at 3*l.* 7*s.* per ton; and they brought an action for the difference. The defence set up was, that the vessel was not seaworthy, inasmuch as the proportion of hands was less than four to the 100 tons. To this it was rejoined, that the Monarchy was fitted with modern appliances, similar to those employed in the American vessels, and could be worked safely with fewer than the ordinary number of hands. It was proved that it was the custom in Calcutta to consider a vessel undermanned which had not four men to the 100 tons, and that all the larger insurance offices had rejected this particular ship on that ground. The judge, Mr. Reddie, decided that there was no law which compelled owners to ship four men to the 100 tons, but that there was an usage, and when that usage was departed from, such departure must be distinctly specified at the time of making the contract. A verdict was therefore entered for the defendants. On the case being appealed to the Supreme Court, however, this decision was reversed, the court being of opinion that the custom had not been sufficiently proved, and that even if such a custom existed, it was an unreasonable one, which should not be upheld by the law.

THE MARCH OF INTELLECT.—Maharaja Goolab Sing has heard of his having been killed by some European gentlemen connected with the press. He has, with a foresight and prudence deserving of peculiar commendation, hit on the expedient of having a press of his own, to prevent the circulation of unauthorized accounts of his death, and preparations for the establishment of a lithographic press, at Jumoo, are in a state of forwardness. A member of the family of the venerable Faqueer Noor-ood-deen, to which the establishment of the Dereesee-Noor press is owing, some time since, set up a lithographic press at Sealkote, and commenced the issue of a newspaper, which, however, died after the issue of its third number. The proprietor transferred his materials to Mooltan, and has commenced work there; but we have not heard whether any periodical is issued in connection therewith. —Lahore Chron., Nov. 12.

LAHORE.—Col. Sir H. M. Lawrence, presi lent of the Board of Administration for the affairs of the Punjab, returned to Lahore from Kusowlee, yesterday morning. Mr. Montgomery, the new member of the board, will, it is said, make over the office of commissioner of the Lahore division, to Mr. Barnes, at Julundhur, on his way from Simla, and then proceed to join his new appointment. Mr. John Lawrence, now senior member of the Board of Administration for the affairs of the Punjab, left Lahore on Saturday evening, by dak, en route for Peshawur. At Atok, Mr. Lawrence will join his camp, and remain on the frontier till the 18th or 20th of December. We have reason to know that Mr. Lawrence's mission is not connected with the military operations now being carried out on the frontier. It is rumoured that he will proceed to sea at the close of the present cold season, for the benefit of his health. —Ibid.

ROADS.—The present government of India will be remembered, if not for great progress or great vigour, at any rate for great eccentricity, in the art of road-making. There is no road worthy of the name—from Meerut to Lahore, but the Kennedy road, from Kalka to Simla, is going on well; still less is there a road from Lahore to Peshawur, but we shall have a capital one, ere long, to Tibet! Not a nullah is yet bridged on the main line of communication in Upper India; but it is satisfactory to know that Simla and Mahasoo are brought nearer to each other by a tunnel. It is well known that for many years the excursion-makers to the interior from Simla, or the governor-general, or commander-in-chief, in their pilgrimages of six miles "to escape the periodical rains," have had to ascend a hill of 300 yards in length. This obstacle is removed! and the course of traffic, the handboxes of a governor-general's wife, or the hat-boxes of a commander-in-chief's aide-de-camp, may flow on uninterruptedly through the great Mahasoo tunnel. It is supposed that a saving of at least five minutes has been effected by this truly great work, and that too at a comparatively trifling cost, for, with a policy equally wise and generous, the Government have used, in its construction, only unpaid labour; working out the terms of an obsolete treaty with the hill chiefs, which provide that the latter shall keep up such and such public works. Of course, the whole loss falls upon these high-minded chiefs, who are far too conscientious to keep back a single ana from the wages of the labourers, who flock from their villages in companies with chupraees and the sirdars's sepoys, to help in redeeming the national promise. —Ibid.

MAHARAJA DULEEP SING is to reside at Mussooree next hot weather.

THE GREAT FAIR AT THE BIRHMAN GHAT, on the Nerbudda, was attended by 25,000 people.

THE JOTEE PURSAD CASE.—We understand that the enquiries of Sir Robert Barlow are not progressing so rapidly as was the case at the commencement. The reason assigned is that a second and public application has been made to Sir James Colville to assist the Sudur judge; and if he should consent to do so, the whole of the enquiry will have to be gone over again. Lala Jotee Pursad's assamees were in daily attendance at the court, in readiness to furnish any information, or answer any questions, but no one had been interrogated up to the 14th of November. —Lahore Chron., Nov. 19.

ON DITS.—Mr. H. V. Nathan, civil and sessions judge of Sarun, is about to retire from the service.—Col. Birch is to succeed Col. Stuart as military secretary to the Government of India, on the latter's return to Europe.—Mr. Barlow, salt agent at Hidgelee, is about to retire.—The Rev. W. Whiting will be appointed chaplain of Cawnpore.—Capt. Macdonald, 50th N.I., retires from the service.—Capt. S. C. Starkie, 3rd Sikh local infantry, is about to retire from the service.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDER.

BREVET.

The Right Hon. the Governor in Council is pleased to publish the following General Order by the Hon. the President of the Council of India in Council, No. 573, dated Fort William, 7th Nov. 1851.

The Hon. the President of the Council of India in Council is pleased to promote the undermentioned officers of the Bengal and Madras establishments, under the operation of General Orders, No. 226, of the 14th November, 1836.

Lieut. Col. Robert John Hussay Vivian, of the Madras Infantry, to be colonel by brevet. Lieut. Colonel William Nairne Forbes, of the Bengal Engineers, to be colonel by brevet. Lieut. Col. Thomas Littleton Green, of the Madras Infantry, to be colonel by brevet.—From the 15th Sept. 1851, and to stand above Col. Alexander Carnegie, C.B., of the Bengal Infantry.

COURT MARTIAL.

LIEUT. AND BREVET-CAPT. JAMES GORDON, 59TH N.I.

Head-Quarters, Simla, Oct. 25.—At a general court-martial assembled at Fort William, on the 22nd September, 1851, Lieut. and Brevet-Captain James Gordon, of the 59th regt. N.I., was arraigned on the following charges, viz.—

First Charge.—For conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in the following instances:—

1st. In having, at Berhampore, on the 27th April, 1850, at a meeting of officers of the regiment, falsely assured those officers that he had the means, and would positively be prepared, to pay, on the 1st August, 1850, the sum of Rs. 1,980, being his share of the sum to be paid to Capt. W. Blackwood, of the same regiment, in consideration of his retiring from the service; by which false assurance the said officers were induced to enter with him, Capt. Gordon, into a mutual engagement to pay their proper shares, and to hold themselves responsible, jointly and severally, for the payment of the respective quotas of their seniors, by the 1st August, 1850; he, Capt. Gordon, well knowing that neither from his pay and allowances as a lieutenant in the 59th regiment N.I. had he the means, nor from any other source any certain prospect, of fulfilling this engagement; and having failed up to the present time to pay his debt to Capt. Blackwood, now retired from the service, and thereby rendered his junior officers liable for the amount.

2nd. In having, at Berhampore, on or about the 20th November, 1850, fraudulently obtained from Messrs. Mackenzie, Lyall, and Co., of Calcutta, goods to the amount, with cost of carriage, of Rs. 1,075 9 0, under a written promise to pay for these goods in January, 1851, he well knowing that he had not fulfilled his engagement to the officers of the regiment stated in the first charge; that, between the 9th July and the 9th November, 1850, decrees had been given against him in suits before the military Courts of Requests at Berhampore, to the amount, altogether, of Rs. 959 8 6, to be realized by deductions from his pay and allowances, and that he had no certain or reasonable prospect whatever of being able to pay Messrs. Mackenzie, Lyall, and Co. for the goods he obtained from them, and for which no payment has been made to the present time.

3rd. In having, at Berhampore, between the 13th January and the 15th March, 1851, neglected to restore to Messrs. Mackenzie, Lyall, and Co., such portion of the goods obtained from them, mentioned in the 2nd instance of the charge, as remained available; he having been apprized, on the 12th or 13th January, of the offer made by Messrs. Mackenzie, Lyall, and Co., to take back such goods, and strongly urged by his commanding officer to comply with their offer; the goods remaining available on the 15th of March, when Capt. Gordon agreed to restore them, having become of very trifling amount.

Second Charge.—For having, at Berhampore, on the 10th April, 1851, after having been warned for duty as officer of the day on the 11th April, quitted the station, without leave, and remained absent till the 17th April.

Finding.—Guilty of the first charge in all three instances; and on the second charge, guilty.

The Court find the amount of Court of Requests' awards to have been Rs. 864 8 8, instead of Rs. 959 8 6, as stated in the 2nd instance of the first charge.

Sentence.—The Court sentence the prisoner to be dismissed the service.

Approved and confirmed,

(Signed) W. M. GOMM, Gen., Com.-in-Chief, E.I.

Remarks by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

1. The charges, the Commander-in-Chief regrets to say, are too fully substantiated to his apprehension in this case, to admit of his attempting to modify the sentence duly awarded by the Court.

2. His regret is enhanced by the impression, arising out of a careful scrutiny of the proceedings, that however gravely reprehensible the conduct of Brevet Capt. J. Gordon is proved to have been on every count of the charges laid against him, a facility of accommodation is apparent, having—though possibly not so intended—all the prejudicial effect of direct connivance in his unwarrantable extravagance afforded by parties not amenable to military law, as regards the 2nd and 3rd instances of the first charge.

3. The Commander-in-Chief has reason to believe, that such of the officers of this army as are still involved in debt, are making laudable and honourable exertion, generally, to free themselves from its charge, and the service from the reproach thereby reflected upon it; and he believes also, that the aggregate amount of such debt has been considerably reduced within the last twelve months.

4. While, therefore, a due adherence to their pecuniary engagements must at all times be required from officers formally pledging themselves, the Commander-in-Chief will continue to regard it as forming no part of his business to abet the demands of creditors who are found to have afforded unwarrantable facilities to officers for running themselves into difficulty, or where there is shown to have been a heedless disregard of the ascertainable circumstances of the party soliciting to be accommodated at their hands.

The name of Capt. James Gordon will cease to be borne on the returns of the 59th regiment N.I. from the date of publication of this order at Berhampore, of which a report is to be made to the adjutant-general of the army and to the assistant adjutant-general at the presidency.

MADRAS.

THE NABOB OF ARCOT'S FAMILY AND THE GOVERNMENT.

An apparent breach of good faith by the Government, with regard to one of the branches of our own nabob's family, is causing no little excitement among the higher grades of the Mahomedan community at this place; and as the whole subject of the relations subsisting between the Company and the native princes must soon come before Parliament, it may be worth while to glance at its most obvious features. The circumstances out of which the existing treaty between the British Government and the Nabob of the Carnatic took its rise are these:—On the overthrow of Tippeo Sultan, proofs, satisfactory at least to those whose purposes they served, were discovered of hostile intrigues by the Nabob of Arcot, Omdut-ul-Omrah, against the British power; in consequence of which the Marquis Wellesley had resolved upon placing that prince "on the retired list," and increasing the British empire in India by the addition of the valuable and long-coveted plains of the Carnatic. When the hand of appropriation was about to be stretched forth to pluck the inviting fruit, Omdut-ul-Omrah was gathered to his fathers. His appointed heir and reputed son, Ali Houssein, was but a young man, and enjoyed not the blessing of prudent advisers; refusing to be satisfied with a merely titular sovereignty, he resolutely set his face against the scheme of absorption propounded by his ambitious and powerful neighbour. He paid the penalty of his independence in the loss of kingdom, title, and estates. The same proposal that had been rejected by Ali Houssein met with more favour in the eyes of his cousin, Azim-ud-Dowlah, who was incontinently elevated to the empty honours of nabobship by Lord Clive, then governor of Madras, on binding himself to be content with a princely revenue, and to leave to the Company all princely powers and duties. As, however, the hostility of the deprived branch of the family, that might of course be safely calculated on, would at that juncture of affairs have proved very troublesome, it was determined to bind over the malcontents to keep the peace by hanging their future support, to be looked for only from the bounty of the spoiler, on the continuance of their good behaviour. A fund was accordingly set apart for the maintenance of the "Carnatic Stipendiaries," by means of which, up to the present hour, the representatives of the fallen dynasty of the Carnatic have been enabled to keep up a shadow of their former dignity and splendour; the permanence of the pensions being supposed to rest on the faith of the British Government, and the continuance of implicit submission on the part of the stipendiaries. Retrenchments in the amounts originally guaranteed have lately awakened much dissatisfaction among this reduced nobility; but the last case, that of Abdoola Khan, the great-grandson of the Nabob Wallajah, who instead of coming into the enjoyment of Rs. 50,000 per annum, his father's and grandfather's stipend, finds himself fobbed off with some Rs. 540 per mensem, under the name of "a charitable allowance," has raised excitement to the highest pitch. The stipendiaries, one and all, are filled with apprehensions for the fate of their families, each fancying that his turn to be plucked will come next; and measures are in progress, we believe, to bring the subject before Parliament at the earliest possible date.—Athenæum, Nov. 13.

Two of our local cotemporaries have been discussing with ourselves the recent order of the Madras Government with reference to the Carnatic stipendiaries. The question will by and by have a wider range if the act of injustice is not repaired. The Court of Directors are but feeling their way at present. They are establishing a principle for universal application, and do the work quietly, with an obscure person, in a confidential sort of manner. Let us see the grounds on which their conduct in this matter is justly assailable.

The agreement or treaty, made in July, 1801, with the Nabob Azeem-ul-Dowlah, was founded on the declaration by the Company, that, in consequence of the Nabob Omdut-ul-Omrah having entered into correspondence with the enemies of the British Government, all the rights of his family were forfeited. But by the law of nations, the misconduct of a prince does not give the power with whom he is in alliance a right to seize the private property of his family. It is only their political rights, as claiming to rule and have share in the government that are put an end to. The highest crime acknowledged by the English law is the rebellion of a subject, or the attempt to kill or dethrone the sovereign; but even "traitors" do not entail the forfeiture of property on their relations. In war, persons who are taken with arms in their hands, place life and goods in the power of their captors, but the peaceful and unoffending inhabitants are left in the quiet enjoyment of their possessions; for why should men be punished for the acts of their rulers, with which they have had nothing whatever to do?

If, then, we are to have the rights of the stipendiaries decided by the "law of nations," they must be held entitled to all the possessions which their ancestors held before the last treaty was signed, except such portions as they have parted with by consent, or which have been taken from them by sentences of lawful tribunals. The Company must stand either on English or Mahomedan law in its dealings with Mussulmans. It cannot say at one moment, "We will take your property at our sole will and pleasure, because former nabobs sometimes used arbitrary power, and we are heir to all their authority;" and at another time, "We will not permit Mussulmans to adopt sons, because the English law does not sanction adoption, and we are English governors."

The Court of Directors will not stand upon the interpretation of English law in their dealings with the stipendiaries, but they will set up the claims which they have acquired by treaty. What are these? How do they justify what they have done, and what they propose to do?

In the treaties made with the Nabob Wallajah, the rights of the jaghiredars were defined and respected. They had given to the nabobs of the Carnatic service and obedience, as the nobility of all nations are bound to give to the sovereign. When the Company thought proper to depose the Nabob Hussain Ali, they imagined that the Mussulmans would rise and oppose them, so they said to their puppet,—"If the jaghiredars and stipendiaries will remain quiet, they shall keep their lands and pensions, but you, Nabob Azeem-ul-Dowlah, shall be security for their good behaviour. We will give them annual allowances instead of their jaghires, and you must sign the receipts. You are our friend. You will not sign for an enemy of the Company, and by this means they will all be kept quiet, and not trouble the country." The result justified their anticipations. The nobles held their tongues, and the Company possessed the land, and gathered all the revenue without expense and fighting. Will any man say, then, that the Company have not had benefit by this policy? They are not afraid of the jaghiredars now, nor are they afraid of the Nabob; but why should they keep the treaty with his highness and break it with the stipendiaries? The right of the one is just as good as the right of the other. Fortune has made them independent of the power of the Mussulmans, and the grandson of Azeem-ul-Dowlah may be served to-morrow like his poor relations and friends. If the claims of justice and good faith are not to be regarded, what hope has the Nabob that his descendants will sit on the musnud of the Subahdary?—Ibid., Nov. 22.

COLONEL LAW, chief engineer, southern presidency, will retire from the service, says the Athenæum, about March next, his corps giving him Rs. 35,000.

THE DIAMONDS OF GOLCONDA.—Dr. Walker has given, in the Journal of the Madras Literary Society, the following account of the renowned diamond-mines of Golconda:—"The diamond districts are not properly in the Nizam's country, being enclaves bounded on every side by the territory of the Company, which yielded them to the Nizam by special treaty, as monuments of the world-fame of his dominions. Purteal, on the road from Hyderabad to Masulipatam, and about 50 miles distant from the latter, is the principal village of the chief diamond district; along with the other enclaves, three or four in number, it yields, not from its diamonds but from the usual sources, an annual revenue to the Hyderabad state of Rs. 14,000, and is held in jaghire by Ghooslan Hyder Khan, a personal favourite of the Nizam, and recently a candidate for the vacant dewanship. The search for diamonds is limited enough, but from this no such inference should be drawn as that the Nizam's government is necessarily harsh or oppressive, for in truth the mines are all but exhausted, especially at Purteal, where the numberless knolls and pits hollowed down to the underlying granite fully attest the extent and strictness of the search. There were, when I visited Purteal in May last, two cisterns, or hougas, as they are called, at work. One let to a Mussulman, the other to a Telinghee peasant, at eight annas a month for each cistern, two of which find their way into the pocket of the havildar of the village, and six are credited to the jaghiredar: such is the amount of rent derived from the Golconda mines, scarcely eighteenpence a month, and not a pound sterling a year, if we exclude the occasional fines obtained from soucars of the neighbouring town of Kondapilly, who, for the sum of a few rupees, are permitted the privilege of digging for the gem. The diamonds found are of a very small size, and if the searcher realizes four or five rupees a month for his trouble, he deems himself fortunate. The diamonds are, in the language of the searchers, black and white; a rupee is given for the weight of a grain of jowarre for the first sort, and two rupees for the second."

THE PILGRIMS TO JUGGERNATH, according to a native paper, have been more numerous this year than for 50 years before.

THE NEW COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF of the Madras army, Sir R. Armstrong, held his first levee on the 18th of October. It was attended by all the military and some of the members of the civil service. We gather from the paragraph that his Excellency has entirely recovered from the indisposition under which he was labouring when he landed from the Barham.

ONWARD MOVEMENT OF CHRISTIANITY.—Three native candidates for ordination will be admitted on Wednesday next to the ministry of the Free Church of Scotland. They have been at least fourteen years under Christian instruction, and almost all that time in connection with the institution. Two of them are now about thirty years of age, being nineteen when they were baptized by Mr. Anderson, in 1841: the third is twenty-seven, and was baptized also in 1841. They were several years students in the institution before their baptism. After a probationary course of nearly five years, they were licensed as preachers of the Gospel, in 1846. And now, after nearly six years' exercise of their calling and gifts as preachers to their own countrymen in their own tongues, Tamil and Telugu, as well as in English to the Free Church congregation, they are to be admitted to the full powers of ministers of the Gospel in connection with the Madras Free Church Presbytery.—Athenæum, Nov. 20.

THE 5TH NIZAM'S CAVALRY.—The subject of the oppressive measures adopted towards the men of the 5th Nizam's Cavalry has not been discussed by the press in vain. On Saturday last, the Resident at Hyderabad issued an order, commanding Brigadier Mayne to return to his own station, and followed up this necessary act by directing a European court-martial to assemble at Bolarum, for the trial of the rissaldar and others of the 5th. The accused are now sure of a fair trial.—Ibid. Nov. 15.

CAPT. C. TAYLOR, of the Invalid Establishment, on leave of absence, is about to apply for permission to retire from the service.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDER.

SURGEONS.

Head-Quarters, Choultry Plain, Nov. 21, 1851.—No. 68. Under instructions from the Hon. the Court of Directors, the Commander-in-Chief directs that surgeons, who may hereafter obtain leave to proceed to Europe, be struck off the returns of corps from the date of promulgation of the order granting the leave.

With reference to the above, all surgeons now in Europe and borne on the strength of corps are to be struck off from the date of the receipt of this order.

COURT MARTIAL.

LIEUT. CHARLES HENRY MIDDLETON, 8th L.C.

Saugor, Sept. 26, 1851.—At a general court-martial held at Saugor, on September 12, Lieut. C. H. Middleton, 8th L.C., was arraigned on the following charges, viz.:

First Charge.—For having in the mess-house of the 8th L.C. at Mhow, on April 26, 1851, been drunk, he being then and there on cantonment duty, as acting captain of the day.

Second Charge.—For unofficer-like conduct, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having at the place set forth in the first charge, and on May 24, 1851, with the intention to deter Cornet W. G. B. Russell, 8th L.C., from seeking proper redress for a gross insult offered to him by Lieut. W. B. Boyd, of the same regt., sought to intimidate the said Cornet W. G. B. Russell, by using to him the following expressions, or words to the same effect: "Boyd [meaning Lieut. W. B. Boyd, of 8th L.C.] will shoot you like a snipe;" and by demanding if he, the said Cornet W. G. B. Russell, would fight him, Lieut. C. H. Middleton, and by turning to some of the servants, and saying, "Mind you have some bullets ready."

Lieut. C. H. Middleton, of 8th L.C., charged in addition to the charges originally preferred against him as follows:—

First Additional Charge.—For having at Mhow, on July 5, 1851, being then and there under arrest, entered the mess compound of 8th L.C. in defiance of an express prohibition from Maj. E. Down, his commanding officer, as communicated to him by Lieut. J. G. Cookson, adj. of 8th L.C., in a letter bearing date May 28, 1851, thereby leaving his confinement before he was set at liberty by proper authority.

Second Additional Charge.—For conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having at the time and place set forth in the first additional charge, in consequence of Appao, mess servant in the employ of the mess of the 8th L.C., refusing to comply with his (Lieut. C. H. Middleton's) demand for brandy, which the mess servants had been ordered not to supply to him, assaulted and ill-treated the said Appao, by striking him with a stick a violent blow on the arm.

Finding.—Guilty of the first charge.

Not Guilty of the second charge.

Guilty of the first additional charge.

Guilty of the second additional charge, with the exception of the word "violent."

Sentence.—To be cashiered.

Recommendation.—The Court, having performed its duty in awarding the sentence laid down for such serious offences as being drunk on duty and breaking his arrest, beg now most urgently and respectfully to bring the following extenuating circumstances to the favourable and merciful consideration of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief.

With regard to the first charge, it appears that the prisoner had but lately (the previous day) come off the sick report, and it is not improbable that he might in that debilitated state have been (as Major Down states) suddenly and unexpectedly overcome by liquor, without having in any way exceeded.

In reference to the first additional charge, there is no doubt that the prisoner did, by entering the mess compound, break (in point of law) his arrest; still the Court are of opinion, that in so doing, he did not wilfully and of malice prepense contemplate flying in the face of military authority.

Approved and Confirmed.

(Signed) R. ARMSTRONG, Lieut.-Genl.

Head-Quarters, Madras, Oct. 23, 1851.

Remarks.—In this case I find no evidence from which it can reasonably be concluded that Lieut. Middleton was in a debilitated state of health likely to be overcome by liquor, without having in any way exceeded, as suggested by the court, nor does he offer any such excuse for himself. It is deposed to by Major Down, that he, Lieut. Middleton, was almost speechless, he could scarcely articulate, and was totally incapacitated for the performance of any duty. He was overcome very suddenly and was perfectly inoffensive.

The recommendation of the court has imposed upon me the painful necessity of alluding to the intemperate habits of Lieut. Middleton, which have been so marked as to occasion special reports being heretofore addressed to H. E. the C.-in-C. regarding these degrading habits, which have been so long persisted in as to leave no reasonable hope, that if clemency was extended to Lieut. Middleton, he would renounce the vice which has placed him in his present unfortunate position. I feel therefore compelled to confirm the sentence pronounced by the court.

There are some points of discipline connected with this trial upon which my opinion will be communicated hereafter to the proper quarter.

(Signed) R. ARMSTRONG, Lieut.-Genl.

Lieutenant C. H. Middleton is to be struck off the strength of the army from the date of the publication of this order at Saugor, which is to be reported to the adjutant-general of the army.

RIOTS AMONGST THE NATIVES.

We regret to have to notice that further disturbances have occurred here amongst the Mahomedans and Parsees in the native town. On the 22nd and 23rd ult. serious riots took place, during which a number of persons of both sects were severely injured by missiles thrown at them. One of them, a Parsee, has since died. The troops had to be called out to the assistance of the police, and 100 men of one of the native regiments have been stationed in Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy's meeting-house ever since these latter disturbances commenced. A body of the Poona irregular horse has been ordered down immediately from Seroor, and will be found of great service in preserving order in the town. Mobs always dread coming into collision with a mounted force. A few days ago a meeting was held at the residence of Mr. Lumsden, Secretary to Government in the General and Judicial Departments, at which the principal men of the Mahomedan and Parsee communities met together in the presence of the Chief Justice (Sir Erskine Perry), Mr. Lumsden, and several other European gentlemen, for the purpose of endeavouring to effect a reconciliation between the two sects. The cazee (high priest of the Mahomedans) having intimated that if the Parsee editor of the Goozerattee newspaper, in which the memoir and portrait of Mahomed was published, which had led to the feud between these parties, would offer an explanation or apology for having caused the publication, the Mahomedans would be satisfied, and live in peace for the future with their fellow-townsmen, the Parsees; this was agreed to, and the editor having made the amend sought for, in the presence of the assembled heads of both castes, they now seem reconciled to each other, and there has been no exhibition of a feeling of animosity on the part of either sect ever since.—B. Times, Dec. 3.

The following is the explanation or apology of Byramjee Cursetjee, through the instrumentality of whose journal (the Chitra Dnyan Durpan) the recent commotions arose:—

"We stated several times that the likeness of Huzrut Mahomed, and a brief account of his life, which we published in our paper of the 23rd September, 1851, and completed in the subsequent issue, were not intended by us to hurt the feelings of the Mahomedans; but still we find they consider that we published the likeness and account to offend their feelings. We, therefore, beg to state again, for the satisfaction of all, that we considered, and do still consider, Huzrut Mahomed to be one of the most remarkable persons that ever lived, and that we published a brief account of his life for our readers; and the likeness we published was copied from the work of Simon Ockly. We did not intend to offend the feelings of the Mahomedans by this publication, nor did we even think that it contained anything offensive. Nevertheless, as they have taken offence at it, we beg to express our regret and deference.

"(Signed)

BYRAMJEE CURSETJEE,

"Editor of the Chitra Dnyan Durpan."

Numbers of Mussulman rioters have been fined or imprisoned; and twenty-three of them have been committed to take their trial at the Criminal Sessions. A Parsee has died from injuries inflicted on him. Three Mahomedans are in custody on suspicion of having been among those who caused the death of this unfortunate Parsee.

THE LONDON MAIL of October the 24th arrived at Bombay November 25th, per Zenobia.

THE AFFAIRS OF BARODA have occupied the attention of the Bombay papers for many weeks past. Investigations arising out of a case of great atrocity, the details of which have repeatedly been laid before our readers, discover a state of corruption and awaken an amount of suspicion of British honesty grievous to contemplate. The widow of a wealthy banker, left heir to nearly a million sterling of money, was stripped of her possessions by the manager of the house,—robbed of her child,—cast into prison, and pronounced an adulteress and a swindler. Her husband's house was under the protection of the British Government, to whom she applied for redress in vain, until Col. Outram, in 1850, took up the case and found every one of the allegations made by her borne out by proof. In the course of the inquiry it appeared that the native officers of the Residency had accepted of bribes and misled their principal by false interpretations,—that vast sums of money had been sent to Bombay for the purposes of corruption, and that the secrets of Government had by this means been disclosed and transmitted to Baroda. The names of men high in office were brought into suspicion, and the whole mischief aggravated by that mysterymongering and procrastination in which it is the delight of Government to indulge. Meanwhile, Government are said to be highly dissatisfied that inquiries should have been pushed so far, and that they are greatly alarmed at the threatened results. —Bombay Times, Dec. 3.

DR. HARDING, Bishop of Bombay, was formally inducted into his diocese on Sunday, the 30th November. A very large congregation assembled to witness the ceremony, as well as to hear his lordship preach his first sermon in India. Carriages commenced arriving at the doors of the cathedral as early as a quarter past ten, and before eleven o'clock every seat in the church was occupied. We noticed among the congregation, the Governor, the two members of Council, the Chief Justice, Messrs. Warden and Le Geyt, judges of the Sudder Court; Brigadier Wyllie, Colonel Shortt, and Colonel Blood, together with the leading members of the civil and military services, and most of the other gentlemen in Bombay. His lordship delivered a very excellent sermon from Luke, c. i. v. 17.—B. Telegraph, Dec. 3.

ENSIGN ROBINSON.—We regret to announce the death, under melancholy circumstances, of Ensign L. V. Robinson, of the 14th regiment Bombay N.I. Mr. Robinson was doing duty with the detachment stationed at Tana. On Monday he came to Bombay, and having purchased poison, the description of which we have not heard, he again started for Tana, and on his way in the gharee swallowed the poison, which we hear proved fatal before he reached his destination. Mr. Robinson was the senior ensign of his regiment, and had only been three years and a half in the country: doubtless the deceased must have been labouring under an aberration of intellect.—Ibid. Oct. 31.

EDUCATION.—The Bombay Board of Education have made their ninth report. The board, in reviewing the past ten years, speak with considerable cheerfulness of the progress manifested during that period. But at the same time, the report in the most explicit terms declares, that it is impossible "to carry out the least extension of the system of education," or "remedy those obvious defects which every one can perceive," without receiving an addition to the Rs. 1,25,000 which the Bombay government annually devotes to educational purposes. The state schools in Bombay educate between twelve and thirteen thousand boys.

THE ORIENTAL BANK has laid before the shareholders the auditors' report on the state of its affairs throughout India and the east, in which the auditors congratulate the proprietors of the bank upon the success of its business during the past year. "Their dividends have been paid out of profits, and notwithstanding the heavy losses at the Bombay Branch, the reserved capital of 112,000*l.* remains intact. The corporate character the bank is about to receive will add materially to convenience in working it, will secure the proprietors against the possibility of ruinous loss under any circumstances, and will afford the hope and promise (with increased safety) of enlarged action, extended usefulness, and improved dividends."

AN EXTENSIVE FIRE broke out in the store-houses of the P. and O. Steam Navigation Company, in the dock-yard at Mazagon, yesterday morning, by which stores, belonging to the company, to the value of from 15,000*l.* to 20,000*l.*, were destroyed. The cause of the fire has not been ascertained. The goods consumed by the fire were only partially insured. The buildings in which they were stored have been completely destroyed; these latter are valued at 7,500*l.*, and belonged to Mirza Mahomed Ali Khan, the owner of the dock-yard, from whom they were rented by the P. and O. Company.—B. Times, Dec. 3.

RETIREMENTS.—Alex. Nesbit Shaw, Esq., a civil servant of the 2nd class, and now on furlough, has retired from the service. Capt. C. W. Maude, 18th N.I., has also retired from the Hon. Company's service on pension.

CEYLON.

Advices from the environs of Kandy inform us that most planters are now in the middle of gathering. On the whole the season has been a very favourable one, much better indeed than last year. From what our informant hears, he is induced to suppose that the outturn will be rather under than above the average. Labour is moderately plentiful in most places, but complaints are made in some localities of a short-coming. Probably as the lower estates are well on with picking, the spare labour will resort to more distant and higher localities.—Ceylon Times, Nov. 17.

OVERTHROW OF THE MANCHOO DYNASTY.—Important intelligence has just been received at Darjeeling, through a Lama, who came in twenty days from Lassa to the Sikkim Durbar, that the rebels have been steadily advancing towards the north, and that, when they approached Peking, it was deemed advisable for the present emperor to quit the capital and retire. He is stated to have abdicated the throne about eight weeks ago, and the leader of the rebellion, a descendant of the old Ming dynasty, immediately ascended it. There is said to have been no engagement in the neighbourhood of Peking; the Manchoo dynasty had lost the prestige of its power, and yielded at once to the force of circumstances. How far this intelligence is to be relied on it is impossible to say; we give it on the authority of the Lama, and as it has reached us. But we well remember that on a former occasion the intelligence received at Darjeeling by the land route from China, and which had anticipated the news by sea, was fully corroborated at a subsequent period, and there is nothing in the circumstances of the empire to give an air of incredibility to the present report, however startling it may appear.—Friend of India, Nov. 20.

AUSTRALIA.

The weather during the past week has been very unfavourable for mining purposes, and many of the miners have been flooded out; the yield has therefore not been so productive as it would otherwise have proved: still a considerable quantity has found its way into town. The escort brought down 2,611 ounces. There has also arrived by the three mails since our last report about 5,000l. worth—making the total received this week 13,500l., independent of any that may have come in by private hands. Many instances of extraordinary success might be given, and some instances of failure; but the following being a peculiar case is worthy of note. Five men from Camden worked for one month on the mountains at the Turon in dry diggings. The first three weeks they were unsuccessful, but the fourth week fortune favoured them, and they received a check for 509l., as the result of their four weeks' work. Intelligence has reached us of the discovery of gold in the neighbouring colony of Victoria.—Sydney Morning Herald, Aug. 30.

EASTERN PIRATES.—Mr. Cobden tells us that the pirates in the Eastern seas do not attack European vessels. Upon this point, Mr. G. T. Braine, a ship-owner, an East-India and China merchant, deputy chairman of the Eastern Steam Navigation Company, and personally conversant with the navigation of those seas, in his evidence before the Steam Committee, stated that he had seen something of the Borneo and other Malay pirates. "Do they attack European vessels there?" he was asked. He replied: "I was once nearly attacked there; we should have been attacked if the wind had not sprung up; we were surrounded by a number of boats, which were preparing to attack us." Q. "Are you aware that high authorities are of opinion that there are no pirates?"—A. "I have heard that." Q. "Do you concur?"—A. "Certainly not."

LITERATURE AND SCIENCE.

The Chinese Repository for April last contains a copious review of a very curious work, the Ying Hwen Chi-lioh, or "General Survey of the Circuit of the Seas," by Su Ki-yu, the present lieutenant-governor of the province of Fuh kien, printed in Fuh-chow-foo, in the year 1848. This is a universal geography, comprehending not only descriptions of the various countries of the earth, but sketches of their political history, the manners and customs of their inhabitants, &c. Considering the difficulties which a Chinese author must encounter in consulting works in European languages, and the prejudices which cling to him, the details given by Su Ki-yu, making due allowance for some natural and amusing errors, are surprisingly accurate. This may be attributed principally to the opportunities enjoyed by the author, who has been judge in Canton province, and commissioner at Amoy, of communicating with foreigners. He is described by the Rev. Mr. Abeel as "the most inquisitive Chinese of high rank he had met;" and Su Ki-yu, in his Preface, acknowledges his obligations to "an American named Abeel, with whom he became acquainted at Amoy, who was a scholar, well acquainted with Western knowledge, and able to converse in the Fuh-kien dialect."

The merit of the work is the greater because the geographical knowledge of the Chinese, generally speaking, is very limited. Their maps of the world are laughably incorrect, and the reviewer states that "the ignorance of otherwise intelligent Chinese upon geographical subjects, even of their own country, is surprising; in fact, geography, as a study, is quite unknown to them." Su Ki-yu had, therefore, to grope his way in the dark, and, consequently, he frequently stumbled.

Thus he gives a very correct account of Rhode Island, in the United States of America, its history, the date when it was acquired by England, &c.; but he then quotes from the work of a Jesuit an account of the Colossus of Rhodes (which he supposes to be the same island), and ridicules the story as "extremely nonsensical."

One of the obstacles met with by Su Ki-yu, and by every Chinese writer who treats of foreign countries, consists in the utter incongruity between the Chinese written language and every other, which renders it impossible to express the sounds of the latter by the characters of the former. The slightest variety of pronunciation of a proper name occasions the use of a different character. Su Ki-yu, who laments this inconvenience, instances the name of Persia, which, he says, in Chinese, is written Po-sze, Peh-si, Pau-shié, and Pa-shié. "I once tried this name," he adds, "by taking it from the mouth of a foreigner himself, who called it Peh-urh-cheh; but when he wrote, it was Pi-urh-si." He further notices the discrepancy between the pronunciation of proper names by foreigners of different nations. Thus, he says, Maine is pronounced by the English "Mien" (written by one character), whereas the Portuguese call it "Mi-ni," which requires two characters, neither like the other. Then he found that the true names of foreign countries were different from those adopted in Chinese books; thus Sui, "Sweden," should be (he says) Sui-tien. "If I had undertaken to change them," he observes, "the reader would not have recognized the names; so I have left them as they are usually written." Moreover, he experienced great difficulty in expressing the names of foreign persons and places in Chinese characters, of which eight or nine were sometimes required. "Many names, intended to be pronounced together, have nothing whereby the reader can tell where to stop; lines have, therefore, been drawn at their side, and open punctuation-marks inserted, to catch the eye."

These embarrassments will give the English reader some idea of the impediments in the way of the accurate rendering of Chinese writings into English, and especially of English books into Chinese.

Su Ki-yu, in the commencement, gives a brief statement of the elementary parts of geographical science, and an explanation of terms, describing the earth as ball-shaped, the equator as the "Carnation Road," the ecliptic as the "Yellow Road," and the Arctic Circle as the "Black Road." He confesses that he (like the rest of his countrymen) had till recently believed that the south pole, instead of being surrounded by ice, was so hot that "the stones crackled and gold melted."

He has devoted four books to an account of the countries of Europe, the names of which he has printed with all their synonyms, presenting a formidable list of characters. Of the people of Europe he gives the following description:—

"The Europeans are tall and large, and very white, with high noses, deep eyes, and yellow pupils (some have black); their full beards grow quite up to the temples, or come down under the ears, some having the hair straight like the Chinese, others curly like a dragon's whiskers. Some shave the whole of it off, some leave it all on, and others again allow the moustache or the whiskers to grow as we do, there being no restriction whether they be old or young. They trim off the hair when it is longer than two or three inches; many have the hair and beard of a yellow or sandy colour, whence the Dutch were called by us Hung-mau, or red-haired people, in the days of Ming; and afterwards the English were so called, but all Europeans have the same kind of hair. A few have black hair, and these have black eyes. The hair and eyes of females are like the men's. Some one has said that when Europeans live a long time in China, their hair, beard, and eyes, gradually change to black. The aspect of both sexes is much like that of the Chinese. The head-covering of the men is flat, round, and hollow, made of felt or cotton, with a narrow rim, four or five inches high; when they meet a friend, it is the custom to take it off. The collars and neckcloths are broad, the sleeves narrow, and the waists tight, reaching to the middle; the trousers are tight about the hips, but the outer coat is rather loose, reaching to the knees, with the lappels left open; the inner garments are of cotton, the outer of woolen; in winter they do not use furs, nor wear grasscloth in summer. Leather shoes and boots are both worn. Women permit all their hair to grow, binding it up in a knot, something like the Chinese. Their dress has narrow sleeves, fits close to the body, and has no neck-collar; it permits half the bosom and shoulders to be seen in front, and behind the neck is open five or six inches; when they go abroad, they put a broad collar over to hide the neck. The skirts are long, and sweep the ground; there are five or six of them fastened to the waist, one above the other. Both sexes love cleanliness, and daily bathe themselves in tubs."

Of their religion, he says:—

"Since the days of Hân, all the nations of Europe have followed the religion of the Lord of Heaven, whose head lives at Rome, and who held in his hands the power to elevate or depress them. About A.D. 1500, a man named Luther, in Germany, set up the religion of Jesus, and their princes and people became enemies, and fought with each other, chiefly on account of this religion. Still he who is called Lord of Heaven is Jesus; their books are the same, but they explain them differently. The (Tien-chü-kidu) Romanists worship the cross and make images of Jesus, but the others do neither; otherwise the customs of their religion are much alike."

We conclude with a few extracts relating to England, "the most powerful of European nations," the history of which Su relates from the time when "a tribe of aborigines called Celts dwelt in the country, who were driven out by northern savages called Gauls, when Cæsar, a great general from Rome, conquered England, making it a colony of Italy for several hundred years." His account of "the Government of England" is as follows:—

"There are two premiers, one who alone governs the internal affairs of the state, and one who manages the foreign relations. Besides these, there are high ministers, one over the treasury, one paymaster, one superintendent of trade, one chief justice, one keeper of the seal, one who controls Indian affairs, and one chief admiral, each of whom has many assistants. In the metropolis is a public house, divided into two halls, one called the Chamber for the Nobility, the other the Chamber for the Gentry: in the former, the noble and honourable men, with the teachers of Jesus' religion (bishops), collect; in the latter, the men of talent and learning, who have been selected from the people. The monarch commands the ministers respecting public business, and they announce it in the Chamber of Lords, where all collect to deliberate upon it, and see whether it is legal or not, and decide if it can pass; it is then carried into the Chamber of the Gentry, and if the whole body agree thereto it is carried into effect, if not, the matter is dropped, and nothing more said of it. Whenever the people have any advantageous point they wish to carry, or grievance they wish to remove, it is first introduced into the Chamber of Gentry, and after a debate upon it, if it is agreed to, it is carried up to the Chamber of Lords; when the Lords have deliberated thereon, it is taken to the ministers, and then announced to the sovereign; if he disagree, a rescript proclaims that it cannot be allowed. Parties among the people who are at issue, also carry their causes before the Chamber of Gentry, and plead them; and after full deliberation, an answer is made out and carried up to the Lords, where it is settled. If one of the gentry commits a crime, his case is tried by all the gentry assembled, and he is not imprisoned with the common people. In general, all cases of punishment, fining, making war, quelling rebellion, &c., are discussed and decided by the Lords; but matters relating to diminishing or levying taxes, or fixing the national expenditure, are all settled by the Gentry."

The whole country, he says, "professes the religion of Jesus, whose book is called Shing-Shu, or 'the Holy Book,' and the people carry small volumes of it in the breast-pocket."

The reviewer observes upon the work, that, "considering the author's education and position, it is a noble monument of his research, candour, and learning, and may be regarded as one of the first fruits of the impetus given to the Chinese mind by the war with England. It will, we think, do much to destroy the conceit, and dissipate the ignorance, of the rulers and scholars of China. We have heard natives of Canton express their surprise at its statements, and ask with incredulous wonder, if what they read was true."

Professor Westergaard has laid before the Bombay Asiatic Society proofs that the Pehlivi is actually no language of antiquity, but merely modern Persian in a disguised form.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON,

SATURDAY, January 3, 1852.

OUR customary review of the events of the past year connected with British India might, upon the present occasion, be pretermitted; there is, in fact, scarcely any event to review. Mail after mail has borne hither the same unvarying tidings of continued tranquillity in those vast possessions, where different nations, of various races and discordant creeds, seem to repose in content and peace, as one united family, under the auspices of our Government; nor does any cloud, however small, loom in the horizon, likely to trouble their political atmosphere. Recent events in Europe, which may disturb the relations between the states of that continent, and consequently embroil the Imperial Government, are more ominous to the interests of India than any tokens discernible in its domestic condition.

The revolution accomplished in France has taken every one by surprise. A bolder stroke of state-policy, all circumstances considered, was, perhaps, never attempted than that which has been executed by Louis Napoleon. Its success may be in some degree ascribed to its singular audacity. The political coups even of the great Napoleon were not so daring. They were preceded by preparatory encroachments, by visible approximations, by symptoms which, whilst they denoted their advent, facilitated their execution. His nephew may claim the distinction, whatever it be, of having changed in an instant a representative constitution, of which he was merely the temporary minister, into a military despotism, annihilating at once the legislature, the courts, and the press, and placing in his own hands the absolute control of the French people. A far more modest demonstration cost Charles X. his throne, and subverted the dynasty.

Apart from certain incidents of his position, it is impossible not to admire the vigour displayed in this act of Louis Napoleon, the skill with which all his combinations were contrived, and the masterly manner in which they were carried out. The whole scheme bears upon its very face the impress of one mind and one head. Nothing seems to have been forgotten in the calculations; everything was provided for, and the blood unhappily shed during the brief agony of a strife in which none but the most worthless portion of the people appear to have taken part, was far less than could have been anticipated.

Public opinion seems to be yet divided in respect to this extraordinary stretch of usurpation, and it is pro-dent, as well as just, to wait the further development of his policy before we pronounce a definitive judgment upon the conduct of the French dictator. The measures whereby in such cases supreme power is irregularly acquired, form but the initial act of a great drama, which must be scanned and criticised as a whole. In the annals of the world, there has never been a political change of an organic character which, in all its parts, especially its precautionary expedients, could bear the application of a very rigid moral test. Hume, in treating of political systems, observes that, "as the obligation of justice is founded entirely on the interests of society, it is evident that, when the execution of justice would be attended with very pernicious consequences, that virtue must be suspended, and give place to public utility in such extraordinary and pressing emergencies: the maxim, fiat justitia, ruat cælum, is apparently false, and, by sacrificing the end to the means, shows a preposterous idea of the subordination of duties." It is understood that Louis Napoleon bases his coup d'état upon this principle, and it will be for him hereafter to make out satisfactorily the existence of an emergency that justified the violation of oaths, the repudiation of obligations, the suspension of personal liberty, and the assumption of an arbitrary, unlimited authority sustained by military force.

His position, it must be acknowledged by all, was peculiar and critical. Whether or not he has exaggerated the dangers of a demagogic conspiracy, its existence cannot be denied, any more than his duty to provide against the mischiefs with which the cause of order was menaced by it. The National Assembly, clothed with powers almost co-ordinate with his own, and, though divided into sections, each too weak to control the others, having combined against him, intent upon thwarting all his measures, and destroying that unity of action upon which the safety of the state might depend, it was easy for the President to foresee that a collision between them was inevitable, and the consequences of such a collision, preceded by the approaches usual in political strategy, must have been social disorganization, and a long and sanguinary civil war. This result was doubtless looked for by les Rouges. If Louis Napoleon had adhered strictly to the obligations imposed upon him by the constitution, and passively endured the affronts and invasions of the Assembly, isolated as he was, he must have sunk before it. If he had relinquished power, what person or party could have made such use of it as the exigency of affairs demanded? It must be remembered, that the question was not one of hereditary title, divine right, passive obedience, or in which the interests of an individual or a family were involved; the safety of the country was imperilled, and, if the danger was real, had Louis Napoleon been unwilling or unable to meet the crisis, all the subsequent torments endured by his country would have been attributed to him.

But, after all, the question ought to be decided, not by abstract reasoning, but by the opinion of the country, which is the best and only legitimate judge in a matter so intimately affecting its own interests. The first step taken by Louis Napoleon, after his seizure of the supreme power, was to appeal to the people; although exceptions have been taken to the mode in which this appeal was made, those exceptions appear rather formal, than real. In effect, the President has asked the whole constituency of France, after sufficient time given for deliberation, whether they approve of his acts, and whether they desire that he should retain the direction of the government,—aye or no. The French people, by ballot-voting, have answered the appeal in the affirmative, not merely by a majority, but by a majority of twelve to one. Making every possible deduction, on the grounds, some of them refined and speculative rather than substantial, assigned by the journalists of this country, no one will venture to aver that public opinion in France has not pronounced decidedly in favour of the measures of Louis Napoleon, and consented to the prolongation of his authority. The French people seem to have been incessantly oscillating between the two extreme forms of government; it may be said of them as Tacitus said of the Roman people, "nec totam servitalem nec totam libertatem pati possunt."

If, then, there are cases in which, according to political writers, acts like his may be justified by extraordinary and pressing emergencies; if, prima facie, such an emergency has presented itself in France; and if the French people have ratified and approved of his acts,—recognizing the doctrine, that justice, when its execution would be pernicious, must give place to public utility,—Louis Napoleon is entitled at least to a fair hearing and a further trial. He has, however, placed himself in a situation of deep responsibility. If his future career shall show that he has been actuated by a pure regard for the public weal, and has risked character and life for the sake of his country, he will take his place in history beside those rulers who have deserved well of their people; but if it shall appear that he has been moved by the selfish impulse of private ambition; that he has abused the powers intrusted to him, employing hypocrisy, perjury, and force to attain his personal ends; success will not extenuate the reproach that must cling to his name, whilst the blood spilt in so criminal an enterprise, and by which that success was purchased, will sit heavy on his soul.

A SUBJECT has been recently discussed in our columns, by several Correspondents, which eminently deserves consideration at the approaching revision of our Indian administration; namely, the alleged deficiency, on the part of the Company's servants generally, both civil and military, in a knowledge of the native languages. That a competent amount of this knowledge is an essential qualification for the public service in India it would be unreasonable to deny, and is not, indeed, disputed; the only points in question are, whether it is or is not actually possessed; if not, whether it is acquirable.

Our Correspondent "A Mahomedan Moonshee,"—who, we may observe, is what his signature denotes,—enjoying peculiar facilities for making himself well acquainted with the fact, having, though a native of India, a perfect command of the English language, declares that "he never met with an Englishman who could correctly read, write, or speak any of the languages current there," adducing instances which prove the deficiencies exhibited by some of our civil and military officers passed as proficient in the native languages, who, though filling important posts, were unable to make themselves intelligible in Hindustani,—the easiest and commonest medium of communication with the people; and he asserts that "endless confusion, trouble, and injustice" are occasioned by these deficiencies, dishonest native functionaries in the courts and cutcherries taking advantage of the magistrates' ignorance to exact bribes from the suitors.

This statement was commented upon by another Correspondent, "M. G.," who urged, with great show of reason, that no civil or military servant ought to be employed in India until he was thoroughly conversant in the native languages;—a proposition which called forth a communication from "A Civilian," in reply to both "M. G." and the "Moonshee," but who does not appear to us to have satisfactorily met the allegations of either.

The "Civilian," rather adroitly, supposes the extreme case of a civil servant located in the south of India (where there is a great diversity of spoken languages), who is changed from place to place, at each of which a different language is employed, and he enumerates no fewer than eight of these dialects, to acquire which would occupy the officer's whole time, whereas "the civil servants have no leisure beyond what is required for meals and exercise, and many not even for the latter." Our Correspondent seems, indeed, to concede the existence of the deficiency, which he endeavours to palliate by suggesting that "the languages are all so nearly related to each other, that an acquaintance with one enables a careful officer to detect an interpreter in any false play;" and that, though "no one will deny the advantage to civilians of an intimate acquaintance with the languages of India, many of the most eminent of the civil service were unacquainted with the vernaculars of the countries where they have served, and where their memories are most revered." Neither of these suggestions is very consolatory.

The allegations of the "Mahomedan Moonshee," however, related particularly to those parts of British India where Hindustani is the current medium of intercourse, and he complained of the deficiency of both civil and military officers in this one universal dialect,—"a colloquial knowledge of which," the Chairman of the Court of Directors correctly told the cadets at Addiscombe the other day, "is by no means difficult of attainment."

The main plea of "A Civilian" is the "insurmountable difficulty in an Englishman's way to the acquisition of even one language so perfectly as to pass the ordeal of educated criticism." But not to insist upon the fact, that so high a degree of knowledge is not indispensable, such an amount only being required as will enable the governors of India to discharge their obligations to the people, we can see no sound reason why the former cannot be acquired by a proper preparatory discipline before appointment, and a little diligence afterwards. If the gift of a writership were made contingent upon a critical acquaintance with at least one language spoken in India, we believe there would be no dearth of qualified candidates. It cannot be pretended that Oriental tongues are more difficult to be mastered by Englishmen belonging to the class from whence the civil servants are taken, than those of Europe by natives of India; yet, as the "Moonshee" aptly remarks, "at the English-Indian College, young native boys are able to read, write, and speak English as well as Englishmen," whilst the example of the "Moonshee" himself furnishes still more direct evidence: his letter, which is his own composition, is written in English as pure, correct, and idiomatic, as (without disparagement) that of the "Civilian." Again: what are the interpreters, the highly objectionable channels of communication now employed between European magistrates and the people, but natives of India conversant with the English language?

The case, otherwise, would stand thus: it is of essential importance that the Government functionaries in British India should be able to communicate freely with the natives in their own tongue; for some reason or other, Europeans cannot attain a sufficient familiarity with the native languages to enable them to do so; but natives can learn to read, write, and speak English, as well as Englishmen. It would follow irresistibly from this state of things, that a measure should be adopted which has been often pressed, and is strongly recommended by other considerations, namely, the more extensive employment of natives of India in the public service.

We do not, however, as already said, share in the opinion of "A Civilian," that there are insurmountable obstacles in the way of acquiring an Indian language,—especially so simple a dialect as the Hindustani,—perfectly, by military as well as civil servants. The system of changing functionaries from district to district, compelling them to study language after language, if it really exists, ought to be put a stop to: all the advantages, if there be any, attending these repeated removals, should be sacrificed to the paramount object of enabling the ministers of the Government to listen to the complaints and redress the grievances of the people, which must be impracticable so long as the parties have no common medium of intercourse.

We repeat that this is a subject which demands consideration: it is with this conviction that we have mooted it. In what manner the object in view, the remedy of the evil, can be best attained,—whether by imposing conditions upon the exercise of patronage, by the improvement of the educational establishments at home and abroad, or by a much larger infusion of native agency into the Indian Administration,—is a question by no means difficult to decide, if there be sufficient ground for believing that a remedy is needed,—in other words, that the allegations of "A Mahomedan Moonshee" are not without foundation.

LAW.

ADMIRALTY COURT, DEC. 16.

The Bentinck.—This was a suit promoted by three sets of salvors, belonging to four vessels, the Fleurdelis, the Mangalore, the William Ackers, and the Ann Jenkins, to obtain compensation for services rendered, on the 30th and 31st of May, 1850, off Point de Galle, to the Bentinck, a steamer of 1,800 tons burden and 520-horse power, the property of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, on her passage from Calcutta to this country for repairs. Her boilers were leaky, and, having touched at Ceylon to take in coals, the water increased, owing to her topsides being dry from exposure to the climate. The result was, that the stokers were unable to feed the furnaces and keep up the fires, so that the engines could not be worked. Application was made to the vessels lying at Point de Galle, and several men were sent to assist in pumping her. The Fleurdelis and the Mangalore also lent some pumps, by means of which the water was so far reduced as to allow the engines again to be brought into action, and the vessel returned into the harbour. The service lasted about twenty-six hours. On the part of the owners of the Bentinck, it was not denied that a salvage service had been rendered, but it was contended that it amounted to little more than manual labour. The estimated value of the steamer was 30,000*l*.

Dr. Lushington decreed to the owners of the Mangalore 145*l*. for loss of freight; to the owners of the Fleurdelis and the Mangalore, 10*l*. each for the use of pumps; and then awarded to the actual salvors on board the two last-named vessels 300*l*.; to those belonging to the William Ackers, 100*l*.; and to the crew of the Ann Jenkins, 80*l*.

EAST-INDIA HOUSE.

A Quarterly General Court of Proprietors was held on the 17th December, at the Company's house in Leadenhall Street; John Shepherd, Esq., Chairman of the Court of Directors, in the chair.

The Chairman acquainted the Court that the warrants for the payment of the half yearly dividends would be ready for delivery on the 6th of January.

SURVEYS—ROADS IN INDIA.

Col. Dickenson said, before he proceeded with the motion of which he had given notice, he wished to call the attention of the Court to the subject of the surveys of India, and to ask a question of the Chairman in reference to a promise which he made when he (Col. Dickenson) introduced that subject on a former occasion to the Court. The Chairman, on that occasion (25th September, 1850), "assured the Court that no one could be more anxious than himself and colleagues to afford the public the benefit of the surveys so long ago made of a considerable portion of the Bombay presidency, the delay in giving more timely publicity to which had been in great measure occasioned by a less perfect triangulation for connecting them with the great survey of India than had been subsequently deemed necessary; while the other information moved for, and so necessary for removing all doubts as to the nature of our principal communications throughout the Bombay presidency, was in course of preparation for being laid before the public." It was now a year and a half since this assurance was given, and the question he wished to ask was, whether the maps were now ready? His object was, that every person travelling in India should possess as accurate a knowledge of the country through which he had to travel as was enjoyed by persons travelling in this country. The maps which he had hitherto seen were by no means in a complete state, and were calculated to mislead.

The Chairman said, he was not aware that the question would have been put to him, otherwise he would have been prepared to answer it. He believed that the map more particularly referred to by the hon. and gallant proprietor was not quite complete; but he could assure the Court, that the Court of Directors were anxious to afford to every proprietor the fullest possible information it was in their power to furnish, with a view to enable him to ascertain the nature of his position while travelling in any part of British India; and he begged to repeat, that every consideration should be given by the Court of Directors to the subject.

INTERNAL COMMUNICATIONS IN GUZERAT.

Col. Dickenson then rose, in pursuance of notice, to submit the following motion to the Court:—

"That it be suggested, for the consideration of the Bombay Government, whether the same systematic arrangement which has so long been acted upon in the north-west provinces of Bengal, for the repair and extension of the communications in the interior of districts, by a cess on the amount of the Government jumma, or tax, levied and appropriated exclusively for that purpose, the disbursements of this cess being managed by a local committee, might not with equal advantage to the public be introduced throughout Guzerat."

The hon. and gallant proprietor said that, for the all-important object of affording to the inhabitants of Guzerat those means of internal communication, for want of which the great body of cultivators, and those engaged in the transit trade, had so long been compelled to dispose of their produce and merchandise at a ruinous disadvantage, and with the paramount object, it might be thought, in a national point of view, of enabling British India, on the occurrence of any great commercial crisis, through the immense resources of this province, to meet the eventual demands of England for the superior species of indigenous cotton which constituted the staple of this portion, and this portion only, of Western India, he had long and most strenuously urged upon the authorities of that House, not a much greater immediate outlay upon the two main arteries on each side of the Gulf of Cambay, but the adoption of some systematic arrangement for securing to the public a more equitable share of that portion of the revenue set apart for local amelioration generally. Surrounded as their possessions in Guzerat for the most part were by states in subordinate alliance with the English Government, and in consideration of the greater length of time since they became subject to British rule, it would, he hoped, be thought that no portion of the Bombay territory could with the same convenience, and with the same claims of the native community, be selected for the small measure of consideration now solicited, to the want of which, or of some such popular infusion into the formation and councils of their municipal institutions, was, if he mistook not, mainly to be ascribed the almost utterly neglected state, as regarded internal communication, throughout that portion of the Bombay presidency to which the present motion referred; and as the measure submitted for the consideration of the Court was in accordance with that which had been in operation so long in another part of India, and upon the advantages of which Lord Auckland had pronounced so highly; and as it was no later than last year that the Madras Revenue Board recommended that an annual sum should be allotted to each district throughout that presidency for the maintenance of branch and district roads, it could not, at any rate, be hoped, be imputed to him that he had, on insufficient grounds, brought forward the present motion. Another argument in favour of giving the natives of Guzerat a more prominent share in municipal legislation was, the similar—indeed, the more extensive—boon which was seventeen years ago conferred on their brethren on the island of Bombay, which, by elevating some of the heads of castes to the dignity of justices of the peace, placed them, as it were, on a footing of equality with their fellow European subjects exercising like vocations in private life; and it must be gratifying to those persons, by whose persevering exertions (foremost among whom might be named the late Sir Charles Forbes) this tardy admission of their just claims was acquiesced in by the Legislature, that some of these gentlemen had manifested a highly commendable zeal and equal fitness in the discharge of their magisterial duties, involving, as those did, a voice in the rate of the local assessment for the repairs and improvements of the roads, as well as in all the multifarious details of its application. The hon. and gallant proprietor then proceeded to quote authorities. The first was contained in a paper which had been laid before the Court of Proprietors. The Board of Revenue, under date the 6th May, 1850, remarked to the Court of Directors, "that the want of money for road improvements, once the great difficulty, is now lessened by the liberal regard which has of late been displayed on the subject; but the want of officers to prepare for and superintend the works remains at present a serious and almost insuperable obstacle to efficient progress." The Governor of Madras, in his minute, stated that "the Board's recommendation that each district should be provided with one permanent engineer officer, was at present under consideration; also the proposition for allotting to each district an annual sum for the maintenance of the branch and district roads." The next authority was that of the Friend of India, in March last: "Not only is the corps of engineers utterly inadequate to the exigencies of the country, but with the large number of infantry officers whom Government have been obliged to draft into the department of public works, it is found impossible to make any real progress in improvements." In the Deccan, the net revenue of which amounted to 544,000*l.*, there were six collectorates and ten engineers, while in Guzerat, whose revenue was 411,000*l.*, there were but three engineers for its four collectorates. The net revenue of Scinde was only 290,000*l.*, and yet it had five engineers. It was impossible that three engineers could adequately perform the duties required of them in carrying on the works necessary for the improvement of so large a portion of country as Guzerat. In point of fact, in consequence of one or two of the engineers in Guzerat having been called upon the other day to take the charge of other duties, there remained only one officer to superintend the public works in that district. The present chief justice of Bombay, Sir Erskine Perry, speaking of Guzerat, said: "Every element of production exists in abundance, but the means of transport are so defective that the products of labour cannot be exchanged. There is, therefore, no inducement to exertion, and hence the apathy which is supposed to be an essential ingredient in the native character. Whilst riding some years ago from Surat to Broach, in one of the deep tracks which centuries had excavated, the reflection crossed my mind that, in all probability, the road was in exactly the same state as when the ancients traded to Barygaza. The rich endowments of nature, therefore, are almost thrown away on this highly favoured province, if facilities are not afforded for bringing down the bulky products of its soil to the seaboard." It is to this encouragement of facilities for export that the greatest of living authorities on political economy looks for the amelioration of this country. "In these circumstances," says Mr. Mill, "the best chance of an early development of the productive resources of India consists in the now rapid growth of its export of agricultural produce (cotton, indigo, sugar, coffee, &c.) to markets of Europe. The producers of these articles are consumers of food supplied by their fellow-agriculturists in India; and the market thus opened for surplus food will, if accompanied by good government, raise up by degrees more extended wants and desires, directed either towards European commodities, or towards things which will require for their production in India a large manufacturing population." He would next quote from a pamphlet written by a gentleman who was a resident in Guzerat a year or two ago, and who took occasion to observe upon the state of the roads in that country. That writer said: "Not a single yard of made road is to be met with in the forty-five miles between Tankaria Bunder and Baroda; neither is there any in the towns of Baroda and Jumbusir, nor in any of the villages, nor are there any attempts to improve the roadways that exist. The main road from Jumbusir to Tankaria Bunder affords an instance of the little care that is taken of them. Within a furlong of the gate of Jumbusir, for a length of 200 yards, it is covered with water, about 18 inches in depth, until the month of December, and longer. It is thus nearly impassable for carts, and forms one of the many obstructions to the trade of Tankaria. This is close to a city containing 11,000 inhabitants, and no efforts are made to improve it; but rather the contrary, for it is becoming worse by digging for kankar and earth to make bricks. Most of the roads are so narrow that carts can only pass each other at certain places; it is therefore no uncommon occurrence, at the latter end of the year, for a road to be blocked up for an hour or so by a cart sticking fast. Those across the black soil consist generally only of a rut for each wheel, in which also the bullocks walk. In places that have been covered long with water, owing to the regular stepping of these animals, the surface seems as if it had been ploughed into transverse furrows; in other places, the whole surface is covered with little detached knolls of earth and grass." Mr. Berkley and Mr. Coneybeare were also authorities to which he might refer on this subject. It had been said, in defence of neglecting the roads in Guzerat, that there were no materials in that part of India out of which roads could be constructed. Now on this subject he might refer to the opinions expressed by eminent geologists who bore testimony to the contrary, and stated that the country abounded in very valuable materials for making roads. He would, however, content himself with quoting the opinion of a native of Bombay, Meerwanjee Hormajee. In a letter written by that individual, on 3rd Dec. 1839, he said: "I beg respectfully to bring to your notice the very great advantage that would arise by the formation of a road between Broach and Surat, as it would materially facilitate the shipment of the cotton and other articles of commerce, the boats from Broach taking as much as five or six days to get to the mouth of the Nerbudda. In making this road, I presume the outlay would not be great, as many of the surrounding villages and rivulets abound with stone, particularly at Jeelattee, Saingapore, Shobone, and many others near Surat; this, with the labour of the prisoners from Broach and Surat (under proper military surveillance), would tend considerably to lessen the expense, and the road once made would require but little to keep it in repair." He mentioned last court-day, when this subject was under discussion, the great advantage which had been afforded by the system introduced by Sir Robert Grant, who delegated to the collectorate engineers a discretionary power to lay out small sums of money for the repairs of the roads on their going over their several districts. But he was sorry to find, among the papers laid before Parliament, an opinion expressed by Sir George Clerk, in a minute dated March, 1848, in condemnation of that system, showing, as it did, the mutability of things in regard to the well-being of India. Sir George Clerk in that minute said: "My objection to the continuance of the road and tank department are insuperable, because founded on its enormous waste of public money during ten years, and on its entire disregard during the whole period of that important means of fertilizing our territories, which was one of the two purposes for which ostensibly it was instituted, and which it is quite evident it has never been capable of applying." There appeared to him (Col. Dickenson) something mysterious in this. He could not of course know what Sir George Clerk might have meant; but it was very extraordinary that a measure which had worked so well when first established should have met with such condemnation from so great an authority. The hon. and gallant proprietor then adverted to the assistance which had been given to Surat by the allotment of a portion of its revenue for the support of public works, and said that the circumstances attending Surat would justify him in affirming that there were legitimate funds out of which assistance might also be afforded to Guzerat; and he particularly alluded to the fund arising out of escheats. The revenue of land which had escheated to the Government in the neighbourhood of Surat had been appropriated to the improvement of that district, and he could not imagine a more legitimate purpose to which a similar fund in Guzerat could be applied. But he would finally appeal to the Court for its support on the ground of humanity. The hon. and gallant colonel then read the following statement made by a person in high authority, in order to show the miserable condition to which the inhabitants of India were constantly reduced for want of those improvements which he was advocating. "The famine was, indeed, sore in the land. Parents were offering their children for sale, and numbers, doubtless, died unknown and unheeded. These calamitous seasons are of constant recurrence, both in Kattiawar and in the neighbouring country of Kach. Yet the preventive might be found, could or would the Government turn its attention to the subject. We collect annually 6,80,105 rupees from the province, of which no part is expended in public works. Now, the grand want is that of dams across the principal streams, to prevent them running off and falling when the rains are light. It is true that works of this nature are costly; but it is also true that the outlay is, in a few years, restored with interest. The probable advantage of such embankments was brought to my observation on one occasion clearly enough. During my stay at Rajkot, and while the drought was at its height, water being obtainable only by digging pits in the channel of the river, a most violent thunderstorm occurred, and in a few hours the bed of the stream, where children had that day been playing, was filled with a deep and furious torrent quite impassable. Could the water have been retained, its value would have been beyond calculation; as it was, it fell as rapidly as it had risen, and left us in the same distress as formerly." He hoped he had now made out a case which would satisfy the Court that he was fully justified in bringing forward the present motion. But he could not refrain from making one further quotation, from the Revenue Appendix of 1832, containing certain opinions expressed by Sir T. Maddock. That gentleman said: "I should ill discharge my duty, however, because I should act contrary to my own conviction of what is right and conformable to the honour and interests of Government, if I advocated the resumption of more lands in the territories under my control, unless I understood that Government was satisfied with the portion of the soil which we already hold, and was prepared, on resuming lands from an individual, to bestow them on another, or to keep up generally on a scale not less than the present, the lands exempt from direct assessment, and devoted to the maintenance of the higher classes of our native subjects." "And however lamentable it may be to reflect that under our sway all such monuments of public spirit are fast falling to decay, while few or none are in progress to supply their place, this is but one of the evil effects of our system of administration. The state of society is undergoing a most unfavourable change, from the loss of a respectable middle order, and apparently there is no class rising up to supply the void which the want of it creates. Out of our great towns and cities there generally stands no one between the Government and the poor potail and his poorer assamees, and those who once filled the middle space are becoming every day more impoverished, and can exert their little influence over the lower orders only by inspiring them with dissatisfaction and aversion to our rule. In this part of India, in just the same proportion that we have reduced the incomes of this class, and that our civil and military establishments are on a lower scale than those that were maintained by our predecessors, do we find that trade stagnates and declines, and that our land-revenue sinks below its former level. Of the produce of the soil, all that we expend, or that we leave others to expend in the country, increases the value of the aggregate produce, because it creates a demand for that for which the produce may be exchanged: and in the same manner that a city is rendered rich and flourishing by the incomes expended in it, will a district become so in proportion to the local expenditure, and no kind of expenditure can be so generally beneficial as that which consists in the diffusion of private income. Although, therefore, I may have added two lacs of rupees per annum to the Government rent-roll, it by no means follows that Government is a gainer to that amount. Had that sum, or had one-half of it, been left to circulate through the hands of those by whom it was formerly enjoyed, it would not have been all lost to the state, even in a pecuniary point of view, and it would politically have maintained in their former situation the class whose loss or humiliation I see reason to deplore." There was one more authority which, being of a recent date, he could not avoid referring to, as to the absolute necessity of affording greater facilities to the growers of cotton to bring their produce from the interior of the province of Guzerat to the seaboard of Bombay. The writer to whom he referred said: "But progress is wholly out of the question until we have improved means of transit from the interior; if any amount of cotton were grown stacked in the province, we should still derive no benefit from the impossibility of bringing it to the coast. The natives keep their stacks stored on the spot or in the districts, as the case may be, until some reaction takes place; whence it is that, after bad seasons for the growth of cotton, the supply that is forthcoming from the districts to meet a good demand in the market has been found to be limited only by the amount of available transport." He had now closed his case, and he trusted he had succeeded in removing from the minds of hon. proprietors the error which they appeared to labour under, in supposing that Guzerat was in the possession of ample funds, and enjoyed the facilities of good roads for internal transit. He begged to assure the Court that it was not from any factious spirit that he persisted in bringing this question forward; but feeling as he did, that he had the high sanction of Lord Auckland for the course he was pursuing, and knowing as he did that Guzerat was a deserving recipient of those moderate benefits which he asked to be conferred upon that province, he threw himself with confidence on the Court, in the hope that they would give to Guzerat a permanent share of those municipal institutions and local advantages which had been so liberally conferred on other portions of the territory of British India.

Mr. Lewin seconded the resolution, but observed that he should be sorry to see the cess collected in a manner which would be oppressive to the natives of Guzerat. With regard to the proposed local committee, he, from experience, was of opinion that no practical good would result from it. He had had the honour, some fourteen years ago, of acting at Madras in co-operation with a gentleman by whose assistance some of the finest roads in India were constructed. He had never seen any indisposition on the part of the Local Government, or of the Court of Directors, to expend money in local improvements, more especially in roads, for they must of course be as sensible as anybody that good roads were essential to the revenue. He had, however, seen a great deal of money wasted on works which were called improvements, and he should be sorry to see the Court of Directors sanction measures without seeing that they were properly carried out. Any other measures than those of the services of an able engineer would be quite insufficient for conducting public works such as were contemplated by his hon. friend, and would, in all probability, lead to a great waste of money, and afford opportunities for considerable peculation.

The Chairman.—It appears to me that my hon. and gallant friend has not said much with reference to the specific motion which he now proposes to the Court for adoption. He has dwelt, and that very much in the same language as he used in June last, upon the insufficient state of the roads in Guzerat, and has gone over the same ground, quoting several private letters addressed to him on the subject. Now the Court will remember that, on the 18th of June, I quoted the official report of the collector of Guzerat, and also the opinion of a private merchant, who had just returned from Guzerat, which went directly to contradict the statements of the hon. proprietor; and I cannot do better than read again an extract from the report of Mr. Davies, the collector, as to the state of the roads in that province. And I must say, in reference to that report, that I can only account for the different statements made by different persons, with regard to the same locality, by the supposition that some of the parties must refer to a period of three or four months of the year during the monsoon, when the roads are wholly impassable; but during those three or four months no persons attempt to travel those roads. Mr. Davies, in his report, states that the extreme distance of the great cotton district of Broach to the place of export may be taken as about thirty miles, while the average distance was about fifteen miles. The communication throughout, he said, was perfect, and always open, except during three months of heavy monsoon weather. The other person whose opinion I on the former occasion quoted was Mr. Landon, who has been for some time connected with Broach as a cotton grower, but who is not now at all connected with the East-India Company. He states, in answer to a question put to him, that Broach does not require made roads. He says that the nature of the soil is such, that, during the fair season, carts could travel everywhere, and that even if better roads existed they would not be used during the monsoon, and it would therefore be a waste of the public money, at present, to expend more upon the roads; for to make them passable during those three months, it would be necessary to raise them, and lay out a very considerable sum. All that was required was, that the local authorities should fill up the ruts, and make the roads passable for bullocks; and Mr. Landon states that, when he left Broach, in 1851, the collector, Mr. Davies, was actually engaged in carrying out those measures which were required. I assure my hon. and gallant friend that both the Government of India and the Court of Directors are anxious to have as perfect a system of internal communication in India as possible. Indeed, as the hon. proprietor who seconded the motion has most correctly observed, we must all be equally desirous to see the best roads made in India. An application came very lately from the Military Board to the Government of Bombay, suggesting that an expenditure should be made for the purpose of constructing a road in that part of the country; to which an answer was given, stating that his Lordship in Council would be prepared to take into consideration an estimate of the improvements of such particular lines of road as might be deemed of practical importance. As I said before, we can have no other object but to improve the country as much as possible. The hon. and gallant proprietor has said that, while only two engineers are employed in Guzerat, there are six or eight employed in Scinde. But if Guzerat is an old and a rich country, and does not require new roads, then two officers may be sufficient; whereas a new country like Scinde may require the services of many more. No comparison, therefore, can be made between the two cases. I am quite satisfied that two officers are quite enough for Guzerat. My hon. friend speaks of escheats and of resurreptions of land. No doubt they would afford very excellent means for providing funds for the improvement of the country; but there is no reason for applying escheats to the improvement of roads more than to any other purpose. But to come to the specific motion before the Court. My hon. friend says, because in the north-west provinces of Bengal there exists a system of appropriating a cess of one per cent. on the Government jumma, or tax, for the repair and extension of the interior communication, therefore it is very desirable that we should adopt the same system in Guzerat. Perhaps my hon. friend is not aware that this cess is not a compulsory levy of one per cent. on the jumma. Previous to that arrangement, some ten or twelve years ago, parties were compelled to keep up the roads in their district; but instead of paying the amount which was thus required of them, and which was always uncertain, it was proposed to them that they should pay one per cent. on the jumma. They concurred in that proposition, and this one per cent., therefore, is not an amount paid out of the revenue, but is in excess of it. There would, in my opinion, be no justice in extending such a system to Guzerat, and, indeed, I think it would be most inapplicable for the purpose. If such a system were adopted, it would require this Court to take the subject into consideration every year, seeing how much the revenue may vary from year to year, and consequently render the fund of an uncertain amount. So far, therefore, from the plan being advantageous, I am of opinion it would be a burden to the people. It is impossible to apply the same system to different countries. What would be good for one, would be oppressive to another. Moreover, this is not a question which the Court of Proprietors ought to deal with. It is a question of detail, and can only be treated in reference to the circumstances of each particular locality. One per cent. applied to the improvement of a fertile district might be too much; it would, therefore, be quite impossible to adopt the system proposed. What I recommend to my hon. friend, therefore, is, that, after having expressed his desire to forward the improvement of the country and the interest of the people generally, and after having received the assurance that those objects will be promoted by the Court of Directors to the utmost of their power, he should leave the matter in the hands of the Government, who were extremely anxious to carry out every measure of improvement.

Col. Dickenson, in reply, complained that the remarks of the hon. Chairman, and the authorities he had quoted, had been confined to a very small portion of the great district of Guzerat. The hon. Chairman had also said that the Court ought not to interfere with any measures which the Administration of India should adopt. It was very disheartening that persons who dedicated their minds to the improvement of that country should be met with such an objection. He thought the Court of Directors ought to be obliged to any proprietor who devoted his attention to such an object.

The Chairman had only objected to any interference with the details of the Administration, and not with reference to the principle of any particular measure. To the latter course he could not have any objection.

Col. Dickenson continued.—The hon. Chairman had spoken of rains during three months in the year. Now it was in the experience of several gentlemen present, that the rains in Guzerat were frequently extremely slight, and that, for many years together, these roads might be made available throughout the whole year. The return of the only year which he had been able to procure gave the fall of rain as only eighteen inches. It was impossible that that could be an objection against the construction of roads.

Major Oliphant said, the fact was, that the dry season only was the time for travelling, and that, during the dry season, the roads were exceedingly good. In the rainy season, the merchants did not travel, nor did they want to travel; therefore it was unnecessary to make the roads. If they were anxious to convey their merchandize through the district during the monsoon, then he presumed the roads would be made; but that, after all, would be a question for the Local Government to consider. It was impossible that gentlemen sitting in that Court could know whether the roads in Guzerat were good or bad. He presumed the Local Government in that respect was doing its duty. He spoke with some knowledge on the subject as an engineer officer, and it was his opinion that it would be a waste of money to make roads, for the mere purpose of making roads, where no merchandize would pass over them.

Col. Dickenson said, the hon. and gallant director had mistaken the cause for the effect. It was for the want of roads that there was no commercial traffic through the district during the wet season.

The motion was then put and negatived by a large majority; and

The Court adjourned.

LAW MEMBER OF THE SUPREME COUNCIL OF INDIA.—On the 17th December, a Court of Directors was held at the East-India House, when Mr. Barnes Peacock, Q.C., was appointed fourth ordinary member of the Council of India.

CAPTAIN C. G. FAGAN.—The restoration of this officer to his rank and standing in the 8th Bengal Light Cavalry (which we noticed in a preceding paper) was, we understand, avowedly grounded by the Court of Directors on their concurrence (after a reference of the whole matter for review to the Government of India) in the opinion expressed in a Minute of the Governor-General and of the Government to the effect, that he was innocent of conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman. The act of the Court has been since officially confirmed by the Board of Control.

EAST-INDIA COTTON.—Mr. W. Rathbone, of Liverpool, upon instructions from the East-India Company, forwarded to Manchester for sale 256 bales and 3 half bales of cotton, the produce of the Kandeish, Dharwar, and Ahmedabad collectorates, and 9 bales grown from New Orleans seed on the collectorate farm at Coimbatore. Of the first-named lot 214 bales are from New Orleans seed, called sugar-loaf; the remainder from indigeneous seed. The samples have been submitted to an experienced broker, who has reported them to the Manchester Commercial Association as being the best lots of cotton yet shipped from India. The sugar-loaf cotton is in the staple equal to Bowedas, and the other portions of good colour, fine staple, and extremely clean. He values the lot at 4d. to 4½d. per lb.

INDIAN PRODUCTS.—The Directors of the East-India Company have presented to the Royal Dublin Society a complete set of specimens of raw materials from India, as exhibited at the Great Exhibition.

THE SHIPMENTS OF SPECIES by the Peninsular and Oriental steamer Ripon reach 259,800*l.* Of this 60,000*l.* is in gold for Alexandria and Ceylon, and 199,800*l.* in silver for Madras, Bombay, Calcutta, Singapore, and Canton—the proportion for Calcutta being 147,000*l.*

ENGLISH FABRICS IN THE EAST.—Manchester, Dec. 20.—In connection with our India trade, some curious facts have transpired. It appears that in some parts of India, Russian prints have had much the same prestige which in this country has attached to French silks and other wares which our neighbours across the Channel have been permitted to send us; and to such an extent has this prevailed that we have seen serious things said in print as to the extent to which the Russians have been supplanting our manufactures in the markets of India. It appears likely, however, that the good offices of the East-India Company's servants will enable us to set this point at rest. They have collected, and placed at the disposal of the Manchester Commercial Association, a great variety of the specimens and patterns of these Russian fabrics, sold mostly on the borders of Persia, and without wishing to anticipate the full and satisfactory investigation which the association, through their able secretary, Mr. Hugh Fleming, are making on this point, by entering into any details, it may be safely asserted that our trade has little to fear from the result. In some patterns, not only has it been found that these Russian designs have been mere copies of our own, of very old date, but that the colours of our prints and the quality of cloth, when placed beside them, render it difficult to believe that the so-called Russian are not English goods. There is one great difference, however—the difference in price, which, as marked under these patterns, is in favour of the English manufactures by three and four to one. And this disparity of price is everything. The richest patterns may be put upon the poorest fabrics, or upon the very best, and the competition of trade necessitates this. The foreign merchant will either have goods that he can sell, or none at all.—Times.

THE SPECIMENS OF AUSTRALIAN GOLD, weighing 106 lbs., discovered in July last at a sheep-run about 50 miles from Bathurst, have reached London, and are now in the possession of Messrs. Matheson and Co., to whom they were consigned. Originally they formed part of an entire mass of gold and quartz of about three cwt.

TREATY WITH THE SANDWICH ISLANDS.—A copy of the treaty of friendship, commerce, and navigation, between Great Britain and the Sandwich Islands, signed at Honolulu on the 10th July last, has just been received. It is one of entire reciprocal freedom, with the exception, as regards navigation, of the coasting-trade of the respective countries. British whalers are to enjoy the privilege, lately conceded also to those of the United States, of entering certain ports, in addition to Honolulu and Lahaina, and are to be allowed to trade to the amount of Drs. 200 without the payment of duties of any kind. They may, also, upon paying the ordinary import or export duties, trade to the further extent of Drs. 1,000 before becoming liable to port charges. A provision is inserted for the surrender of naval or military deserters, which, in consequence of the proximity to California, is not without importance; and there is also a clause for the residence of a British packet agent, in case there should at any time be established British mail packets touching at a port of the islands. The ratification of the treaty is to take place by the 10th of May next.

THE ISTHMUS OF PANAMA.—The more recent investigations, made on the isthmus by Dr. Cullen, have brought to light the very important fact that a wide tract of entirely low and level land extends from Port Escoces, on the Atlantic coast of the isthmus, to the river Savana. This river, which falls into the Gulf of San Miguel on the Pacific, is navigable for sixteen miles and upwards from its mouth for vessels of the greatest draught of water, and there would remain only to deepen eight miles of its upper course, and to cut nine miles from the river to Port Escoces, over low and level land, in order to form a canal communication between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

STEAM BETWEEN THE CAPE AND CALCUTTA, VIA MAURITIUS.—The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have advertised for proposals from parties willing to contract for establishing a monthly mail packet service between the Cape of Good Hope and Calcutta, touching at Mauritius and Ceylon. The tenders for this service are to be made upon the understanding that wooden vessels are to be employed, but proposals will be received, specifying what abatement in the yearly subsidy for carrying the mails will be expected if vessels constructed of iron be adopted by the Admiralty in lieu of steamers built of wood. The vessels, whether constructed of iron or of wood, are to be propelled on the screw principle, and it is stipulated that the speed shall be on the average not less than eight knots an hour. The contractors are to specify the names of the vessels designed for this service, their tonnage by register old measurement, where lying (or to be built), horse-power, draught of water, when ready for sea, average speed, and the date when they will be ready for survey by the Admiralty authorities, and complete for service. The contract to be in force for six years from its commencement, and may be terminated then or at any subsequent day by a notice of twelve months from either party. The proposed mail service, if carried into effect, will provide a regular communication between the British South African possessions and the Mauritius, as well as with our Eastern empire via Calcutta. It will also connect Mauritius with India, and establish the long-desired monthly mail to and from this country and the Isle of France. Steam communication, via the Cape, will likewise for the first time be opened from England to Ceylon and Calcutta, and a conveyance for passengers and merchandise by steam from the mother-country will be established with those places.

THE "GRAND MOVING DIORAMA OF HINDOSTAN," displaying the scenery of the Hoogly, the Bhágirathi, and the Ganges, from Fort William, Bengal, to Gangotri in the Himalaya, now exhibiting at the Asiatic Gallery, Baker Street Bazar, comprise animated and faithful views of the various places and objects, painted by Messrs. Phillips, Haghe, and Knell, from original sketches by Lieut. Colonel Luard and his friends. The views in and about Benares, Simla, and the snowy regions are peculiarly striking. The scenes are accompanied by oral descriptions and appropriate music.

PEER IBRAHIM KHAN.—We understand that the Court of Directors have granted a free passage to India to this native gentleman and two servants, by the mail of the 20th. Syed Abdoolah, his companion, will remain behind.

ENGAGEMENT OF SHIPS.—The Taymouth Castle and Gloriosa for the freight of stores to Calcutta, and the Hampshire for the like purpose to Madras.

BOOKS.

Memoir of Peer Ibrahim Khan, Bahadur, British Agent at the Court of His Highness the Nawab of Bhawalpur, and now on a Visit to England. Wm. H. Allen and Co. 1852.

THE readers of the Indian Mail will be no strangers to the name and services of Peer Ibrahim Khan, who, with the Bhawalpoorean troops, co-operated in a most efficient manner with Major Edwardes in the Mooltan campaign. The spirit, energy, and ability of this native gentleman, and his staunch fidelity to our interests, fully entitle him to the recognitions which, we are glad to observe, he has received, together with more substantial tokens of approbation, from the British authorities.

This little work contains a narrative of the transactions in which he was concerned from the year 1837, when he first entered the British service, as a native agent, to the fall of Mooltan and the surrender of Moolraj, soon after which he was attacked by illness, the consequence of fatigue and anxiety, and upon his recovery, he determined to gratify an ardent wish he had long cherished of visiting England. "I longed," he says, to see that empress land which, at the distance of so many thousand miles, sways the vast region of Hindustan, and gives laws to countless millions of a foreign race; to see the Queen, the Parliament of England, and the directors of that great Company whose fame is spread through the wide East." His wish was gratified. He obtained leave of absence for two years, and left Bhawalpoor in January, 1851, accompanied by Syed Abdoollah, translator to the Board of Administration in the Panjab (another accomplished native of India), and he confesses he has been bewildered by what he has seen here.

"What has struck me, however, more than all the rest, is the vigour, and at the same time, the calm moderation of the government of this fortunate country. I have seen and been acquainted with powerful monarchs in the East, such as Runjeet Singh and the rulers of Afghanistan, but in general one heard more of their exactions, and of their severe, if not cruel and perfidious measures, than of their virtues and their victories. I have here seen a queen incomparably greater than those potentates in the riches, extent, and military resources of her dominions, who, nevertheless, is known to her subjects only by the most endearing traits of character. And these virtues have been rewarded by a prosperity and good fortune unexampled in the annals of the world."

The Peer has added to his Memoir a narrative of his journey to Ghuznee, and a brief account of the Afghan tribes. He tells us that he belongs to an Afghan clan, which emigrated from the mountain Firuzah, first to Mooltan and thence to the village of Kasur (between Lahore and Ferozepore), the chiefs of which bore an active part in the transactions of which that portion of India was the scene, especially from the time of Akbar, who conferred upon them in jaghirs the town and district of Kasur.

The Memoir is interesting not only from its unaffected simplicity, but from the details it furnishes, written by an eyewitness and principal agent, of the stirring events of the Mooltan war.

SOLICITOR.—William Henry Cotterill, Esq.

PHYSICIAN.—George Burrows, M.D., F.R.S., 18, Cavendish Square.

ACTUARY.—David Jones, Esq.

The principle adopted by the Universal Life Assurance Society, of an annual valuation of assets and liabilities, and a division of three-fourths of the profits among the assured, is admitted to offer great advantages, especially to those parties who may wish to appropriate their proportion of profit to the reduction of future premiums.

The following Table will show the result of the last division of profits, as declared on the 14th of May, 1851, to all persons who had on that day paid six annual premiums, being a reduction of 45 per cent. on the current annual premium. This will be found a most liberal reduction, if the original premiums be compared with those of other offices adopting a similar plan of division of profits:—

Age when Policy was issued.	Date of Policy.	Sum assured.	Original Premium.	Reduced Ann. Premium for current Year.
20		£1,000	£19 6 8	£10 12 8
30	On or before	1,000	24 8 4	13 8 7
40	14th of May,	1,000	31 10 0	17 6 6
50	1846.	1,000	42 15 0	23 10 2
60		1,000	66 11 8	36 12 5

* * * The attention of Gentlemen connected with India is particularly requested to the Regulations of this Society; as, on comparison with other offices, its terms will be found peculiarly advantageous, especially as regards the liberal plan adopted on the return of Indian Assurers to reside permanently in this country; and the Indian Rates have been calculated from extensive data and Tables exclusively in the possession of this Society, by which the true risk of life during residence in India has been most accurately ascertained.

WATER CURE, BEN RHYDDING.

THE CELEBRATED WHARFEDALE HYDRO-PATHIC ESTABLISHMENT is now only 7 hours' distance from London, is 2 hours' distance from Harrogate, and 2½ from Fountains Abbey and Studley Park, 1½ from Leeds and Bradford, 2½ from Manchester and York, 3½ from Liverpool, and 7 miles' drive from Bolton Abbey, the beautiful seat of the Duke of Devonshire.

Physician to the establishment, Dr. WM. MACLEOD, Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, Edinburgh; Member of the Edinburgh Medico-Chirurgical Society; Honorary Member of the Royal Medical Society; formerly Lecturer on the Institutes of Medicine in the Argyle Square School of Medicine, Edinburgh; and Physician to the Royal Public Dispensary, &c. &c.

On a high eminence near the banks of the Wharfe stands this noble edifice; the extensive and varied scenery of the locality, with its salubrious springs and bracing air, have for centuries back rendered it a favourite place of resort for invalids. The Establishment, for its situation and completeness, is unrivalled in England. It was built expressly for the Water Cure treatment, at an expense of £25,000, and is provided with every convenience, comfort, and even luxury. The Estate, which has been elegantly laid out, consists of 65 acres of hilly and wooded pleasure-grounds. The Hotel, for the accommodation of friends of the patients, is complete in every department. Terms: Board, Lodging, Medical Attendance, &c. (including all servants), per week, £3. 6s.; Board and Lodging in the Hotel department (including all servants), per week, £2. 9s. Further particulars respecting coaches, &c., may be obtained of the House Steward, by letter addressed to him, Ben Rhydding, near Otley, Yorkshire. Dr. Macleod begs to refer those resident in India for further particulars of his establishment and method of treatment to his friend, Robert Browne, Esq., M.D., Superintending Surgeon of the Honourable East-India Company's Service, Dinapore, Bengal Presidency.

Part I., price 1s.,

TRAVELLING HOURS: a Series of Short Papers on Popular Subjects. To be published occasionally.

Part I., price 1s.,

THE COUNTRY HOUSE. To be completed in Twelve Parts, and to form Three Volumes.

"This (the Poultry Yard) is one of a series of useful manuals, written in plain and popular style, on the many adjuncts peculiar to a 'Country House.' It is, perhaps, one of the very best existing treatises on poultry, inasmuch as it discards all the superfluous matter generally introduced in books, and which puzzles, rather than assists, an inquiring reader. The writer evidently understands his subject, and this stamps his observations with a value which otherwise they would not possess."—Gardener's Chronicle, Dec. 20.

MAPS and ATLASES of the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge. The whole of the Maps corrected to the present time. Single Maps and Plans of Cities, plain, 6d. each; coloured, 8d. Atlases, plain and coloured, very handsomely and strongly half-bound in morocco, or Russia, from 12s. to £2. 14s.

A PROSPECTUS, with full particulars of the Maps and Atlases, and Descriptive Catalogues of Mr. CHARLES KNIGHT's Publications, with Specimen Pages of NEW WORKS, forwarded (post free) on application to the Publisher.

CHARLES KNIGHT, 90, FLEET STREET, LONDON.

And sold by all Booksellers throughout the Country.

Price reduced from £4. 16s. to £2. 8s.

In Six Volumes 8vo. cloth, lettered (Illustrated by Maps, showing the possessions of the East-India Company at various periods),

THE

TO THE CLOSE OF LORD ELLENBOROUGH'S ADMINISTRATION IN 1844.

By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq.

*. The Sixth Volume, from A.D. 1834 to 1844, may still be had separately.

"The East-India Company have reason to be proud of such a work as the present, originating, we believe, in their patronage; and it is equally creditable to them, and to their historian, that on no occasion does he shrink from the duty of telling the undisguised truth."—Times.

"The style of the work is free, rapid, and spirited, and bears marks of a thorough familiarity with the subject. Every Englishman ought to be acquainted with the History of the British Empire in India, and we therefore cordially recommend this work to our readers."—Patriot.

In post 8vo., price 3s. 6d.

Memoir of Peer Ibraheem Khan,

BAHADUR,

British Agent at the Court of His Highness the Nawwab of Bhaupalpur, and now on a visit to England.

London: WM. H. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall Street.

NEW BOOKS, MAGAZINES, and REVIEWS, VIA BOMBAY, AT ENGLISH PRICES.

Messrs. R. C. LEPAGE and Co. are now giving much of their attention in London to a direct business with the Western and North-Western Provinces of India. They undertake to supply Book Clubs, Officers' and Soldiers' Reading Societies, Private Individuals, &c., with New Books, Magazines, and Reviews, as published, charging them at the English prices.

The cost of transmission by the "Overland Route" is precisely on the scale of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company's Parcel Tariff. Further particulars may be learnt on application to R. C. LEPAGE and Co., Calcutta; or Mr. JOHN TURNER, Steam Parcel Agent, Bombay.

LONDON BRANCH—No. 1, Whitefriars' Street, Fleet Street.
30th December, 1851.

A LADY, the wife of a gentleman holding a government appointment, and residing a few miles from town, is anxious to undertake the charge of TWO or THREE CHILDREN TO EDUCATE with her own little girl. The services of a superior resident governess will be secured. Widowers, or parents going to India, would find this a desirable opportunity of placing their children in a comfortable home, the advertiser being able to offer most satisfactory references and unusual advantages.—Terms, £100 per annum, exclusive of dress and medical attendance; £140 with those items included.

Address M. L., 45, Cornhill, City.

COCOA is a nut which, besides farinaceous substance, contains a bland oil. The oil in this nut has one advantage, which is, that it is less liable than any other oil to rancidity. Possessing these two nutritive substances, Cocoa becomes a most valuable article of diet, more particularly if, by mechanical or other means, the farinaceous substance can be so perfectly incorporated with the oily, that the one will prevent the other from separating. Such an union is presented in the Cocoa prepared by JAMES EPPS, and thus, while the delightful flavour, in part dependent upon the oil, is retained, the whole preparation will agree with the most delicate stomach.—1s. 6d. per lb.

CHOCOLATE.—Those who require a very light beverage, will find the prepared chocolate adapted to their particular taste: it is thinner and more highly flavoured than the Cocoa, possessing more the advantages of Tea and Coffee.—2s. 6d. per lb.

Prepared by JAMES EPPS, Homoeopathic Chemist, 112, Great Russell Street, Bloomsbury, and 82, Old Broad Street, City.

In regard to purity, see Report of the Analytical Sanitary Commission, in "The Lancet," July 6, 1851.

THE DELHI CHUTNEE, 1s. 6d. per bottle.

THE INDIAN CURRY SAUCE, of superior quality, in antique bottles.—This novel and piquant Sauce is peculiarly adapted for Steaks, Chops, Game, Fish, Cold Meats, Soups, &c. The addition of a little of this Sauce, in cases where a curry cannot be procured, will prove a valuable accompaniment to connoisseurs.

All Indian Condiments, Mangoes, Sauces, &c., from Calcutta direct.

PAYNE and Co., Importers and Manufacturers, 324 and 328, Regent Street, London.—May be had of Messrs. DUNCAN MACLEAN and SONS, Princes Street, Edinburgh; BAXTER and SONS, Buchanan Street, Glasgow; or through any Italian Warehouse in the kingdom.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS a certain and effectual REMEDY for DISEASES of the SKIN.—Ringworm, scurvy, leucoderma, or King's evil, sore heads, and the most inveterate skin diseases to which the human race is subject, cannot be treated with a more certain, safe, and speedy remedy for their cure, than Holloway's Ointment and Pills, which act so peculiarly on the constitution, and so effectually purify the blood, that those diseases are quickly eradicated from the system, and a lasting cure obtained. These sovereign remedies are equally efficacious in curing tumours, burns, scalds, glandular swellings, ulcerous wounds, rheumatism, contracted and stiff joints.

Sold by all Druggists, and at Professor Holloway's establishment, 244, Strand, London; and by all European and Native vendors of medicine throughout the whole of the East Indies.

SEASONABLE PRESENTS.—At this festive period of the year, when friends and lovers assemble at the social board, or join in the mazes of the dance, a more than usual anxiety is created for Personal Attraction, and the following unrivalled discoveries for the Toilet are called into increased requisition, namely,—

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL, for creating and sustaining a luxuriant head of hair.

ROWLANDS' KALYDOR, for rendering the Skin soft, fair, and blooming.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO, or Pearl Dentifrice, for imparting a pearl-like whiteness to the Teeth; and ROWLANDS' AQUA D'ORO, a fragrant and spirituous perfume, an essential accompaniment to places of public amusement and crowded assemblies.

The patronage of royalty throughout Europe, and the high appreciation by rank and fashion, with the well-known infallible efficacy of these articles, give them a celebrity unparalleled, and render them a peculiarly Elegant and Seasonable Present.

BEWARE OF SPURIOUS IMITATIONS.—The only genuine of each bears the name of "ROWLANDS," preceding that of the article on the wrapper or label, with their signature at the foot, in Red Ink, thus,—A. ROWLAND & SONS. Sold by them at 20, Hatton Garden, London, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

DUNN'S PORCELAIN WAX CANDLES, 11s. per dozen lbs.—Among the various candles introduced to public notice, these are acknowledged to be one of the most superior articles ever manufactured, and have been universally admired. They give a brilliant light, are transparent as wax, do not require snuffing, free from smell, and have the most perfect appearance of the finest wax. DUNN'S Sovereign Sperm Candles, 11s. 6d. per dozen lbs., are much admired, being delicately white, brilliantly illuminating, exceedingly hard, requiring no snuffing, and are altogether very superior candles. DUNN'S best Composite Candles, 9s. 9d. per dozen lbs.: these are very excellent candles, and are infinitely superior to those candles usually sold as "composite," are hard, white, require no snuffing, and burn with a silvery flame. All these candles are packed for the country in boxes containing 24 lbs., 36 lbs., and upwards. No charge for boxes. JOHN DUNN and Co., Wax-chandlers, &c., 69, Cannon Street, City.—Delivered free 7 miles.

DUNN'S FINE ARGAND LAMP OIL, 4s. 6d. per gallon.—This very superior oil, so largely patronized and recommended by the nobility and gentry, is equally applicable for the Argand, Solar, French Fountain, and every description of Patent Oil Lamps. Its characteristics are the strength and brilliancy of light, without smoke or smell; extreme purity, as it will not corrode the most delicate lamp; greater economy, in the slowness of consumption, compared with other oils, and not chilling with the cold. Half a gallon or upwards delivered free 7 miles.—Sold only genuine by JOHN DUNN and Co., Oil Merchants, 69, Cannon Street, City. N.B.—From the great satisfaction this oil has given during the last 12 years, J. D. and Co. are anxious to assure the public it is only to be obtained at their warehouse, as above, as the same name has been assumed for oils of a widely different character.

TO PRESERVE LIFE IN SHIPWRECK.

LAURIE'S PATENT FLOATABLE MATTRESSES
(NOT INFLATED), PILLOWS, LIFE BELTS, and sundry buoyant articles, S. W. SILVER and Co., Sole Licensees. Every Ship Mattress will sustain eight persons in the water for an indefinite period, and at a small increase on the usual cost of those in common use. Every pillow or seat-cushion will sustain one or more persons. The Life Belts are preventives to sinking, the cheapest yet submitted, very portable, and applied in an instant in case of accident. Thus, every sailing vessel, Steamer, Yacht, Boat, or craft of any kind, and every person on board, ought to be furnished with these clever Sinking-Preventives, which may be seen and tested at the manufacturers', S. and W. SILVER and Co., Clothiers, Outfitters, and Contractors, 65 and 67, CORNHILL, and 4, BISHOPSGATE STREET, LONDON; and at LIVERPOOL, where Passengers may be supplied with the whole or any portion of their Outfit without sacrificing the too usual intermediate profit, SILVER and Co. being the Makers of the Manifold Articles in the Outfit, and supplying them at their Shipping Prices, including Folding Furniture for Cabin use on the Voyage, which is so contrived as to form a supply on arrival. Department for Outfitting Cadets, Clergymen, and Cabin Passengers generally, Naval and Military Uniforms, and Clothing for Home use, at 65 and 67, CORNHILL. HINDUSTANI MANUAL: a Pocket Companion for those who visit India in any capacity; intended to facilitate the essential attainments of conversing with fluency, and composing with accuracy, in the most useful of all the languages spoken in our Eastern Empire. This work consists of a Compendious Grammar and Exercises on its more prominent peculiarities; with a Selection of useful Phrases and Dialogues on familiar subjects, together with a Vocabulary of useful words, English and Hindustani, showing at the same time the Difference of Idiom between the two Languages. 2nd edition, considerably improved. 18mo., bound, 5s. 6d.

"This work can be honestly recommended to all who are desirous of acquiring the elements of the Hindustani language, or of making themselves understood among the people of this country. We have seldom, if ever, seen such a small pocket companion with such a variety of useful instruction. The language of the Vocabulary and of the Dialogues appears quite unexceptionable. Any one acquainted with Hindustani will at once recognize its idiomatic accuracy, and cheerfully recommend it to the notice of all those who desire to come out to India not altogether unprepared to convey their own views to those who surround them."—Friend of India, published at Serampore.

Siamese and Burmese civil year 1214, which began 2nd April, 1851, and their religious year 2394, which began 31st May, 1851.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE expeditions moved upon the two extremities of the British possessions in India,—that under Sir Colin Campbell against the Momunds, in the Michnee district, and the naval demonstration at Rangoon,—had, up to our latest advices, produced no results.

Sir Colin was still at Dabb, whence the intelligence reached to the 23rd of November. Up to that date no incident of any importance had occurred. The building of the fort had been impeded by the weather, and was not expected to be completed before the middle of December. The Momunds (it is said, by the advice of the Ameer of Cabul) had determined to act upon the guerilla system of warfare, and, leaving their hills, they got between the brigadier-general's camp and the Peshawur station, upon which they made two night attacks. On the last occasion, the 23rd of November, about sixty or seventy attacked some butchers living on the old Pubee road. The onslaught was so sudden that they had time to kill three of the men in the slaughter-house, and wound four more, before the alarm was given; on their being discovered, the party were fired upon by the police on the city walls and immediately decamped, carrying off with them some bullocks. It is now pretty clear that Saadut Khan, of Lalpoora, the principal chief of the Momunds, has been induced to make common cause with his clansmen. It was known in camp that he had been in the neighbourhood, at the head of two hundred men, actively engaged in encouraging his tribe to do us all the harm in their power. He had been provided with supplies and ammunition from Jellalabad, in quantities sufficient to last the whole winter. The last accounts from the camp state that, leaving his son in his stead, he had proceeded to the country of the Shinwarees in Khyber, to stir them up against their common enemy, the British.

Letters from Kohat, dated the 20th of November, mention that Dennis's regiment of Punjab Irregular Infantry, with two guns, and accompanied by the Deputy Commissioner, Major Lake, marched early that morning to Bahadoor Khail, some four or five hundred Wuzerees having attacked that outpost. Soobhan Khan moved out from Nurree, when the Wuzerees quickly retreated, leaving behind them, dead, eleven of their number. Bahadoor Khail immediately applied for assistance to Major Coke, and the 4th were ordered off under the command of Lieut. Petrie. No fighting was expected at Bahadoor Khail, though the enemy were still in great numbers about the place. The chief reason for assembling so large a force at this point is to enable our people to build a fort there, and the application for assistance afforded an excellent opportunity for carrying out the wishes of Government. Protection will thus be furnished to the salt-mines in that direction.

The statement we quoted in our last Summary from the Lahore Chronicle, that orders had been issued to the whole field force at Mooltan to be in readiness to march on service, turns out to be correct. The Delhi Gazette states that the instructions came direct from the Governor-General, and that, though it was doubtful in what direction the force would move, it was generally believed that its destination will be Upper Scinde. Meer Ali Moorad, of Kyrpore, whom we placed on the throne, is accused of having made use of some forged documents to prove his claim to certain lands. On the fraud being discovered, he refused to make restitution, and, as negotiations have failed of bringing him to reason, it is probable that he will now be summarily dispossessed of his delegated power.

The latest accounts from Cabul speak more favourably of the Ameer's health, though he was not declared free from danger. His partial recovery had already had a very salutary effect, and the people, who crowded into the city on hearing the rumour of his death, it is said, returned to their homes to their own disappointment, but to the great joy and satisfaction of the respectable citizens.

From Toorkistan we learn that Akram Khan had succeeded, by means of perjury, in possessing himself of the person of Mahomed Khan, the chief of the Bulkh insurgents.

Letters from Hyderabad concur in representing that the statements so confidently made of the redemption of the Nizam's territory, by his payment of the debt due to the British Government, were at least premature,—that the money had not been paid. The Englishman's correspondent gives the following curious chronicle of the affair:—

"I told you that the instructions of the Government to the Resident were stringent, to admit of no relaxation as to the time of payment. The engagement expired on the 1st November, which fell on the 7th Mohorum; of course, nothing could be done in a Mahomedan Government till the 14th, when the Nizam promised to provide the means for payment. On the 14th, his highness was engaged in other occupations. The treasury was not opened till a late hour; the property was inspected, but delivery was postponed to the 15th. The property consisted of jewels, worth, according to his highness's estimate, fourteen lacs of rupees. That day, the 16th, and the 17th, were occupied in procuring from all the leading sahookars a valuation of the jewels. On the 18th, the minister reported to his highness that the valuation was Rs. 6,43,000; but that the sahookars declined purchasing them, even at that price, or advancing money upon the mortgage of them in the usual relative proportion of their value. His highness desired the minister to employ Lalla Bahadoor to prevail upon the sahookars to accommodate his Government; and the sahookars were directed to wait upon Lalla Bahadoor at his country-house, which they did on the 19th. The event could be no other than unproductive. His highness, I presume, was immovable, and Suraj-ool-Moolk waited upon the Resident on the 20th Mohorum (the 14th November). Whatever the communication of Suraj-ool-Moolk might have been (it is supposed he went to supplicate for more time), the Resident could do no otherwise than await a little longer the tendencies of the Nizam's versatile disposition. On the 21st, the minister returned early to the city; the Nizam did not give him an audience till the 23rd, when, according to common, but not authentic, report, he told his minister he meant to give him no other assistance, and that he might manage the best way he could with what he had got. This sort of lordly language is very much misplaced; it is not Suraj-ool-Moolk that will suffer from the failure to pay, but his highness, who will lose his territories. On the 21st, Suraj-ool-Moolk went again to the Resident; but nothing is yet known of the proceedings there; the sahookars hung back; and if that be, as I understand, the point of reliance, the hope is utterly vain."

The next advices will, perhaps, bring some solution of the matter.

The particulars of Commodore Lambert's visit to Rangoon are given elsewhere. It appears that Capt. Latter, the interpreter, had an interview with the governor, who was so astonished at the commodore's peremptory demands, that he could make no reply. The deputy-governor went on board the frigate, when the Governor-General's letter to the king was delivered to him, with the intimation that, unless a satisfactory answer was given in five weeks, other steps would be taken.

All had been quiet at Bombay since the despatch of the last mail. A number of the Mahomedans engaged in the riots had been convicted at the Criminal Sessions, and sentenced to various terms of imprisonment. Two of the most prominent had been convicted of felony, and sentenced to transportation for ten years to Penang.

The Governor-General had descended into the plains, on his way to the seat of government. It is satisfactory to learn that his health has been greatly improved during his residence in the hills. After visiting Mussoorie and the Invalid Barracks at Landour, his Lordship inspected the tea-plantations in the Dhoon. He then proceeded to Roorkie, and, having examined the works at that place, visited the college for civil engineers and model-room, proceeded, on the 25th November, up the canal, accompanied by Colonel Cautley, and joined his camp at Bahadoorabad on the 26th. On the 27th the camp moved to Hurdwar, where no halt was made, but at Bognore there was to be a halt of two days. His Lordship was not expected in Calcutta before February.

Accounts from Persia, by the way of Trebisond, state that the minister, Mirza Taghi Khan, had been disgraced, in consequence of the discovery of a plot, in which he was engaged, for depriving Persia of the province of Ghilan. Although brother-in-law to the Shah, he was ordered to be strangled, but his life was spared on the intervention of the Ulemahs. Teheran was, according to these accounts, a scene of anarchy and murder.

The intelligence from China, though it does not confirm the report (mentioned in our last Summary) brought to India, through Tibet, of the march of the insurgents upon Peking, and the overthrow of the dynasty, is not at variance with it. The increasing force of the pretender renders the event extremely probable, and there are evident indications of the fall of the Manchoes. The China Mail has a curious story, that T'een-teh, the claimant of the imperial throne, is a Christian, having been baptized by the late Dr. Gutzlaff. It is added, that he calls himself the apostle of the new faith, and designates his followers as the Shang-Te-Hwai, i.e. the "God Society," or "League," a name by which, as the editor of the Mail says, they are certainly known in some quarters.

The news from Siam, received through the Singapore papers, fully justifies the hopes which were expressed on the accession of the present sovereign. The king continues to display the same desire to cultivate the acquaintance of foreigners, and has written to Colonel Butterworth an account of the sickness and death of his late Majesty, and the coronation of the present king.

An American company has been established to run steam-vessels among the Sandwich Islands, to which King Kamehameha has granted the exclusive privilege of navigating his dominions by steam for five years. It is expected the company will immediately establish a communication by steam between San Francisco and Honolulu.

BENGAL.

MR. REDDIE.

It is with feelings of no common regret that we record the death of Mr. Reddie, the first judge of the Small Cause Court, from a sharp attack of cholera. It is many years since any individual in Calcutta has descended to the tomb amidst such deep and universal regret, among all classes of society; the high and the low, the rich and the poor. He came out to India about three years ago, after having filled the office of chief-justice of St. Lucia, from which he was ejected by the colonial office to gratify the wishes of the governor. This circumstance for a time created an unfavourable impression in some circles, but he speedily lived down all these prejudices, and soon succeeded in obtaining the universal confidence of society. On the remodeling of the Small Cause Court, he was appointed to the office of first judge. The court had at the time, from various causes, chiefly from the vices of its organization, fallen into great disrepute with the public in general, and he entered upon his duties with the resolution to spare no labour or pains to raise it in general estimation, by rendering it a real blessing to the city. He fully appreciated the importance of the responsibility which was thus thrown on him, and the hopes which his elevation had inspired; but the expectations even of the most sanguine were outstripped. By the most unwearied attention to business, greatly, we fear, to the detriment of his own health, he rapidly raised this court to the highest reputation, and thus justified the wisdom of government in enlarging the sphere of its jurisdiction, and placing him at the head of it. The clearness and justice of his decisions gave general satisfaction to the community, while his judicial affability, and the interest he manifested in all the cases brought before him, won the esteem and attachment of all parties. We can scarcely remember an instance in this country in which the exertions of one individual have produced so decisive and rapid an improvement in a public institution, and so speedily drawn the admiration of his fellow townsmen to his own person. The cases in which the soundness of his judgments was brought into question, by a reference to the Supreme Court, were merely those in which a diversity of opinion might be fairly entertained without any imputation on the legal knowledge of the judge. In this country, it too often happens that an appeal to a higher tribunal is considered, and resented as a kind of personal reflection on the party appealed from. Mr. Reddie, however, was above all such littleness; no man has ever more cheerfully referred matters in which he differed from his legal brethren, to the arbitration of a higher tribunal. In general society he was a universal favourite. There was a glow and a freshness in his conversation, which formed a most agreeable contrast to the dull solemnity and the chilling officiality of Calcutta society in general, though not in particular. At the same time, the warmth and cordiality of his feelings, combined with the frankness of his manners, endeared him in no common degree to all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance, and he has left a void both in society and on the bench which will not be readily filled up.—Friend of India, Dec. 4.

OUDE.

The Englishman's correspondent at Lucknow writes:—"The noted dacoit, named Hossein Buksh, the dread of the Juggipore Elaka, has at last been captured by Captain Magnesa. His head has been struck off, and was exposed on a pole in the principal street of the Chucklida's camp. He died fighting. Sticking up heads on pikes is a very good mode of frightening other offenders, and in a native state like Oude, where such instances of success on the part of Government are considered as marks of determination to suppress crime, similar disgusting sights are often to be met with. There is a talk that the Governor-General will positively visit Lucknow; but so many contradictions have been given out about his coming, that I should not be surprised if the vice-regal shadow does not darken the walls of Lucknow this season.

"Busheer-ood-Dowlah, the chief guardian of the king's harem, an eunuch, who possesses much power, great influence, and considerable wealth, has received leave of his majesty ostensibly to perform a pilgrimage to Mecca, but really to retire from the service altogether, and to enjoy his ill-gotten wealth in peace in the Company's territories. As he is a slave of the king, he is not of course entitled to any property of his own. All an eunuch possesses, should his rank or wealth be ever so great, reverts at his death, or his departure from Lucknow, to the king, who may be said only to permit him to enjoy property so long as he is in favour at court. Busheer-ood-Dowlah did not admire this uncertain tenure of money, and he consequently sent away three lakhs of rupees, well concealed in loads of lead and straw. Just as it was being taken over the bridge of boats near Cawnpore, the Tessildar of the district, the late Ghalib Jung's son, seized the hackeries, and sent the money to the treasury. The best of the joke is, that Busheer-ood-Dowlah dares not claim a single rupee of the whole amount, and as nobody acknowledges the property, the king naturally touches the whole."

THE LONDON MAIL of Oct. 24th arrived at Calcutta Dec. 5th, per Haddington.

THE FOLLOWING SINGULAR ANNOUNCEMENT appears in the Calcutta Morning Chronicle of the 19th November:—"We have just heard of one of the chief secretaries' intention to resign the service, owing to some erroneous statements prepared by him, which led to the closing of the five per cent. loan sooner than would otherwise have occurred, and which drew forth some very severe remarks as to his carelessness and remissness from the Governor-General. We have not seen the Governor-General's letter, but it is said that his Lordship never expected such errors to originate with an officer of so high a standing as this secretary."

METEOROLITE.—Major J. Abbott, in a letter to the secretary of the Asiatic Society, writes:—"On the 1st of October, as I was settling some disputes at a village near Sihundenpoor, Hizara (Punjab), I was started by a sound, resembling the explosion of several immense magazines of gunpowder at the distance of about twenty miles. My people, who stood around me, assured me that the earth was quaking, but, being on horseback, I did not perceive this. The sky was without cloud, but the atmosphere was thick, as usual in the neighbourhood of these mountains. It appeared to me to come from the east, that is, from the direction of Cashmere; but the most general impression is, that the sound came from a direction north by a point east. On returning to the town, I found that it had caused great alarm there, and that many persons had abruptly left their houses, supposing them about to fall. I have written to inquire the effect at various parts of the district. The sound seemed to me to rise from earth to heaven,—an impression, perhaps, made by its resemblance to an explosion, when with the sound we usually see smoke and dust thus ascending. It lasted about ten seconds, and could not be mistaken for thunder; but had it proceeded from the direction of the Indus, I might have supposed it occasioned by the fall of a mountain into the river. I think it probable that it proceeded from a meteorolite, but have not yet heard of the fall of any such in the district."

ORIENTAL TEXTS.—The Asiatic Society, at its meeting on the 5th November, adopted, at the recommendation of the Council, the subjoined report by the Philological Committee on the publication of texts in the Bibliotheca Indica:—"That, whilst it is of the highest importance for translations to be made here in India with all Hindustani assistance, it is not expedient to limit the publication of volumes in the Bibliotheca Indica to those which the editors may be prepared at once to translate. It is evident that such a restriction would operate unfavourably, as in many cases years must be spent before a perfectly satisfactory translation could be finished."

MONUMENTS OF ANTIQUITY.—A correspondent, writing from the frontier, says: "The Peshawur valley presents a fine field for the antiquary. Monuments of undeniable antiquity are frequently discovered, and only last year some Buddhist figures were dug up in the cantonments of H.M.'s 61st regt., but I know not what became of them. It is to be hoped that they escaped the fate of some small stone figures brought by Capt. Lumsden from Yusufzai, which by some means or other fell into the hands of a Vandal, who broke them to pieces for the purpose of stopping rat-holes! These latter figures were of a superior description; one of them I particularly remarked as bearing very classical drapery and Greek sandals; the old tumulus before mentioned, which somewhat resembles the Manikulya one, has, I believe, been examined without any result."—Delhi Gaz., Nov. 5.

BABOO GAJANENDRO MOHUN TAGORE.—We regard the conversion of this young man as one of the greatest triumphs hitherto achieved by Christianity in this country. He is in no respect a "bread and butter" Christian, having had a sufficient and comfortable independence secured to him by his father on the occasion of his marriage; and yet, by an open declaration of the faith which is in him, he imperils his succession to a rich inheritance. Neither can ambition be assigned as an inducement to the course which he has adopted, as he is of retired and studious habits, and has never sought public employ, nor the society of great men. The step which he has taken has been no rash one, but the result of ten years' deliberate examination of the evidence upon which rests the truth of the tenets which he has embraced. Nor can it be said that his judgment has been warped by deference to the opinions of the instructors from whom he received his education, as it is now many years since Gajanendro Mohun quitted college; and in the search which he has prosecuted after the truth he has been unaided, save by such help as Christians believe the earnest seeker to receive from above.—Citizen, Nov. 13.

THE MACKAYS.—A true bill for murder has been found against Mr. and Miss Mackay by the grand jury at Calcutta, for murder. Their trial before the petit jury was to take place on the 8th December. It is believed they will be convicted of manslaughter only.

THE EXPEDITION TO RANGOON.—By the H. Co.'s ship Proserpine, from Rangoon, the 28th ult. we have received intelligence of the proceedings of the expedition to that place. It appears that the little steamer had been three days off the bar of the river, and had placed a buoy on the spit outside, before the frigate and the Tenasserim made their appearance. When they did, all was ready for them, and they proceeded up the river without difficulty. Capt. Latter, who has come on in the Proserpine, brings dispatches, which, from all we can learn, are not quite of so pacific a character as we had contemplated. The governor had taken high ground, and talked of cutting off the head of any one who ventured to remonstrate against his proceedings. The commodore, however, had quietly arranged his plans before he entered the river, and made no difference in them on account of this bluster. He sent the commander of the frigate, with Capt. Latter and two naval officers, with the demand for redress. The governor received them rather ungraciously, but was informed that 35 days were given to him to forward the representation to Ava and obtain an answer; that at the expiration of that time the commodore would take his own course. What that may be, we do not know. It may possibly depend on the result of a reference to the Governor-General, who, it is said, will not be down here till February. It is much to be regretted that his lordship should be away in the north-west, when an immediate decision on this Rangoon affair is so imperiously necessary. We suppose twenty days must elapse ere a reply from the Governor-General's camp, wherever it may be, can be received. We are sorry to learn that there was some sickness on board the frigate, and that the commodore was about to take her out to cruise outside, leaving the Tenasserim to protect foreign subjects at Rangoon. This, well-armed as she is with 68 pounders and a fine European crew, she is quite equal to do. Our own impression is, that the Rangoon governor has put his head in jeopardy, and that his acts will be repudiated by the court at Ava, and full indemnity be granted.—Hurkaru, Dec. 6.

NATIVE CAVALRY.—The Hurkaru has heard that a committee will probably be appointed to report on the present state of the regular cavalry regiments with a view to convert them into irregulars.

NATIVE MAGISTRATES.—The Englishman mentions a report that the Governor-General has lately recorded a minute on the absolute necessity of placing a native gentleman upon the bench of magistrates in Calcutta, and desiring the Government of Bengal to select a properly qualified person for the office, who shall have a salary of Rs. 800 a month.

MURDER OF MESSRS. CARNE AND TAPP.—It is our melancholy duty to announce the murder of Mr. H. A. Carne, superintendent of salt mines in the Punjab, and of Mr. Tapp, a nephew of the late General Tapp, and customs patrol on the Indus between Attok and Torbela. It appears that Mr. Carne, anxious to make arrangements for the prevention of salt smuggling, from the right to the left bank of the Indus, and into the Hazara country from the north, had been examining the frontier lines in those directions, in company with Mr. Tapp, and had proceeded as far east as Mozufurabad on the Jelum. From thence he was returning to the Indus, by another road, further north, at all times considered dangerous by the authorities, when his party was waylaid and himself and companion barbarously murdered, as it is supposed, at the instigation of the wuzeer of a neighbouring chief. The bodies were brought into the camp of Lieut. Henderson, commanding the 3rd Punjab infantry, which has been removed from Husan Abdal to a new station about seven miles from Hurkisenghur, so that no doubt can possibly exist of the truth of the accounts received.—Delhi Gaz. Dec. 8.

THE AGRA BONUS FUND. we are informed, is making rapid progress, and will in all probability be carried by the date specified, viz. the 15th inst. Up to the 4th inst. the assents received by the committee were 87, the dissents 16 only, while the parties who had sent no definite answer numbered 25. Ten more assents will give the required majority. Comparing the sums obtained for military retirements, we cannot but congratulate the service upon the prospect of completing so cheap a purchase.—Ibid.

THE TURKISH SUFFERERS.—The Government has hurriedly, and in obedience to instructions from the Court of Directors, passed an Act to amend that "for the relief of certain sufferers from the insolvency of Sir Thomas Turton." The parliamentary committee excluded from the benefit of its recommendation for payment the claimants on those estates of intestates, not being European British subjects, which had been administered by the registrar without the authority of the statute, and those of testators who had by will appointed him executor, but the Indian Legislature nevertheless included these in the Relief Act. This the Court of Directors has disallowed, and hence the present enactment, which will save to the Company about a lakh of rupees.—Hurkaru, Dec. 6.

THE REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON SHIP BURNING has been printed. It embodies numerous suggestions for the prevention of incendiary fires on vessels manned by native seamen.—Ibid.

THE FINANCIAL SECRETARY.—It is not true, as asserted in some of the Calcutta journals, that Mr. Dorin received any wig from the Governor-General. Mr. Dorin has himself publicly contradicted the report.

THE RAILWAY.—We are happy to state, that the contracts for the line from Pandooah to the collieries, 81 miles, were confirmed at the close of last week. It was a question of time versus money, and time carried the day. In this country it has always been the practice, from the days of Sullivan to the present year, to sacrifice time in order to save money; we have now for the first time, and not unwisely, expended money to save time. This is no small reformation for the railway to have effected within so short a period as two years, and we may henceforward look forward with confidence to our "going a-head," like England and America. In the first section of about 40 miles from Howrah to Pandooah, the embankment has been thrown up, with the exception of some four or five miles, and it is now to be left for the next rains to settle. Meanwhile, the contractors are busy in burning their ballast, and not a day passes without the cheerful sight of boats laden with rails and sleepers, and redolent of creosote, passing up the river. Mr. Turnbull, the chief engineer of the railway company, having assiated in settling the contracts for the second section of the line, has now proceeded with a competent staff to survey the line of road from the neighbourhood of Burdwan to Rajmahal.—Friend of India, Dec. 4.

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE.—We have to congratulate that useful and intelligent body of public officers, the Uncovenanted Service, on the prospect of promotion, now held out to them in the revenue and judicial department. We hear, on good authority, that the Saugor and Nerbuda territories are, without any further delay, to be settled under Regulation IX. of 1833, and that a few uncovenanted deputy collectors will be "wanted" to conduct the settlement. After the completion of the settlement, these gentlemen will, of course, with several others, be retained in those territories, as permanent deputy collectors and magistrates.—Lahore Chronicle, Dec. 6.

BHUGOL SING, the well known chief of the gang of dakoits, who committed such a daring robbery in the Batala district last year, murdered the Feerozpoor district chokedar, and eluded the vigilance of the police, has at length been captured.

THE MANAGERS OF THE MARTINIÈRE have sanctioned a plan for devoting one-third of the annual profits arising from the schooling fees of day scholars and pay boarders to the foundation of scholarships for those who are not on the regular foundation of the institution.

SIR HENRY ELLIOT is stated to be unwell at Saharunpoor.

APPRAV.—Three civil servants, a military officer, and a member of a mercantile firm, were all taken before the junior magistrate yesterday, on the charge of breaking into a house of an improper description, kept by a Mrs. Jane Jones, and assaulting two men from whom they had endured some insult or ill-treatment. As the magistrate, Mr. Wylie, could not do more than fine them 100 rupees each, and deemed that by no means a sufficient punishment, he decided, somewhat too severely, we think, that the case should be sent up to the sessions. The gentlemen entreated him to reconsider his decision, for that it would be utter ruin to them. If they are all youngsters, as we believe they are, the magistrate might have given them a chance to recover lost ground; but some religionists think that the best way to convert a sinner is to drive him to desperation.—Hurkara, Nov. 26.

RAJAH RADHAKANT has accepted the office of president of the British Indian Association, and Rajah Kalikrishna that of vice-president.

THE SIMLA GAMBLING CASE.—A correspondent of one of the Calcutta journals, writing from Meerut, mentions a rumour, resting on strong foundation, to the effect that the great gambling case, which made so great a stir at Simla last year, in which the name of Mr. McChlery, of the civil service, was involved, is again likely to be brought to the notice of the public; an individual having been heard to say, on oath, that he knows the party who marked the cards, and that it was not Mr. McChlery.

MILITARY FUND.—The Bengal army has rejected, by a majority of only fifteen, the proposition for permitting assistant-chaplains of nine years' service to subscribe to the Military Fund as majors.

MENACED CHANGES.—We are informed that a letter has been received from Lord Ellenborough by a gentleman resident in this country, in which his lordship states that great changes may, ere long, be anticipated in the Government of this country.—Delhi Gazette, Dec. 3.

ENSIGN W. N. LEE, of the 42d N. L. I. has received a certificate of high proficiency in the Oordoo language.

ON DITS.—Capt. F. A. Miles, art., is about to retire from the service. On Mr. Boulderson's retirement, N. W. P., which is certain, the officiating member, Mr. D. B. Morrieson, will succeed to the permanent appointment, and that it is only in the event of Mr. F. H. Robinson, the present junior member, accepting the bonus, and retiring, which it is generally expected he will do, that Mr. J. Thornton will become a member of the board; otherwise he will be appointed Commissioner of Rohilkund, vice Mr. H. Pidcock, who certainly goes home.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDER.

RELIEF OF ARTILLERY.

Head Quarters, Simla, Nov. 6, 1851.—With the sanction of the Honourable the President in Council, the artillery detachments at Dacca and Berhampore are, henceforward, to be relieved annually, in the month of February, instead of every five months, as directed in General Orders of the 12th of June and 29th of July, 1850.

MADRAS.

THE TANJORE BOND.—We understand that the opinion of the Advocate-General, which, as we before intimated, is hostile to some subordinates of the Accountant-General's department, in connection with the Tanjore Bond, has now been submitted to Government, and that it recommends immediate measures being taken against the parties said to be implicated.—Spectator, Nov. 21.

THREE NATIVE CANDIDATES FOR ORDINATION were about to be admitted into the ministry of the Free Church at Madras. They have been engaged as preachers of the Gospel in the vernacular languages for the last six years.

SCHOOL OF ARTS.—The Madras U. S. Gazette states that there is every probability of the superintendence of the School of Arts at Madras, created by Dr. Hunter, being made a Government appointment with suitable allowances.

INCREASE OF THE ARTILLERY.—The same journal states that the Governor-General has received permission to raise another battalion of artillery at each presidency, should he consider such an increase advisable.

VEPERY CHURCH REGISTER.—The Madras journals inform us, that the register-books of the Vepery Church for the last ten years have been abstracted, and are not to be recovered.

THE MADRAS RAILWAY.—The railway committee have had a meeting, at which it was proposed to address Government relative to the publication of the papers connected with that contemplated undertaking, and that his Honour in Council has authorized the same at the expense of the state. This is a creditable concession to the community's wishes.—Spectator, Dec. 5.

LORD STANLEY had left Madras in the Haddington, for Calcutta. The benighted presidency has furnished him with abundant materials for present meditation and future action, and there is, perhaps, no man in the British peerage more capable of doing justice to opportunities of observation. A correspondent of the Spectator asks why he did not seek information at the hands of editors, merchants, and others. We believe he did, so far as lay in his power, and we know of one journalist to whom he expressed his obligations on that score. Lord Stanley has left an impression on the minds of all who conversed with him, in the highest degree favourable to his reputation as a man of genuine ability, and we sincerely hope that the remainder of his stay in the East may be as pleasant to himself as we are sure it will be serviceable to the community.—Athenaeum, Dec. 4.

BONUS.—The Athenaeum understands that Captain White, of the 47th M. N. I., retires from the service immediately, receiving Rs. 20,000 from the regiment.

FRACAS AT A COURT-MARTIAL.—The Bangalore Herald, on the faith of a private letter from Kamptee, mentions a report prevalent there, that a fracas had arisen at the court-martial of Lieutenant Buchanan, of the 4th Light Cavalry, of so serious a nature as to lead to fresh charges being preferred against him by the court.

MADRAS ASSOCIATION.—The Athenaeum states that an association has been formed for the gathering of information from all quarters as to the social and political condition of all classes in the presidency of Madras. "The value of the information which the members of the association have set themselves to gather against the commencement of the charter discussions," it observes, "will be inestimable. The wants of the people of India in the several matters of roads, bridges, and works of irrigation; the augmentation or improvement required in the educational, judicial, fiscal, and religious establishments; the whole internal working of its arbitrary government; present fields for inquiry on which all the ability and zeal of the infant association may be profitably exhausted."

DR. CADENHEAD, of the Madras service (who died at Sumbul-pore on the 17th November), was a person of remarkable abilities and acquirements, and of a generous and manly spirit. He possessed a scientific knowledge of his profession in general; was a skilful oculist, and well versed in chemistry. After having been employed for some years in the usual duties of the medical service, with the exception of some time spent in charge of the assay office at the Madras Mint, he was appointed to political office in Ganjam, and in the hill tracts of Orissa. He there became a perfect master of the Oorya tongue, and was certainly the first, perhaps the only, European, who ever acquired the strange and isolated language of the Khonds. In his capacity of principal assistant in the agency for reclaiming the Hill tribes from the Meriah sacrifice, he rendered most important services to humanity; and when he was (with the other officers of the agency) insultingly removed from office by Sir Herbert Maddock without having even been asked whether the accusations brought against him by General Dyce were true or false, he concurred in the demand which was made for an inquiry, and the result was, that every part of his conduct received the high commendation of the Government of India. He was subsequently employed in the south-west frontier agency, and was intrusted with the delicate task of taking under British management, for the first time, the newly lapsed principality of Sumbulpore, with its wild and jealous population. In this labour he was, in the opinion of those who are best enabled to judge, eminently successful, but his exertions destroyed a constitution undermined by the ever-smouldering fever of the districts in which it was his lot to serve, and he died at his post, in the midst of a career of industrious and unpretending usefulness; already marked as one whose kindly yet energetic character, and whose powers of thought and action, fitted him for the foremost rank in all difficult and important political service.—Englishman, Dec. 6.

ON-DRA.—Col. Luard succeeds to the command of Jaulnah, and was to start immediately for that station. The command of Masulipatam was offered to Col. Derville, who declined it, and it is supposed that Col. Yaldwyn will succeed thereto. Brigadier James will be appointed to the command of the Northern division in February, when Brigadier-General Dyce's tour on the staff will expire. The Spectator anticipates the command of the Hyderabad subsidiary force devolving upon Col. Vivian.—U. S. Gaz. Dec. 5.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

ANNUITIES FROM CIVIL FUND.

Fort St. George Civil Fund Office, Dec. 1, 1851.—The following gentlemen have accepted annuities from the Civil Fund:—Alexander Fairlie Bruce, Esq.; John Chardin Wroughton Esq.; Edward Penton Thompson, Esq.; and Henry Morris, Esq.

OFF-RECKONINGS.

Fort St. George, Dec. 2, 1851.—In consequence of the demise of Colonel (Lieutenant-General) Sir Hugh Fraser, K.C.B. of the infantry, the following addition to the list of officers entitled to off-reckonings is authorized:—

Col. William John Butterworth, C.B., to half-share from the Off-Reckoning Fund from the 7th Oct. 1851.

SEPOYS OF 39TH N.I.

Head Quarters, Choultry Plain, Nov. 18, 1851.—At a General Court-martial, held at Cannanore, on Oct. 6, 1851, Doorgah Sing, Havildar Gholam Hyder, Havildar Lallah Mean, Naique Shaikh Dawood, and six privates of the 39th N.I., were arraigned on the following charges, viz:—

First.—For having at Kollatoor, in the district of Malabar, on Aug. 24, 1851, when belonging to a detachment of the 39th N. I., under the command of Ens. Sidney French Turner of the same regiment, misbehaved themselves before a body of Moplah fanatics in arms, against whom they were led, by shamefully retreating in disorder and panic before them.

Second.—For having at the same time and place, when in the presence of a body of Moplah fanatics in arms, against whom they were led, as set forth in the first charge, shamefully cast away their arms, the prisoner Gholam Ayder Havildar, casting away his accoutrements and ammunition also.

Finding.—Guilty.

Sentence.—Doorgah Sing, Havildar, Gholam Hyder Havildar, and Lalla Mean, Naique, to be reduced to the ranks, and further to suffer imprisonment for two years, and to be kept in solitary confinement for the first twenty-eight days in the third, sixth, and ninth months of each year: and Shaikh Dawood, private, Venkutsawmy, private, Venkennah, private, Condisah, private, Comarasawmy, private, Bhulram Sing, private, and Madranogam, private, to suffer imprisonment for two years, and to be kept in solitary confinement for the first twenty-eight days in the third, sixth, and ninth months of each year.

Recommendation.—The Court having performed their duty in awarding punishment adequate to the offences of which the prisoners have been found guilty, most respectfully and unanimously recommend the prisoners to the merciful consideration of H. E. the C.-in-C., as they have no doubt that the men became panic-struck and thrown into disorder, when attacked by the Moplah fanatics, as they were in such a position that they could neither use their bayonets, nor fire on the enemy, while drawn up in files. Had they, on the contrary, been formed in line facing towards the Moplahs, which the ground admitted of, when both muskets and bayonets would have come into play, the Court are sure that they would then have behaved as gallantly as they did on the 27th of August last, and as some of them did in September, 1849, against a similar band of Moplah fanatics in arms.

The finding is approved, but the sentence not confirmed.

(Signed) R. ARMSTRONG, Lieut. Gen. Com.-in-C.
Head-Quarters, Madras, Nov. 17, 1851.

Remarks.—I entirely disagree with the Court as to the adequacy of the punishment awarded. In my opinion it is most incommensurate with the crimes of which the prisoners have been convicted, and obviously inappropriate, as it retains in the service men who have shown their utter unfitness for it.

These individuals were selected for trial, as, in addition to misbehaviour before an enemy, they were guilty of the shameful crime of casting away their arms, thus basely reducing themselves to helplessness, in the hope of securing their individual safety, by unencumbered flight.

I am surprised at the Court's sentence, but more so, at their recommendation in favour of the prisoners. Their apology for them is based on error, and inadmissible. The detachment was formed for passing a causeway in its front, but the men fled on the first intimation of the advance of the Moplahs, without giving an opportunity to their officer to form the best front he could to oppose the attack. As for the affair on the 27th of August, it is very uncertain what amount of good conduct was displayed on that occasion. On that day, six of the prisoners, at the least computation, were confessedly without arms! And little appears known about the others that can be relied on.

In deciding not to demand from the Court a more severe sentence, I have given the prisoners the benefit of every circumstance that can reasonably be urged in their favour, but they shall not disgrace the ranks of the army. They have abandoned their arms in the face of a paltry number of half-armed fanatics. I consider the act as a voluntary renunciation on their part of the character of soldiers, and I direct their immediate discharge.

(Signed) R. ARMSTRONG, Lieut.-General.

At a General Court-martial held at Cannanore, on the 6th October, 1851, and continued by adjournment, Subadar Hoomeer Cawn, 39th N.I., was arraigned on the following charge, viz:—

Charge.—For having at Kollatoor, in the district of Malabar, on August 24, 1851, when employed with a detachment of 39th N.I., under the command of Ens. Sidney French Turner of the same Regt. against a band of armed Moplah fanatics, on being spoken to by the said ens. immediately previous to going into action, regarding the mode of attack he had in view, used words tending to create alarm and despondency in the men of the detachment in substance and effect as follows, namely, "we must not go there, it is a difficult place; they must come here to the maidan. If we go now we will suffer loss; there is mud, and paddy and water, and the Sepoys may fall in. These people are not an enemy, they are thieves and robbers, and there is no honour in killing them. These people (meaning the Moplah fanatics) also say, 'we will not come out to-day,' therefore it is better for us to wait till to-morrow."

Finding.—Not Guilty.

(Confirmed.) R. ARMSTRONG, Lieut.-Gen.-in-C.

Head Quarters, Madras, Nov. 17, 1851.

Remarks.—Subadar Hoomeer Cawn is an old officer of forty-two years' service, and of unexceptionable character. It was wrong in Ensign Turner to consult him in the hearing of his men; and I believe the subadar had no intention to say anything to discourage them. I have therefore confirmed the opinion of the Court. I must, however, express my displeasure that this respectable officer should have condescended in his defence to cast imputations on the conduct of his superior officer, and to avail himself of the evidence of unscrupulous witnesses to support them, for there is sufficient reason to believe that their testimony in some particulars is not worthy of credit.

(Signed) R. ARMSTRONG, Lieut. Gen.

Subadar Hoomeer Cawn is to be released from arrest and to return to his duty.

We withheld a quotation of the rates of freight, as any such would be entirely nominal, owing to the unsteadiness that prevails. The downward tendency is strong.

BOMBAY.

THE LONDON MAIL of November 9th arrived at Bombay on December 9th, per Feroze.

THE MORTALITY TABLE for the past month of November for the town and islands of Bombay and Colaba shows the total number of deaths to have been 793, of which 21 occurred from cholera, 11 from unnatural, and 761 from natural causes.

THE SCINDER CAMEL CORPS is, under orders from the Court of Directors, to be disbanded from the 31st December.

A LETTER FROM ADEN states that the political agent of that place has received letters from Lahedge announcing the execution of the assassin of Capt. Milne, who, it is said, was put to death with the same dagger with which he perpetrated the murder.

EUROPEAN IMPLEMENTS.—We mentioned some weeks since that amongst the improved implements exhibited to the wondering tradesmen at Poona by Mr. Green was an English loom with the fly-shuttle: this, we learn, is now being brought into use. The German missionaries are getting the same implement introduced into the Southern Mahratta country, and several fly-shuttle-loom are now being made up at the Bombay School of Industry, under the supervision of a soldier of the 8th Foot, here with the view of being invalided, and who proposes to give instruction in this variety of weaving during his stay in the presidency. The merits of a contrivance that will enable one man to do the work of three, without additional expense or labour, are easily understood.—B. Times, Dec. 3.

THE JUBBULPORE SCHOOL OF INDUSTRY having fulfilled the great primary end for which it was established, is now performing a secondary piece of service to society, to which its promoters have all along looked forward. Disease and death have now reduced the number of thugs and approvers, of whom the school originally consisted, to 400, able to work in the factory, most of whom have grown grey in the service; and the work is mostly performed by their descendants—smart, active young fellows, of unblemished name, who draw amongst them in wages above Rs. 1,000 a month. Last year a considerable colony was dispatched to establish a factory at Meerut, with capital sufficient to meet preliminary charges: this is now so flourishing, that Capt. Sleeman contemplates sending off, from time to time, swarms from the parent hive to establish themselves as manufacturers up and down through the districts. A den of thieves—a colony of plunderers—has, through wise and judicious management, become the means of increasing the wealth and extending and improving the industry against which they and their ancestors had warred. The ends thus worked out at Jubbulpore are what the founders of the Bombay school have always had in contemplation, and which, it is to be hoped, if their present prosperity continue, they may not long hence see in effect.—Ibid.

MINERALS IN SEHWAN.—The Bombay Times states, that the commissioner of Scinde has started on a tour across the hills from Karrachee to Sehwan, with the view of searching for the copper and iron ore said to abound in them.

DUNJEEBHoy FRAMJEE has laid before the Bombay Branch of the Asiatic Society a specimen of a Zend dictionary in the English language. At the commencement of the work is a comparative table of the Zend alphabet with those of the Persian, Pehlivi, Hebrew, Cuneiform, Sanskrit, Gujrati, Greek, and Roman languages, in which their articulation is pointed out in their respective classes; and a preliminary discourse on the origin and authenticity of the Zend language and the Zend Avesta.

BARODA.—By a native letter from Baroda we learn that the Guicowar is daily losing even the small degree of respect which he has lately enjoyed. He seems more and more determined to allow himself to be made a puppet in the hands of his minister Tambekur. The latter, evidently aware that his season of power will soon be at an end, seems now to be desperate; and appears determined, so long as he remains in office, to wreak his vengeance upon all those who have opposed him.—Bombay Telegraph, Dec. 17.

MR. HAMILTON, the resident at Indore, is making a progress through Malwa, in which province he is the chief British representative, and in which, as letters from that quarter inform us, he is introducing many beneficial improvements among the numerous Hindoo and Mahomedan chiefs under his control. The resident's camp consists of about 2,000 men and 1,000 animals of all descriptions. Its movements must prove somewhat expensive to the native states, who voluntarily furnish necessary supplies without asking for a pice. To the great credit of Mr. Hamilton, it must be observed, however, that he has this year dispensed with the usage of accepting 'Zeyafets,' though apparently against the custom and wishes of the chiefs; and he seems determined to follow the same praiseworthy course, if not obliged to depart from it by the earnest entreaties of some of the princes, who, according to the native custom, consider it discreditable to their reputation to allow a distinguished visitor to go away without partaking of their hospitality; but when the rule now judiciously introduced, is made general, no infamy of the kind will be apprehended by any party.—Telegraph, Dec. 17.

A DONATION OF Rs. 1000 has been ordered by the Court of Directors to be given to Lieut. J. F. Lester, 10th Bombay N.I., for proficiency in four native languages—Hindoostanee, Mahratta, Goozerattee, and Scindee. Lieut. Lester is a deputy collector and magistrate at Sukkur.

SHERIFF FOR 1852.—Mr. J. L. Johnson, stipendiary commissioner of the Court of Requests, has been appointed Sheriff of Bombay for the ensuing year.

A SEVERE STORM visited the coast of Scinde on the 21st and 22nd ult.—one of the severest felt in that quarter for many years past—and it is feared that the steamer Surat, belonging to the Bombay Steam Navigation Company, has foundered in it. The H.C.'s steamer Ajdaha has been despatched in quest of this vessel, in the hope that she may have only been disabled.—B. Times, Dec. 17.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDER.

PASSAGE MONEY.

Bombay Castle, Dec. 8, 1851.—The following General Order by the Hon. the President of the Council of India in Council, No. 618, dated Fort William, Nov. 21, 1851, is published as applicable at this presidency.

In conformity with instructions contained in paragraph 4, of a despatch from the Hon. the Court of Directors, No. 87, of the 13th August, 1851, the Hon. the President of the Council of India in Council, is pleased to announce that when officers of Her Majesty's or of the Hon. Company's service, are appointed to the charge of invalids or time expired men proceeding to England, the passage money allowed on their account will be that of their regimental rank.

2. Under ordinary circumstances a field officer should not be appointed to the charge of a party consisting of less than 150 men, nor a captain to one under 60.

CEYLON.

THE most prominent item of our intelligence is of a mournful caste. Mr. James Stewart, the youthful, but most learned and able gentleman, who for two years had acted as Queen's advocate of Ceylon, is dead—smitten down in the midst of his labours, and at the opening of a career brighter, as far as honours and high office in the State are concerned, than any hitherto thrown open to a Euro-Asiatic. That a young man born in this country, and never beyond its precincts, should, by the mere force of learning and talent, reach, before he was thirty, the highest post at the bar, and one of the highest in the Government and councils of the land, is a phenomenon that deserves special notice. We would dwell on the fact as a proof that the liberal policy of the British in this island affords much encouragement to exertion on the part of its sons. They have reason to cherish fondly the memory of one who did so much to redeem their character.

The arrival of Mr. Justice Starke, and the temporary vacation of office on account of sickness by Messrs. J. Staples and T. Gibson, have led to changes in the service. Mr. W. C. Gibson has been confirmed as auditor-general. Mr. Chas. Peter Layard is to be confirmed as Government agent of the Western Province. Mr. Cripps, of Galle, is looked for by an early mail, and there are some rumours to the effect, that Mr. Dyke, of Jaffna, goes home on leave. The Governor remains at Kandy. His Excellency has been fêted by the Kandian chiefs.

An experienced and intelligent planter whom we have met is of opinion that the crop of plantation coffee will nearly equal that of last season, while it is pretty evident, from the transactions that have already taken place, that a full crop of native is expected.—Colombo Observer, Dec. 15.

The Ceylon Times has heard, that a native Singalese lately found a sapphire near Rutnapoor of about two pounds weight! The fortunate finder has sold it to some still more fortunate person for 140l.

CHINA.

THE LONDON MAIL of September the 24th arrived at Hong-kong November 14. The subsequent mail, that of October 24, left Point de Galle November 28, for China.

We have not any very important intelligence regarding the still-continued rebellion. The Canton mandarins are purchasing warlike stores in great quantities; we know of one particular commission for a hundred barrels of powder, and one, two, and three-pounder-guns, with corresponding shot; besides hand-grenades, rockets, and rocket tubes, which have been duly supplied. A party, who has excellent means of ascertaining the real state of affairs, writes:—"Matters are truly alarming—I feel certain that Teen-teh will be in Canton before the Chinese New Year." Lately we had some conversation with a person who three months ago was in Peking, and who reached Canton by the way of Kwang-si. He says that, at the capital, every attempt was being made to keep the people in the dark as to the progress of the Southern rebels; the absence of allusion to them in the Peking Gazette is corroborative of this. Teen-teh, he says, is no myth; he saw him, and spoke to several of his officers. He is of the clan Le, not of the clan Fong, as reported. Our informant did not think that Teen-teh cared much about reaching Peking yet, being content, if he succeeds, with dividing the empire into two parts, of which he rules the southern. Teen-teh, he added, is now only waiting until he gains more friends in and about the city of Canton; and he depends a good deal on what the Toong-koon men will do for him.

Governor Yeh has been more than usually cruel during the last month; and one unfortunate rebel leader was, horrible to relate, flayed alive, as a warning to others of what they may expect should they fall into his hands.

The Yellow River has again burst its banks, and has given some check to trade at the northern ports; goods intended for the interior having to be conveyed by other and circuitous routes, with additional transit dues equaling nearly ten per cent. on foreign manufactures. Freebootery is as rife as ever; but the robbers (some call them Teen-tih rebels) having managed matters to their perfect satisfaction below 32 deg. N. lat., have now proceeded further up the coast, and hang about the mouth of the Yellow River and the Grand Canal.—Friend of China, Nov. 28.

LOMBOK.

WIDOW-MURDER AMONGST THE BALINESE.—A gusti, who died at Ampanan, left three wives. One of them resolved to be kised in honour of him. She was still young and beautiful; she had no children. The day after the death of the gusti, his wife took many baths; clothed in the richest manner, she passed the day with relatives and friends, drinking, chewing sirih, and praying. Before the house, they had erected two scaffoldings or platforms of bambu, of the length of a man, and three feet above the ground. Under these they had dug a small pit to receive the water and the blood. In the afternoon, men brought out the body of the gusti, wrapped in fine linen, and placed it on the left of the two central platforms. A priest of Mataram removed the cloth from the body, while young persons threw water over the corpse, washed it, combed the hair, and covered the whole body with champeka and kanding flowers. They then brought a white net. The priest took a silver cup, filled with holy water (called char), on which he strewed flowers. He sprinkled the deceased with this water, and then poured it through the net on the body, which he blessed, praying, singing, and making various mystical and symbolical motions. He afterwards powdered the body with flour of coloured rice and chopped flowers, and placed it on dry mats. Women brought out the wife on their crested arms. She was clothed with a piece of white linen only. Her hair was crowned with flowers of the Chrysanthemum Indicum. She betrayed neither fear nor regret. She placed herself standing before the body of her husband, raised her arms, and made a prayer in silence. Women approached her, and presented to her small bouquets of flowers. She took them one by one, and placed them between the fingers of her hands raised above her head. On this the women took them away and dried them. On receiving and giving back each bouquet, she turned a little to the right, so that when she had received the whole she had turned quite round. She prayed anew in silence, went to the corpse of her husband, kissed it, and returned to her place. They took off her rings. She crossed her arms on her breast. Two women took her by the arms. Her brother (by adoption) placed himself before her, and asked her, with a soft voice, if she was determined to die; and when she gave a sign of assent with her head, he asked her forgiveness for being obliged to kill her. He seized his kris and stabbed her on the left side of the breast, but not very deeply, so that she remained standing. He then threw his kris down, and ran off. A man of consideration approached her, and buried his kris to the hilt in the breast of the unfortunate woman, who sunk down without a cry. The women placed her on a mat, and sought by rolling and pressure to cause the blood to flow quickly. The victim being not yet dead, she was stabbed again with a kris between the shoulders. They then laid her on the second platform, near her husband. The same ceremonies that had taken place for him now began for the wife. When all was ended, both bodies were covered with resin and cosmetic stuffs, enveloped in white linen, and placed in the small side-house on the platforms. There they remain until the time arrives for their being burned together.—Journ. Indian Archipelago.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

The advices from Cape Town are to the 22d December, when the state of affairs at the seat of the war was most discouraging. The Caffres and Hottentots continued their incursions, carrying off cattle, burning farms, and murdering the colonists. In an affair at Blinkwater, a loss was sustained of three officers, including Lieut. col. Fordyce, of the 74th Highlanders, and several men.

It appears that, after the attack on the Waterkloof, preparations were made for dislodging the enemy from the heights of the kloof, and on the 6th of November, three columns, with six 6-pounders, under Major-gen. Somerset, Col. Fordyce, and Col. Michel, marched for that purpose. Col. Fordyce reached his ground first, and determined on attacking a number of the enemy who appeared on the heights. He had advanced nearly to the edge of the rocks and bush, and was about taking up a position, when a shot struck him in the breast, and he fell, mortally wounded. The regiment (the 74th), having only partially received his orders, was for a moment in confusion, and the enemy sprang up and hurried exultingly, but, immediately sheltering themselves behind the rocks, poured upon the unfortunate troops a deadly fire, killing and disabling fourteen officers and men. Lieut. Carey was also mortally wounded, and Lieut. Gordon was shot through both thighs, the bone of the right being shattered. A sergeant was dragged into the bush. It is said that nearly the last words of the colonel were, "Take care of my regiment." All this lasted but a short time, and but little firing comparatively took place. The general, with the advance of his column, reached the heights as the conflict was going on, and dispositions were made to extricate the regiment from its perilous position. The guns were brought round to command the fastnesses, and a mule-wagon sent down for the wounded. The rest of the day was spent in firing shot and shells upon the enemy wherever he appeared. The next day, the guns were, as before, in play wherever they could be used, and when the troops came out of the bush, they extended over the plain, joined by the Fingoes and Levies, and a general engagement commenced. The enemy as usual gave way, only to come out again and annoy the retiring force. Some of them, however, paid for their hardihood. The rear was covered by the European corps and a portion of the Kat River Levy. Several of the enemy had crossed the plain, and entered the bush by the slip path, but they were driven out. The enemy fired, it is said, with astonishing accuracy. Three of the 91st were wounded, and one or two Fingoes, and Capt. Devenish, of the Beaufort West Levy, was dangerously hit by an expended ball in the head. The day was rainy, and the night and next morning were so severe, that our troops were obliged to abandon their position, and return to camp at Blinkwater. It is supposed that the remaining force in the Waterkloof is chiefly Hottentots. Capt. Devenish and Lieut. Gordon had since died, as well as Ensign Ricketts, of the 91st, who was wounded in the preceding affair.

The next movement was to be a combined one of the two divisions under Gen. Somerset and Col. Mackinnon, across the Kye, against Krel; the force to consist of 1,000 cavalry and 2,000 infantry. They were to move from the Umwani on the 2nd December.

A spirited affair occurred on the 3rd November, between a company of the 73rd, under Lieut. Knox, and a body of 50 Hottentots and Caffres, driving twenty-four head of cattle. Lieut. Knox divided his party into three detachments, and attacked the enemy, killing six and wounding severely many others, and recapturing the whole of the cattle without any casualty. They captured also some arms and ammunition. A patrol of Stubbs's Horse had also attacked a party of marauders near Howison's Poort, when seventy cattle were recaptured, three Caffres killed, and three guns taken.

The G. T. Journal of November 25th states that the news beyond the Kei indicates great restlessness among the tribes in those parts, more especially the Amagcaleka under Krel, and a portion of the Abatembu; and that some further bad feeling had been excited between the Fingoes near Morley and the Tambookies under the chief Jool.

At the Orange River things still remained unsettled.

The draft ordinances for constituting a Parliament at the Cape had been received with great satisfaction. A large meeting was held on the 2nd December, at which an address to her Majesty was adopted, praying that the main principles of the constitution may not be altered, but carried into effect without delay.

The colonial delegates, Sir A. Stockenström and Mr. Fairbairn, had arrived. They were received with the most marked demonstrations of respect.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON,

FRIDAY, January 16, 1852.

THE war in South Africa,—which, though a little one, is fast absorbing our surplus revenue,—at length wears a less hopeless aspect. In its military incidents, indeed, the contest is as sad and disheartening as ever; our best officers are shot down by the Caffres, and our regular troops retire before an enemy we affected to despise. Sir Harry Smith, well acquainted by past experience with Caffre campaigning, has been baffled by savages, and the home authorities, having determined to supersede him, seem disposed to try the chance of substituting an officer who knows nothing whatever of that species of warfare. But hostilities have happily ceased between the Cape colonists and the Secretary of State for the Colonies. The bellum plusquam civile they have been carrying on for the last two years has been terminated by a treaty of peace, though not of amity, in the shape of a liberal constitution, which, though tardily conceded by Earl Grey, has been hailed with joy and gratitude by the Cape community. This event, if we are not mistaken, will exert a favourable influence upon the frontier war, by invigorating the energies of the colonists, hitherto palsied by disappointment and discontent, and securing their hearty co-operation.

The new constitution is contained in two draughts of ordinances to be passed by the Legislative Council of the Cape of Good Hope, for the purpose of bringing into operation her Majesty's Letters Patent of 1850. The object of the first is to determine the mode of constituting the Legislative Council and House of Assembly, which, with the Governor, are to be the future Parliament of the colony; the purpose of the second ordinance is to create certain permanent charges on the revenue, and to sanction certain expenditure already incurred.

The Legislative Council is to consist of the Chief Justice, as president, and fifteen elective members, eight chosen in the western districts and seven in the eastern. Of the first Council, the eight members elected by the fewest votes are to retire at the expiration of five years, and the remaining seven at the expiration of ten years; the members afterwards elected to hold their seats for ten years, unless the Council be sooner dissolved. A member of the Council must be thirty years of age, and must own landed property, unmortgaged, worth £1,000, or else landed property of that amount which, though mortgaged, will, with his moveable property, constitute him the owner of £2,000. The House of Assembly is to consist of forty-six members, elected for five years; seven members to form a quorum. The House to elect its speaker. The members of the Legislative Council to be elected before those of the House of Assembly. Every male person, twenty-one years of age, who shall have occupied, within any electoral division, for twelve months, a tenement value £25, is entitled to be registered as a voter for members of both houses; excepting aliens, placemen, uncertificated insolvents, insane persons, and convicted felons. The Governor is to summon the two houses to meet at such time and place as he shall think fit. A session of the Parliament is to be held once at least in every year. The Governor may prorogue the two houses whenever he shall see fit, and may dissolve one or both houses at his pleasure. All Bills granting supplies or imposing taxes are to originate in the House of Assembly. No Bill appropriating any sum of money from the public revenue can be enacted, unless the Governor shall have recommended the House of Assembly to make provision for the specified public service. The Governor may give or refuse his assent to any Bill, or may reserve it for the Royal pleasure, or may return it with amendments to either house, at his pleasure; but a Bill assented to by the Governor may be disallowed within two years by her Majesty in Council. Every member of either house residing more than ten miles from the place at which the Parliament meets, is to receive £1 per day for every day spent in travelling to and from, or in attending at, any session of Parliament.

This constitution is in strict conformity with the scheme proposed in the Letters Patent, and varies but slightly from that proposed by the retiring members of Council, embodying, at the same time, certain suggestions in matters of detail contained in the Report of the Board of Commissioners in the colony; and it is deeply to be lamented that it should have been withheld so long. For what purpose the colonists have been tantalized with the prospect of such a constitution, then threatened with the withdrawal of it and the substitution of another, and kept in painful suspense for nearly two years, unless in order to irritate them, it is not easy to divine. In his letter to the Governor which accompanies the ordinances, Lord Grey admits that, "independently of any constitutional question which might be raised as to the power of the Crown to vary the terms on which a constitution had already been granted to the colony, no sufficient reason had been shown for departing from a course deliberately taken on the best consideration which her Majesty's servants could give to the subject." Then wherefore the delay?

The ordinances must be passed by the existing Legislative Council at the colony before they can have effect, and we regret to observe, from the last Cape Town papers, that the second reading had been deferred until the 28th of this month,—nearly three weeks having been lost in forwarding them to the Governor, and eight days having intervened between their return and the first reading. The colonists were beginning to complain of this new delay, and to fancy they were trifled with by the colonial authorities. They were impatient for the possession of what they consider a boon, "in order," as one of the most violent of the opposition journals declares, "that mutual good-will, public confidence, peace, and contentment, may be restored,—in order that the hands of the Government may be strengthened."

It will be a great misfortune if the mismanagement of subordinates should mar so fair a prospect.

THE interests of India, at such a critical period in its affairs as the present, are so deeply involved in the question, who are to be the Queen's advisers, that the position of the ministry,—which, weak as it was at the close of the last session of Parliament, has become still weaker,—is a subject which deserves our consideration. In times past, when power was evidently deserting the party in office, it was not difficult to foretell to whose hands it would be transferred; but the case is different now; should the Whigs be ejected, their place must be filled by some new combination of parties, and the uncertainty as to the proportions of the different elements naturally inspires some degree of anxiety.

The removal of Lord Palmerston from the foreign secretaryship so seriously deducts from the strength of the ministry, that the motive must or should have been imperious. Its true cause is yet unexplained; the grounds assigned by the journals and in the Clubs, though not improbable, can yet be regarded only as surmises and conjectures. If the First Minister has been in this instance hasty and indiscreet; if he has extruded an able colleague from an important post for captious or insufficient reasons, his own fate is sealed. If, on the contrary, the conduct of that colleague, however upright and sincere, shall appear to have been adverse to the true policy of this country, Lord John Russell will gain credit for this sacrifice to patriotism, and his ministry may probably acquire a larger share of the confidence of Parliament and the people.

Nevertheless, the position of the present Cabinet is precarious; it has but a doubtful hold upon many members of its own party, whilst the opposition sections,—for it can be scarcely said that there is an opposition party,—though individually weak, are capable of forming in combination (as they have more than once proved) a majority against the ministry upon vital questions. In these circumstances, their retention of office is dependent, not upon their own strength, but upon the want of union amongst their opponents. It would almost seem that the crisis had arrived which was predicted by Paley and the anti-reformers, namely, that the destruction of borough influence in the House of Commons, which preserved a just balance in that assembly, would annihilate a necessary ingredient in the composition of the British constitution, and "so obstruct the conduct of public affairs, as to render it impossible for the wisest statesman to carry forward the business of the nation with success or satisfaction."

It is at this time, when, weakened by desertion, and menaced by various perils,—a formidable, though disunited, opposition, the prospect of a general election, which relaxes the attachment of adherents, and symptoms of distrust amongst the masses of the people,—that the First Minister of the Crown has pledged himself to bring forward a large measure of Parliamentary reform, with the view of not only remedying certain patent anomalies in the existing system, but of widening the basis of the representation. We are not about to discuss the necessity or the prudence of such a measure; we notice it merely with reference to its possible effect upon the permanence of the ministry.

Whilst it is by no means certain that a measure of this nature, proposed by the Government, will satisfy any considerable body of the community, it must offend two large parties,—those who will think it goes too far, and those who will require it to go still farther. The latter have already announced the conditions which they mean to insist upon, and which it is very improbable the framer of the measure will accept. By the other party, we may be sure, it will be denounced as a further step in that revolutionary policy which, as they allege, has characterized Whiggism from the beginning. A third party, more moderate and reasonable than either, may be actuated by a natural apprehension of the ills which attend all experiments upon the constitution. "Political innovations," they will say, in the words of the writer we have before quoted, "commonly produce many effects beside those that are intended; the direct consequence is often the least important; incidental, remote, and unthought-of evils or advantages frequently exceed the good that is designed, or the mischief that is foreseen."

The new Reform Bill, therefore, will be fortunate indeed if it can be steered safely amongst these shoals and quicksands; yet it is the vessel in which the ministry and its fortunes will, perhaps, be embarked. Should they abandon the helm, or be shipwrecked, who will succeed them? This is a question which, as we before remarked, deeply concerns the interests of India, the future government of which must shortly be determined for at least another long period.

It would be idle to speculate upon the composition of the Cabinet that would be formed upon the retirement of the Whigs. It is understood that attempts have been made to fuse with that party some of the Conservatives who have of late approximated pretty closely to their views of general policy, and that those attempts have failed. That, after all, we shall see a Protectionist Cabinet, is very unlikely; yet the Protectionists constitute the only body in the lower house which, after the Whigs, can be dignified with the name of a party. Should the partisans of what is termed the Manchester School possess power enough to force themselves into a composite ministry, India knows what it has to expect.

A few months, probably a few weeks, will decide this question: meanwhile, Dix in melium vertant!

OUR Correspondent, "A Civilian," whose letter appears in a succeeding column, thinks we have dealt unfairly with him, suggesting, in pretty broad terms, that we have been guilty of a breach of duty to the public, and attempted to mislead our readers, in the comments we made upon his preceding letter. This is a charge which cannot be passed over.

Our Correspondent seems not to have noticed that, in this controversy, respecting the degree of knowledge of the native tongues possessed by the Company's servants in India, we have not engaged in the character of principal, but rather as umpire, balancing the evidence before us. Our whole article, down to the concluding paragraph, was hypothetical; we argued that, if the facts are as stated by the "Mahomedan Moonshie," and if no better answer could be offered than was contained in the "Civilian's" first letter, the subject was important enough to demand consideration, with a view of providing a remedy for a serious evil.

With this preliminary observation, we proceed to consider the chief objections urged by the "Civilian."

He states that one of the objects of his first letter was to "correct the notion, which the 'Mahomedan Moonshie' would have spread abroad, that Hindustani is the universal and only necessary language of India;" whereas "nowhere in the South is Hindustani the language of the natives;" as a travelling language in India,—not restricting this assertion to the South,—he says, its utility is equal to that of French in Europe, and to represent it as a universal dialect is an error.

Now, without excepting to the "Civilian's" statement of the argument of the Moonshie,—who did not allege that Hindustani is the "only necessary language of India,"—we must express our surprise that the "Civilian" should have designated as he has done a language which Mr. Shakespear has described as "the most prevalent colloquial dialect," and "the dialect most generally used in India;" and Dr. Forbes, the latest Hindustani lexicographer, as "the principal colloquial language of India." We are quite aware that there are idiomatic varieties between certain dialects of this general tongue, and especially between the Dakni spoken in Peninsular India and the Hindustani of Bengal; but the "Civilian" has certainly overstated the fact, when he says that "if a civilian in the south makes this language his medium of communication with the natives, he might just as well speak English to them." If, as stated by the "Civilian," it is an error, or something worse, to represent this language, which was invented to serve the purpose of a common medium of intercourse between the conquerors and the conquered, as "general" or "universal," in the fair sense of these terms, we can only say that lexicographers and chairmen of the East-India Company are likewise chargeable with error and misrepresentation.

The "Civilian" then accuses us of treating the case he put, of a civil officer in the south of India being sent successively to eight different districts, where eight distinct languages are spoken, as an extreme one, whereas, he says, "it is a case which is every day illustrated throughout the Madras presidency, and I doubt not is equally true of the other presidencies." Our own impression still is, that the case is an extreme one, even in the southern presidency; we are convinced that it must be an extremely rare case in the Bengal provinces. We leave our readers, however, to determine our amount of culpability upon this score, merely repeating that, if the averments of a "Civilian" be correct, the sooner so bad a practice is stopped the better.

In the next place, we are charged with speaking of the aforesaid eight languages as "dialects," thereby "giving the public to imagine that they are merely provincial dialects of some one general language of India." Our correspondent need not surely be told that the term "dialect" is as often used by the best English writers for "language" as for a division of a language. We employed it justifiably in the former sense, to avoid the frequent reiteration of the latter term, and at the close of our article we referred to them as distinct languages. To have supposed them merely collateral branches of one tongue would have weakened the objection we urged to the practice in question; and we must add that the "Civilian" himself, when he stated, in his first letter, in order to palliate the use of interpreters, that "the languages are all so nearly related to each other, that an acquaintance with one enables a careful officer to detect an interpreter in any false play," was much more likely to have misled the public into a belief that these were "merely provincial dialects of some one general language."

Our notion of the character of interpreters, it seems, is quite erroneous; but as the "Civilian" confines this part of his letter to the Madras territories, where, it seems, his experience solely lies, we merely assure him, from our own knowledge, that there are native interpreters in other parts of India, both Hindus and Mahomedans, who can freely speak and write idiomatical English.

Upon the general question, which was raised by the "Mahomedan Moonshie," we may remark that he has said little more than English writers have said upon the deficiency of the public servants in India generally (less, undoubtedly, amongst the civilians than any other class) in the knowledge of the Indian languages: but, knowing him to be a well-informed native, having good opportunities of observation, we deemed his evidence of some importance. Mr. Shore, who held various situations in the police, revenue, and judicial departments, in several provinces of Bengal, and tells us that he had been "in habits of close communication, both private and official, with the people of the country, of all classes, for fifteen years," made the same charge, in more derogatory terms, against "the majority of the civil and military servants" of the Company in those provinces, and adds, that "at Madras the Company's officers are equally ignorant." This is said in an article "On the Use of the Hindostanee Language,"* which he, too,—erroneously, according to the "Civilian,"—treats as "the" language of India.

Let not our correspondent suppose that, in thus vindicating ourselves and the "Moonshie," we wish to discourage his communications; on the contrary, we desire to hear further from him, and particularly upon the "more extensive employment of natives of India in the public service," which we merely suggested as a remedy, if a remedy was needed, and no better could be devised.

* Notes on Indian Affairs, Vol. I., No. V.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—In the Indian Mail of the 3rd of January, just received, I observe an article, which induces me again to trouble you with a letter upon the subject of the deficiency of knowledge, on the part of the Company's servants, of the Indian languages. My object, in my letter which appeared in a previous number, was to correct the notion, which the "Mahomedan Moonshee" would most incorrectly have spread abroad, that the Hindustani is the universal and only necessary language of India, and to show that the interpreter system was an unavoidable evil in a system of government such as is ours in India.

You unfairly treat the case I have instanced as an extreme one. It is not so. It is a case which is every day illustrated throughout the Madras presidency, and I doubt not is equally true of the other presidencies.

You also speak of the eight languages, with whose names I ventured to startle the readers of your paper, as eight dialects, giving the public to imagine that they are merely provincial dialects of some one general language of India, which unfortunately exists only in the imagination of the uninformed body of the public. I assert that the languages which I enumerated are languages as distinct from each other as are Spanish and Portuguese, Italian and Latin; having, indeed, very great affinity, but still so distinct as to be improperly spoken of as dialects of each other, or of any language of India.

I showed you that nowhere in the south is the Hindustani the language of the natives, and that, if a civilian makes this language his medium of communication with the natives, he might just as well speak English to them. I also wished to impress upon you, that even when a civilian was so perfectly conversant with the native languages that his conversation was intelligible to educated natives, he was still obliged to have recourse to interpreters, because, as everybody must be aware, the phraseology of the uneducated, with whom he is chiefly concerned, is all over the world very different to the phraseology of the educated in common conversation; and the freemasonry of words in colloquial use by the common people of India is, as I alleged, impossible to be acquired by Europeans generally in so perfect a degree as to enable them to dispense with interpreters. The natives will not permit Europeans access to their domestic circle, and no language can be thoroughly acquired without a free intercourse with every class of society. Far easier is the task of the native of India in learning English. He has every access to the society of Europeans in India; no caste rules forbid his approach; the avenues of a noble literature are tempting him on, while by Europeans he is, if intelligent, sought after and encouraged, instead of being coldly repelled. And yet his language is that of a book; it is the language of writing, and not of speaking, and for this simple reason,—that he has only after all derived his knowledge of the language from an educated class, and one so limited in number that he cannot acquire from them the colloquial turns which would entitle him to boast of a thorough colloquial knowledge of English. And were any such native of India to be placed in the position of magistrate in this country, his ignorance of the phraseology of the lower orders would compel him to have recourse to an interpreter to explain their English to him, and interpret his accent (for his language would be intelligible) to them. He would probably, ere long, become well acquainted with the "slang," so to say, of the lower orders, because he would not find himself denied access to their society in their houses, as Europeans are to the houses of the natives of India. Now, with regard to the civilian in India, it is in most cases, first, his faulty pronunciation and accent which renders an interpreter indispensable to repeat what he has said; and, secondly, the difficulty there exists in understanding the peculiar phraseology of the common people, although he may be sufficiently well able to converse with an educated person in the same language.

You also say, "Again—what are the interpreters—the highly objectionable channels of communication now employed between European magistrates and the people—but natives of India, conversant with the English language?" This, allow me to say, is a very erroneous notion. The interpreters, in the Madras territories at least, of which alone I am prepared to speak, are generally quite unacquainted with English, and it is considered a very great objection to a candidate that he is acquainted with English, because it is justly supposed to impress the common people with an idea that he communicates with the European chiefly in English, and that the European officer understands only English, and that therefore the interpreter can and does abuse his trust, and that it is therefore necessary always to approach him with a bribe. Hence interpreters are generally unacquainted with English, and are appointed for other qualifications than a knowledge of that language, and which I need not now discuss. You speak of the Hindustani as "this one universal dialect." This is an error, of which I would give much to disabuse you. As a travelling language in India, I will admit that its utility is equal to that of the French language in Europe; but, if you are at all acquainted with India, you must be aware that Hindustani cannot be fairly termed an universal language. If you still persist in representing the question to the public in this light,—in persuading them that it is only a question of acquiring perfectly one language, and that an easy one,—I have no hesitation in saying that you are not fulfilling the duties of your office as a public journalist. The public are, as it is, sufficiently ill-acquainted with Indian affairs, and any misrepresentation must increase their inability to form a fair opinion on any Indian subject. With regard to the "preparatory discipline before appointment, and a little diligence afterwards," which you urge as advisable, it ought to be generally known that the examinations at the colleges in India are as difficult as is considered necessary by men who have the superintendence of them,—men of high standing in the service, and who cannot be supposed to be careless of the welfare of the people of India. For myself, loving the service, and desirous as I am to do my utmost for the welfare of the people, I am yet convinced that the existing evils in our administration of India are not to be traced so exclusively to deficient knowledge of the languages on the part of the Company's servants, as that all could be set right by a further acquaintance with them, as the generous imagination of M. G. has led him to anticipate. If you will permit me, I will on a future occasion offer you some remarks in discussion of what those evils are, and how they may be diminished, and at the same time consider your suggestion of the more extensive employment of natives of India in the public service.

Excuse my having troubled you with so long a letter.

I am, Sir, yours obediently,

Jan. 7, 1852.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—Observing an extract from the Indian papers in your issue of the 3rd inst., describing an attack made by the Wuzzeers upon a reconnoitering party in the Meransie Valley, stated to be under the command of "Lieut. Garrett," I beg to request the favour of your insertion of a few lines in your next paper to state that the officer alluded to was "Lieut. Garrett," of the Bengal Engineers, not "Garrett," as stated in the account referred to.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

Jan. 6, 1852.

DR. JEREMIE.—The civilians in India, who had studied at Haselebury under Dr. Jeremie, late Dean and Professor at that College (now Regius Professor of Divinity at Cambridge), have raised a large testimonial fund, and it has been determined to expend four hundred guineas upon a piece of plate, and to apply the remainder to the purchase of books, to be presented to Dr. Jeremie, as marks of the respect and esteem of the subscribers.

THE MAITLAND PRIZE.—Cambridge, Jan. 5—The sum of £1,000 having been accepted by the University for the purpose of instituting a prize, to be called "Sir Peregrine Maitland's Prize," for an English essay on some subject connected with the propagation of the Gospel through missionary exertions in India and other parts of the heathen world, the prize to be given once in every three years, and to consist of the accruing interest of the principal sum during the preceding three years, the Vice-Chancellor has given notice that the prize will this year be given for the best essay on the following subject:—"The duty, as well as policy, of Christian states to encourage missions for the conversion of the heathen."

FURTHER SEARCH FOR SIR J. FRANKLIN.—Letters from Lieut. Pim, dated at St. Petersburg, state that the Russian geographers, and particularly the explorers of Northern Siberia, with whom he had been put into communication, were opposed to a plan which, from their experience and acquaintance with the condition of the regions to be travelled over, they looked upon as impracticable; and Sir R. Murchison has received distinct information, through Baron de Brunnov, that the Imperial Government, after having taken the most lively interest in this as in every former effort to rescue the missing expedition, had satisfied itself, on the unanimous report of the persons who had most studied the subject, that the execution of the plan which the noble and courageous devotion of Lieut. Pim had led him to conceive, was opposed by insurmountable obstacles. Under these circumstances, the Emperor could not consent to allow the life of a British officer to be perilled in vain; but still, being desirous of doing everything which might be possible, the Imperial Government had placed our countryman in communication with M. Baer and M. Middendorf,—the one the explorer of Nova Zembla, the other of Northern and Eastern Siberia,—in the hope that by some other plan additional chances might be obtained of procuring the desired tidings.

THE EGYPTIAN RAILWAY.—It is finally decided that this railway is to pass through the populous and well-cultivated Delta, crossing the Nile by a floating bridge at Kafr-Zayat, a route which will be much more advantageous to the country than that first thought of, through the desert on the western side of the river.

PEER IBRAHIM KHAN.—On the 5th January, the Chairman of the Court of Directors of the East-India Company presented the Peer Ibrahim Khan with a medal, in consideration of his distinguished services during the campaign of Mooltan; and on presenting it, he addressed the Peer nearly as follows:—"I have much pleasure in presenting you with this medal, in consideration of your services. No native of India came to this country with higher recommendations and testimonials, and I hope you will continue to serve the East-India Company with the same zeal and assiduity as you have shown heretofore. I wish you a prosperous and pleasant voyage, and a safe arrival to your native land." Peer Ibrahim Khan replied in the Hindoostani language (Syed Abdoollah interpreting) as follows:—"I beg to thank you most gratefully and cordially for the distinction you have just conferred upon me. It is to me a source of the highest satisfaction to have been deemed by your distinguished body worthy of such a mark of honour and approval. It shall be my constant endeavour so to wear it as to reflect credit on myself and give satisfaction to the Government I serve. I joyfully seize this opportunity of expressing my sincere gratitude for the numerous attentions and kindnesses I have received during my stay in England from the Chairman, the Deputy-Chairman, and the Hon. the Court of Directors; and with the warmest wishes for the continuance of health, happiness, and prosperity to all, I bid you heartily farewell." The Peer then took his rookhsut.

THE INDIAN COTTON QUESTION is a great question, after all. The Prime Minister may know not how to grapple with the Indian difficulty, and Parliament may think that all we have to do with India is to gain battles on her plains, and to wring taxes from her population. But the capitalists and workmen of Lancashire are deeply concerned in it. The Chamber of Commerce and Manufactures, well representing the interests, and we hope the wishes, of the trade, have sent out a gentleman of great ability and integrity to report on the conditions under which industry is conducted and maintained in India. Mr. Mackay has made great progress in his inquiries, and several of his reports are now in the hands of the President of the Chamber. These reports are too lengthy and too minute for newspaper publication, but we are informed that they confirm, in a remarkable degree, the views which the Chamber has held and promulgated on the subject of Indian cultivation. In the coming session the question of the future government of India will be submitted to a select committee, composed doubtless of many of the most able men in Parliament. Much will depend on the evidence taken by it, and on the decisions to which it may come; and we hope the undivided influence of Lancashire, and indeed of the manufacturing and commercial community of the whole kingdom, will be employed to secure for India a government directly responsible to Parliament, and subject to the wholesome exercise of public opinion in this country; for it is by this means alone that the industry of the Indian population can be promoted, and the produce of that industry made available to secure the permanent prosperity of the manufactures of Lancashire.—Manchester Examiner.

MAJOR-GEN. THE HON. GEORGE CATHCART, deputy-lieutenant of the Tower, is appointed to supersede Sir Harry Smith in the command of the Cape of Good Hope. A lieutenant-governor is to be appointed to conduct the civil business of the colony during the absence of the Governor at the seat of war.

CONSUMPTION OF TEA.—It appears from the official tables of the Board of Trade, issued by order of the House of Commons, that there had been an increase in the quantities of tea entered for home consumption. In the eleven months ending the 5th December, 1849, the quantity was 46,077,639 lbs.; in 1850, 47,392,173 lbs.; and in 1851, 49,764,193 lbs. There had been a decrease in the quantities of wine and spirits entered for home consumption in the three years mentioned.

IN H.M.'S REGIMENTS SERVING IN INDIA.

WAR OFFICE, JAN. 2, 1852.

Bombay, 78th Foot.—Lieut. gen. Sir Neil Douglas, k.c.s., from the 72nd regt. of Foot, to be colonel, v. Gen. Paul Anderson, dec. Dated 29th Dec. 1851.

The population of the colony of New Zealand last year was 4,047, being an increase of 675 on the preceding year. The revenue of the year 1850 was 3,506*l.*, and the expenditure 3,213*l.* In 1850 the exports were 7,116*l.*, being a decrease of 1,576*l.* 10*s.* on the preceding year, owing to the increased population consuming the flour which otherwise would have been exported. The imports were 17,507*l.*, being an increase of 3,253*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.* on the preceding year. The native population within the districts of Wellington, Waikanae, Otaki, Manawatu, Rangitikei, and Wairarapa, in the province of New Munster, is 4,711, of which number 2,955 are Christians, of whom 1,148 can read and write, and 444 can read only. There are 39 churches and chapels within the province.

The principle adopted by the Universal Life Assurance Society, of an annual valuation of assets and liabilities, and a division of three-fourths of the profits among the assured, is admitted to offer great advantages, especially to those parties who may wish to appropriate their proportion of profit to the reduction of future premiums.

The following Table will show the result of the last division of profits, as declared on the 14th of May, 1851, to all persons who had on that day paid six annual premiums, being a reduction of 45 per cent. on the current annual premium. This will be found a most liberal reduction, if the original premiums be compared with those of other offices adopting a similar plan of division of profits:—

Age when Policy was issued.	Date of Policy.	Sum assured.	Original Premium.	Reduced Ann. Premium for current Year.

* * * The attention of Gentlemen connected with India is particularly requested to the Regulations of this Society; as, on comparison with other offices, its terms will be found peculiarly advantageous, especially as regards the liberal plan adopted on the return of Indian Assurers to reside permanently in this country; and the Indian Rates have been calculated from extensive data and Tables exclusively in the possession of this Society, by which the true risk of life during residence in India has been most accurately ascertained.

HINDUSTANI WORKS BY JOHN SHAKESPEAR, Esq.

NEW EDITION, with GREAT ADDITIONS.

This Day is published, the 4th Edition, in 1 vol. 4to. price £5. 5s. in boards, SHAKESPEAR'S HINDUSTANI and ENGLISH DICTIONARY, GREATLY ENLARGED: to which is added, a DICTIONARY, ENGLISH and HINDUSTANI, ENTIRELY NEW.

* * * To the First Part of this Dictionary, the author has, by laborious study of Hindustani works, both printed and manuscript, made the most extensive additions. In the Hindustani and English Parts, the Hindustani words are printed in their proper characters, together with the pronunciation in Roman letters. The Derivatives, which are traced from the Sanskrit, Arabic, Hebrew, Persian, and Greek, are given respectively in the character peculiar to each of those languages.

The Second Part, English and Hindustani, is ENTIRELY NEW. It comprises the most common English words, and also numerous usual phrases, with the fittest corresponding translations into Hindustani.

REVIEW IN "TIMES," Jan. 3.—"Much attention has been paid to the collecting of scientific terms, especially botanical ones, as well as to the correct rendering them into the technology of Europe." * * * "The Hindustani and English Part of it now contains upwards of 53,000 words and phrases explained, being 7,000 more than in the last edition, and 11,000 more than in any other Dictionary of the like description now extant." * * * "In India, as well as in Europe, the character of this work has long been fully established, and the present edition will greatly enhance its reputation."

NEW BOOKS, MAGAZINES, and REVIEWS, VIA BOMBAY, AT ENGLISH PRICES.

Messrs. R. C. LEPAGE and Co. are now giving much of their attention in London to a direct business with the Western and North-Western Provinces of India. They undertake to supply Book Clubs, Officers' and Soldiers' Reading Societies, Private Individuals, &c., with New Books, Magazines, and Reviews, as published, charging them at the English prices. The cost of transmission by the "Overland Route" is precisely on the scale of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company's Parcel Tariff. Further particulars may be learnt on application to R. C. LEPAGE and Co., Calcutta; or Mr. JOHN TURNER, Steam Parcel Agent, Bombay. LONDON BRANCH—No. 1, Whitefriars' Street, Fleet Street. 20th December, 1851.

EDUCATION.

THE REV. H. H. CAMPBELL, assisted by a retired Officer of the Indian Army, receives a limited number of Pupils. Mr. Campbell particularly addresses himself to parents in India, assuring them that it will be his endeavour to be a parent to those who are intrusted to his care.

Three or four young gentlemen can be received as parlour boarders, and prepared for the army, direct cadetships—Sandhurst, Adulcombe, and Haileybury. The highest references to clergymen, general officers, and others. WYCLIFFE HOUSE, Twickenham, near Richmond, London.

THE HEAD MASTER of an ENDOWED GRAMMAR SCHOOL, ten miles from London, receiving twelve private pupils, has now three vacancies.

Gentlemen preparing to pass the Army Examination are received for limited periods, upon especial agreement. The usual course includes the Classics, Mathematics, and Modern Languages, by qualified resident masters; Drawing, Surveying, &c. &c. Terms, from 60 guineas, in proportion to the age.

For particulars, address "BETA," care of Messrs. Redf and Fletcher, Stationers, 150, Aldersgate Street, City.

GARDEN & SON, ARMY ACCOUTREMENT MAKERS, SADDLERS, &c., 200, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

In consequence of the death of Mr. H. GARDEN, of this firm, ROBERT S. GARDEN feels called upon to inform their distinguished connection and friends that the firm will be continued, and the business carried on as heretofore; and he trusts, by strict attention to the wishes of his patrons, to retain that confidence for so many years placed in his late father.

DUNN'S PORCELAIN WAX CANDLES, 11s. per dozen lbs.—Among the various candles introduced to public notice, these are acknowledged to be one of the most superior articles ever manufactured, and have been universally admired. They give a brilliant light, are transparent as wax, do not require snuffing, free from smell, and have the most perfect appearance of the finest wax. DUNN'S Sovereign Sperm Candles, 11s. 6d. per dozen lbs., are much admired, being delicately white, brilliantly illuminating, exceedingly hard, requiring no snuffing, and are altogether very superior candles. DUNN'S best Composite Candles, 8s. 6d. per dozen lbs.: these are very excellent candles, and are infinitely superior to those candles usually sold as "composite"; are hard, white, require no snuffing, and burn with a silvery flame. All these candles are packed for the country in boxes containing 24 lbs., 36 lbs., and upwards. No charge for boxes. JOHN DUNN and Co., Wax-chandlers, &c., 59, Cannon Street, City.—Delivered free 7 miles.

DUNN'S FINE ARGAND LAMP OIL, 4s. 6d. per gallon.—This very superior oil, so largely patronized and recommended by the nobility and gentry, is equally applicable for the Argand, Solar, French Fountain, and every description of Patent Oil Lamp. Its characteristics are the strength and brilliancy of light, without smoke or smell; extreme purity, as it will not corrode the most delicate lamp; greater economy, in the slowness of consumption, compared with other oils, and not chilling with the cold. Half a gallon or upwards delivered free 7 miles.—Sold only genuine by JOHN DUNN and Co., Oil Merchants, 59, Cannon Street, City. N.B.—From the great satisfaction this oil has given during the last 13 years, J. D. and Co. are anxious to assure the public it is only to be obtained at their warehouse, as above, as the same name has been assumed for oils of a widely different character.

ESTABLISHED 60 YEARS.

PEAKOME'S SADDLERY, &c. for all parts of the world.—Noblemen, gentlemen, and emigrants, are solicited to purchase at fair remunerating prices, and compare them with extortionate prices charged by others.—Best hogskin saddles complete, four guineas; ditto second quality, 70s.; best double bridles, 18s.; best patent carriage collars, 15s.; best pair-horse carriage harness, 18 guineas; round double reins, 40s.; best single harness, £7. 7, Princes Street, Cavendish Square, and 8, Edwards Street, Portman Square.

AT THE CIGAR and GOVERNMENT MANILLA WAREHOUSES of Messrs. TOSSWILL and Co., Merchants, Importers, and Manufacturers, Nos. 6, 7, and 8, Pudding Lane, East Cheap, back of the Monument, London, the best class of Foreign Cigars and Manillas, the largest stock and variety in the kingdom. Genuine Foreign Havannahs, 18s. 6d., 21s., 22s., and 24s. per lb.; Manillas, 18s. per lb.; and Cigars, fine quality, of British make, 7s. 6d., 8s. 6d., and 10s. 6d. per lb. Tosswill and Co.'s celebrated Union and La Primera Cigars, equal to Foreign, 12s. 6d. Cigars and Manillas shipped duty free.

DECAYED TEETH and TOOTH-ACHE.—Price 2s. 6d.

—Patronized by Her Majesty and H.R.H. Prince Albert. Mr. HOWARD'S WHITE SUCCEEDANUM for stopping decayed Teeth, however large the cavity. It is placed in the tooth in a soft state, without any pressure or pain, and immediately HARDENS INTO A WHITE ENAMEL; it will remain in the tooth many years, rendering extraction unnecessary, and arresting the further progress of decay, and is far superior to anything ever before used, as it will NEVER BECOME DISCOLOURED in the tooth. All persons use it themselves with ease, as full directions are enclosed. Prepared only by Mr. Howard, Surgeon-Dentist, 17, George Street, Hanover Square, who will send it into the country free by post. Sold by Savory, 220, Regent Street; Sanger, 150, and Hannay, 63, Oxford Street; Butler, 4, Chancery; Johnston, 69, Cornhill; and all medicine vendors in the kingdom. Price 2s. 6d. Mr. Howard continues to supply the loss of teeth on his NEW SYSTEM of SALVADENTION, without springs or wires. This method does not require the extraction of any teeth or roots, or any painful operation whatever. 17, George Street, Hanover Square. At home from 10 till 4.

DRAFTS and LETTERS of CREDIT on CALCUTTA, MADRAS, and BOMBAY, are granted by Messrs. GRINDLAY & Co., in sums to suit the convenience of applicants, without any charge for commission. Also, CIRCULAR LETTERS of CREDIT for Travellers on the Continent, available in every principal town in Europe. EAST-INDIA ARMY AGENCY, 63, Cornhill, and 124, Bishopsgate Street.

COCOA is a nut which, besides farinaceous substance, contains a bland oil. The oil in this nut has one advantage, which is, that it is less liable than any other oil to rancidity. Possessing these two nutritive substances, Cocoa becomes a most valuable article of diet, more particularly if, by mechanical or other means, the farinaceous substance can be so perfectly incorporated with the oily, that the one will prevent the other from separating. Such an union is presented in the Cocoa prepared by JAMES EPPS, and thus, while the delightful flavour, in part dependent upon the oil, is retained, the whole preparation will agree with the most delicate stomach.—1s. 6d. per lb.

CHOCOLATE—Those who require a very light beverage, will find the prepared chocolate adapted to their particular taste: it is thinner and more highly flavoured than the Cocoa, possessing more the advantages of Tea and Coffee.—2s. 6d. per lb.

Prepared by JAMES EPPS, Homoeopathic Chemist, 112, Great Russell Street, Bloomsbury, and 82, Old Broad Street, City.

In regard to purity, see Report of the Analytical Sanitary Commission, in "The Lancet," July 5, 1851.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE contents of the present mail portend active work on both the western and eastern sides of India.

The hill tribes around Peshawur, and in the neighbourhood of the Hazareh country (where two British officers, as reported in the last Mail, were butchered by a party of Momunds), according to the Bombay Times, had united for resistance, and Saadut Khan had succeeded in assembling a large body of Momunds, numbering, at the lowest estimate, 6,000 men. Johan Dad Khan, the Hazareh chief in whose territories Messrs. Carne and Tapp were murdered, fearful that we shall hold him personally responsible, had summoned the wild tribes on the left bank of the Indus to his assistance, and was assembling them round his capital of Umb. There is, it is added, a very general feeling that we shall be in collision with all the hill tribes before long,—and that too at a point where it was not anticipated.

The Delhi Gazette takes a more favourable view of affairs in that quarter, stating rather confidently that Saadut Khan had been deserted by his allies the Halimzyes, and that the hill tribes had separated. It adds, that the arrival of Waller's troop and the companies of the 53rd Foot appears to have been very opportune, as the entire Momund force was thereby deterred from making the attack that had for some time been preparing. "Immediately after this, a difference arose, which led to the breaking up of the confederation, without any great probability of its being again consolidated for some time to come."

Sir C. Campbell's force, in the Michmee district, was still occupied in constructing the fort of Dubb; until its completion, the general did not intend to commence offensive operations. The fort is represented as advancing most satisfactorily—Europeans and sepoy vying with each other in hastening the work. Considerable reinforcements have also joined the brigadier, whose force is now such that equal to overcome any opposition it is likely to meet with in the open field. The Momunds had confined their operations tions to petty affairs. A detachment located at Muta, to the north-east of Dubb, consisting of a party of the Guide Corps, under Lieutenant Miller, a detail of artillery under Lieutenant Simeon, and the 2nd Punjab Cavalry, the whole commanded by Captain Jackson, were attacked on the 8th December by a pretty large party of the enemy, under two of their chiefs; they were warmly received, and left several dead.

A very brilliant exploit was performed by a small body of the 5th Punjab Cavalry and the Scinde Camel Corps, under Captain Fitzgerald. It appears that a party of about 500 Sheoranees entered our territory by the Sheerum Pass, to the south of Derabund, in the district of Dera Ismael Khan, on the 7th of December. The object was evidently plunder. A small detachment of sixty men of the 5th Punjab Cavalry, with seventy men of the Scinde Camel Corps, commanded by Captain Fitzgerald himself, vigorously attacked the invaders, and drove them over the first range of the Sooleiman mountains. Some six or seven were cut up.

It is rumoured that the 8th N.I. will be posted in the fort of Attok, where a cantonment is to be planned out on the right bank of the Indus. Fisher's post at Mian Khel has been reinforced by a company of Europeans, and another of Goorkhas.

It was stated in our last Summary that the Mooltan field force had been held in readiness for immediate service, its supposed destination being Upper Scinde, where Meer Ali Meorad, of Khyrpore, had rendered himself liable to the punishment due to an unfaithful ally and a treacherous dependant. It now appears from accounts via Kurrachee to the 27th December, that the following force will be sent against his Highness from Scinde. The brigadier commanding in Upper Scinde is to despatch No. 9 light field battery, with the 4th company 4th battalion Artillery attached, the 2nd regiment Scinde Irregular Horse, and the 15th regiment of Native Infantry. All these troops are to move across the Indus, and encamp at Roree, fully prepared for immediate service. The brigadier at Kurrachee is to send the 1st troop Horse Artillery, 1st company Sappers and Miners, left wing H.M.'s 64th Foot, and 1st grenadier regiment of Native Infantry. This latter force was to move about the 30th, and to be commanded by General Manson. It is not considered probable that the Khyrpore Ameer will offer any opposition to such a field force. "The fact has just transpired," says the Bombay Times of the 2nd January, "that despatches reached Bombay three weeks since from home, intimating that, in consequence of the fraudulent means resorted to by Ali Moorad to increase his power, which had been acquired by him by fraud, measures should be taken to compel him to resign what was not rightfully his, and restrict him to his old ancestral dominions."

Dost Mahomed Khan seems to have recovered health and activity. His son Golam Hyder is now said to be sick; though he accompanied his father to Jellalabad, where Mahomed Akhbar's son, Jelal-ood-deen, had already arrived with a corps of 500 men, and two pieces of artillery.

The Dost's ambassador had returned from Herat, bringing presents, and the intelligence that an envoy from Bokhara had lately met with a very cavalier reception from the son of Yar Mahomed. The latter informed the envoy that the ruler of Herat was the servant of the Russians, and cared neither for the friendship nor the enmity of the Bokhara chieftains.

The report of the seizure of Mahmoud Khan is correct; he has been sent to Cabul by Akram Khan.

According to the Englishman, the state of the Punjab is not satisfactory. "There is an uneasiness, and an unquiet and restless spirit abroad," observes that journal, "which it behoves the Government to watch with careful attention. The people are troubled, disturbed, or ill-disposed; the neighbouring tribes turbulent, or openly rebellious." Other Calcutta journals have been sounding the note of alarm regarding the state of the Punjab, and apprehensions have been created thereby, more especially among the fundholders. A report that all the regiments across the Sutlej had been ordered to hold themselves in readiness to take the field, tended rather to confirm this alarm. The Friend of India remarks that there does not appear to be anything in the present aspect of circumstances to justify such a feeling of alarm, or to lead to the expectation that we shall have the Punjab to conquer a third time. "The whole of the border tribes are unquiet, as they have been since the days of Alexander the Great, and as they were expected to be when we came into contact with them, and determined to substitute coercion for black mail. They are not opposed to us from any feeling of repugnance to our government in particular. They would have exhibited the same hostility to any strong government which might be established in their vicinity, and interfere with their wild independence, and curb their lawless propensities." The force in the Punjab is of itself sufficiently strong to inspire confidence, consisting, according to the Chronicle, of—

"Two European cavalry regiments; seven European infantry regiments; eight troops of horse artillery, with brigade headquarters; twenty-five companies of foot artillery, with battalion headquarters; thirty-seven native infantry regiments, line and local; four regiments of native light cavalry; nineteen regiments of irregular cavalry, Hindoo and Sikh; five companies of sappers and miners; two companies of pioneers; the guide corps; the camel corps; and thirteen light field batteries for service, and ready at a moment's warning."

No further intelligence had been received from Rangoon. Preparations were making for a serious attack, if it should be necessary. The British residents, emboldened by the presence of the squadron, had made a representation of the wrongs and indignities to which they had been subjected, and a further reference to the Indian Government was deemed necessary. The Prosperpine was waiting at Calcutta the receipt of instructions from the Governor-General. The latest advices from Singapore mention that Admiral Austen, in H.M.'s ship Hastings, was about to join the squadron at Rangoon, and it was supposed that H.M.'s steamer Hermes would also join; so that a respectable naval force will be assembled there by the time that an answer is expected from the golden throne. The Englishman quotes from a letter from the eastern frontier an opinion expressed by a gentleman long resident at Ava, that "the Burmese will fight."

The Nizam's debt still remained unpaid; of 400,000*l.* only 90,000*l.* could be raised. "Our latest letters from Hyderabad," says the Englishman, "express the opinion that the attempted arrangement will break down, and that new terms must be submitted to." It is said that his Highness's dislike to Europeans is so intense, that he holds no intercourse with them beyond the mere interchange of visits with the Resident, and the mob of sycophants about his court inflate his mind with the most ridiculous ideas of his power.

Oude continues in its usual state of disorder, life and property beoming daily more unsafe. A letter from Lucknow says:—"There is no revenue now coming in at all. Those servants of the king who have the most influence, obtain orders on a chucklidar of a district; but the greater part of the troops, and almost all the members of the royal family, have from eighteen to twenty months' arrears due to them." Lord Dalhousie does not intend to visit the capital of Oude; the minister was to meet his lordship at Cawnpore.

The Governor-General was at Bareilly on the 15th December, and is expected to reach Calcutta about the 15th of the present month, unless (according to report) he should retrace his steps to the Punjab. The camp of the Commander-in-Chief of India was on the right bank of the Jhelum, on the way to the disturbed frontier, at the date of the last advices.

We have devoted a large space to a report of the extraordinary case of the Mackays,—a case in its circumstances almost unprecedented. Both the culprits, it appears, bore a high character, as respectable and pious people, and the male prisoner was represented as a kind teacher and an affectionate father. The Friend of India remarks upon this case:—

"Never, we believe, has a case of more aggravated brutality been presented to the indignation of the public in India, and never has the judgment of the Court been received with such general approbation. Some small degree of compassion might possibly have been expected to arise in the case of a female, condemned to the degrading association of felons; but her conduct in this homicide was even more execrable than that of her partner in guilt, and the very convicts themselves, with whom she is now sent to herd, must feel themselves contaminated by the presence of such a fiend."

The advices from the Cape of Good Hope, which are to the 28th December, report the progress of the trans-Kei expedition. The strong force seems to have driven the Caffres before them; but no action of an important, much less decisive, character had occurred, and, in consequence of the heavy rains, it was expected that the troops would have to return and recruit.

LAW.

SUPREME COURT, December 8.

John Mackay and Helen Elizabeth Mackay were indicted for having, on the 4th of October, and the five following days, in Beleeppoorah, at Benares, on one Helen Mackay, the child of John Mackay, feloniously made divers assaults with a whip and hempen cords, giving her mortal wounds and bruises in different parts of her body, of which she died on the 9th October. And it further charged the male prisoner with having been present at the commission of this felony and murder, aiding and abetting the female in it. A second count alleged that both the prisoners, contriving and intending to starve and murder the child, made several assaults upon her from the 4th to the 9th October, and confined her in a room, and neglected, omitted, or refused to give or suffer to be given sufficient meat and drink for her sustenance; in consequence of which she died, and the prisoners did thus feloniously murder her.

The Advocate-General and the Standing Council appeared for the prosecution; Mrs. Corbett defended the male prisoner, Mrs. Peterson defended the female prisoner.

Reverend C. Frederick Reuther examined.—I am attached to the Church Missionary Society. I have known the male prisoner for the last eight years. The female prisoner I have known for the last year. They lived at Benares. Mr. Mackay was catechist and schoolmaster in Joynarain's school there. Miss Mackay was to have been a teacher in a native female school at Benares, but she never joined, on account of ill health. Mr. Mackay had two children. The name of the one who is dead was Helen, of the other Mary. On the 9th of October last, I was called over to Mr. Mackay's house, and there I found the child dead. I saw him there. He said, "My child is gone. She has been beaten out of life. My sister had her under correction the whole forenoon, thinking she would succeed in correcting her obstinacy. She could not succeed. It has ended in the child's death. I was in my study, anxious about the case; but I had not the courage to interfere, fearing it would do my sister harm. At last, I prayed to God that He would interfere." Whilst he said this to me, his sister was in her bedroom, running violently about, looking pale, her eyes rolling, and she herself crying, "She is dead, and I am mad." Mr. Mackay then took me to the child, who was lying dead on a couch, in a room apart from those I have mentioned. She was covered with a sheet. Her limbs were stiff and cold, and her body was covered with innumerable blows. I took off the sheet, and I think there was a shirt on the body. I examined the body. It was covered with innumerable blows and wounds, which appeared to have been recently inflicted. The back was so lacerated that it looked like a large piece of jelly. Mr. Mackay had ordered warm water before I had arrived, and I saw it brought. He, his sister, and myself put the body into a warm bath. I consented to doing so, because I thought there might yet be some sparks of life in the child, and that a warm bath could only do her good. I should have stated that the first thing I did was to send for Dr. Leekie, the civil surgeon in Benares, and to Seegra for Mr. Leopold. Instead of him the Rev. Mr. Smith came, the senior missionary. When the child had been bathed, Mr. Smith came, and soon after that Dr. Leekie.

Cross-examined.—Before Miss Mackay came out, they had been living for three years with Mr. Nichols, a teacher in the Government school in Benares. Mrs. Mackay died about 1845. After her death the children went to live with Mr. Nichols. From Mr. Nichols' they went back to Mr. Mackay's house. Miss Mackay arrived, I believe, three months after the children returned to Mr. Mackay's. Before Miss Mackay's arrival, they were well treated during the whole time I was in the habit of seeing them. They appeared to be well-clothed and well-fed. As far as I know, Mr. Mackay is a kind and an affectionate man. His conduct towards the children was kind. The natural attachment between parent and child appeared to exist between them before Miss Mackay arrived. I am not aware that Mr. Mackay is a man of violent temper. During my knowledge of him, his character was unimpeachable. Both the children appeared to be robust and healthy. While the children were living with Mr. Mackay, before Miss Mackay's arrival, they had only Mr. Mackay to look after them. He attended school from 6 a.m. to 11 or 12 in the day. He did not return to school in the afternoon. His time was very much taken up, however, by the duties of the mission. The task of the missionaries is very arduous, and very much occupies their time. Before Miss Mackay came out, the children were very much left to themselves amongst the native servants. Several of the missionaries wished to take them, but they were not given. Miss Mackay's ill-health was a subject of regret to the missionaries in the good cause. The last half year, visitors were not admitted at Mr. Mackay's—at least, it was believed that they were not liked. I know the surgeon of the station attended her for a long time. Mr. Mackay's children used to come to my house on an evening, to associate with my children. They were greatly neglected under the native ayah. They associated much with the native servants, and that had a bad influence over them. Miss Mackay was intended for a teacher at Mrs. Smith's school. She used to attend, to try her hand with the pupils, until she became dangerously ill. She was sent out as a teacher by the society.

Re-examined.—After Miss Mackay had been some months in the country, I saw an alteration in the attachment of Mr. Mackay towards his children. After she had been some months in the country, there also appeared a change in the children. They were not cleanly dressed, and were looking pale, miserable, and downcast. They were never permitted to leave the house. I never saw them going out of a morning or an evening. They were all of a sudden withdrawn from my children and the children of others. Miss Mackay was sent out, not by the Church Missionary Society, but by the Ladies' Society. She was not connected with the Church Missionary Society at all.

Dr. Thomas Leckie examined.—I am civil surgeon in Benares. On 9th October, a buggy was led to my house at a quarter-past 4 p.m. by Mr. Mackay's syce, with a verbal request that I should proceed at once to his house. I went immediately, and reached Mr. Mackay's house at half-past 5 p.m. on the 9th. I went at once to the bed-room where Miss Mackay was sitting. I said to her, "What has happened?" Immediately on my putting this question, Mr. Mackay made his appearance. Mr. Smith, of Seegra, was also in another room. Miss Mackay's reply to my question was that the child had been naughty—that she had not got her morning meal—and that she had given her a little sago and brandy. As soon as I had received this reply, Mr. Mackay made his appearance, wringing his hands, and uttering lamentations. To him I said, in presence of Miss Mackay, "Where is the child?" He took me to a small side-room adjoining, and there I saw the child lying upon a cot, naked, with a blanket underneath the body. On viewing the body, I saw it covered from head to toe with numerous livid stripes, spots, and wales. The latter were observable more especially on the thighs, which were completely covered. On turning the body over, and examining the back, the same appearances were visible, the shoulders and back bearing marks of numerous stripes. The whole of the left lumbar region or loins was one diffuse patch, partly of a scarlet colour and partly livid. From the surface of this portion of the back there exuded the usual sanious discharge as seen after cases of flagellation in military punishments. The buttocks were likewise excoriated and covered besides with old livid marks, which were also observable on the thighs. Those on the loins were quite recent. The loins were deprived of cuticle—they were one raw surface. That was what I observed externally. On viewing the body, my impression was that the child had died from scourging. The marks I have described were quite sufficient to have caused death. Death would not have taken place so rapidly if the child were in robust health. The injuries were sufficient to be not perhaps the direct, but the remote cause of death even in a healthy child, by the sloughing of the back causing exhaustion of the system or lock-jaw. My present remark applies to the beating on the back which was the last and fatal castigation. The other injuries would of course have hastened death. The old wales appeared to have been caused by a thin cane or riding whip. They must have been caused by a severe beating. On the following morning at daylight, I made a post mortem examination of the body in the presence of the Commissioner, the Magistrate, and other gentlemen. Externally, the body was much emaciated and bloodless. On opening the thorax, I found the lungs partially collapsed, the heart soft and flaccid, the left ventricle contained about a tea spoonful of fluid or uncoagulated blood. The whole stomach and tract of intestines was contracted and empty, there being only a small portion of fecal matter in the lower region of the large intestine, near the rectum. All the organs were in themselves of a healthy structure, and exhibited no form of disease whatever. The examination satisfied me that the appearances now described were the result of inanition consequent on the privation of food. There must have been a slow process of irregular and insufficient diet of from one to two months' duration. Judging from the emptiness of the stomach, I should say that the child had had no food at all, except a little sago, which was visible along with the fluids of the stomach. This may be accounted for by its having been given a little before death. Considering the internal appearances and the laceration externally, inflicted for some time previously as well as shortly before death, I came to the conclusion that death was remotely the result of previous maltreatment and want of due nourishment, and directly of the recent laceration inflicted upon the back. One instrument was put into my hands by Mr. Mackay himself on the 9th October, on my asking with what instrument the flagellation had been inflicted. But this was not in Miss Mackay's presence. It was sent down here. This is it. (Identifies a whip handle of gutta percha, about two inches thick, and two very thin cords.) They were loose when Mr. Mackay showed them to me. Four or five days after the post-mortem examination, I subjected the gutta percha and cords to the usual chemical test. They were sent to me under seal by the magistrate, and I sent them back after examining certain stains on the cords and the gutta-percha handle. On the morning of the 10th I had given them myself to the magistrate. The result of my examination was, that I discovered the stains which they bore, were of blood. On the morning of the inquest, behind a map in the room where the child was lying, I found this (a thick lash of a whip). I did not analyse it.

Cross-examined.—I have known Mr. Mackay since Aug. 1849. His conduct had been very good. He was much beloved by the natives, and the pupils of Joyanrain's school. He stood very high as a teacher, and also as a member of society in his own sphere. I have seen persons obstinately refusing food, but only in the insane hospital. I have occasionally known privation of food resorted to as punishment for children, but it is a punishment against which I protested in this instance. Generally speaking, so long as the healthy functions are existing, the desire for food increased with the period of starvation. It is quite possible—very probable that an obstinate child might, after having been kept out of food for twelve or thirteen hours, still persist in not taking any. There was no unhealthy appearance of the lungs in this case. There was no disease in the structure of the heart. The appearance of the heart indicated syncope of the heart, and the syncope was induced by the flagellation. The recent punishment, the marks of which I have described, was quite sufficient of itself to cause death. On cutting through the lacerated surface on the loins, down to the backbone, the skin, cellular texture, and muscles, formed one uniform gelatinous mass, resembling so much black-currant jelly. That of itself was quite sufficient to produce death. As civil surgeon of the station I had been in constant attendance on Miss Mackay from the month of February last. In February last she was suffering from fever. There was a general disturbance of her whole system, which led me to conclude that something more was the matter with her than fever. Shortly afterwards, I discovered an organic disease which accounted for the general disturbance of her system. This disease, and the consequent suppression, cause nervous irritability and hysteric convulsions, as the general rule, but not aberration of intellect. The symptoms in Miss Mackay's were intense; but, at the same time, I never observed in her any mental derangement, even when she was in a high state of nervous excitability. I have known her to become even insensible, during which state she would be prostrate, and unable to do anything. As far back as May last, seeing the injurious effects produced upon her nervous system by her attempts at tuition—for they were attempts only—I advised her to abandon teaching, and give my medicines a fair chance; but she undid in a few hours the work of a whole week by excitement and nervous irritability. I told her either Mr. Smith or Mr. Leopold would be happy to receive the children. This advice was declined, and I never mentioned the subject again. On the first day of the examination before the justice of peace, which was on the 13th or 14th of October, Miss Mackay went off into a fit of hysteric convulsions, and the examination had to be adjourned. A person of her nervous irritability would undoubtedly be excited by obstinate children who had freely mixed with native servants. She did say that Mr. Mackay's children were rather intractable, and difficult to manage. I do not know that they were of my own knowledge. That was in the end of May, or the beginning of June. I saw in Miss Mackay an anxiety for the welfare of the children, but no strong tokens of attachment to them. She did express a regret that they were not manageable.

Rev. Wm. Smith examined.—I am senior missionary at Benares. I have known Mr. Mackay upwards of ten years. I saw his sister first in June or July, 1849, at Leicester in England. I understood she was teaching the children of a clergyman's widow there—a Mrs. Brown. I saw her in Benares in February last. She had arrived the December previous. On the 9th October at four p.m., in consequence of Miss — coming to me, I went to Mr. Mackay's house. He told me he had received a note at school from his sister at 10 a.m., in consequence of which he returned home, and found his sister chastising the child, but that he was afraid to interfere, and that he retired to his room to pray to God to interfere. I went in and saw the corpse lying on a cot, covered with wounds, black and blue, and with a dreadful wound over one of the eyes. Mr. Mackay was there, and Miss Mackay was lying on a couch in her own bed-room. I spoke to them both a great deal. I told her how cruel her conduct was. She said, "Don't say it is cruel—don't call me cruel." I said, "Not cruel! why look at that," pointing to the corpse. I added, "You are either a murderess or mad." She was silent.

Cross-examined.—During the ten or eleven years I have known Mr. Mackay his character has been very good—previous to this sad event. Previous to the coming of his sister he was very affectionate to his children. They were for some time with Mr. Nichols, and he used to go very regularly to see them. On the 9th of October, after the child's death, when I was at his house, he was lamenting. But his conduct had changed. I did not think his lamentation heart-work. I reminded him of the passage in the Book of Proverbs, and said it was "howling." Miss Mackay was ill and could not be seen for several months. What her state was I had no opportunity of seeing. She was stated to be too ill to be seen even by the missionaries. I saw the lady whose children she was stated to have been teaching in Leicester. She gave her a very high character. Miss Mackay has nothing to do with the Church Missionary Society. She was sent out by the Ladies' School Society, who, I believe, are very careful in selecting candidates. Decided piety, high religious feeling, are necessary qualifications. A month or six weeks before the 9th of October I saw Miss Mackay once in two or three weeks. She was much better then, but had not entirely recovered from her severe illness.

Alexander Atchison examined.—I am a Missionary attached to the Church Missionary Society at Benares. I have been so for three years. I have been acquainted with Mr. Mackay, but very slightly with Miss Mackay. I knew Mr. Mackay's children. Before October last I used to see them at Mr. Nichol's. They were very strong, healthy children. I remember their returning to their father's house about the beginning of November, 1850. Miss Mackay arrived about the latter part of December, 1850. My house is about 100 yards from Mr. Mackay's. I sometimes saw his children in his verandah before October last. From my own observation or knowledge, I do not know of any change in their treatment. On 9th of October last, I saw Mr. Mackay at 9 A.M. at Joynarain's school. Whilst I was teaching the third class, he called me aside, and said, "This little wretch," alluding to the younger child, "is going from bad to worse. Only think what she said yesterday—'Yes, I am a child of Satan and God will take me.' I asked, 'Did you not say there was an improvement in her—a deal of hope?' 'Yes,' he said, 'but the other child leads her astray.' 'Then,' I said, 'at once—this very day, send Nelly to Mrs. Reunther or Mrs. Leopold.' Nelly was the younger. He said, 'And my authority as a father? What is to become of that? Never! I cannot.' 'Your authority?' I said, 'Have you any authority? Do they respect you?' He said, 'No.' Then he kept looking at me as, if for my advice, and I felt unable to say more to the man. I told him 'Then acquaint all the missionaries that you cannot manage your children.' He had a letter in his hand at the same time. It was from his sister. He told me so. He also told me the contents of the letter. He said, 'I must leave early to day. I have sent for my hand gharree.' In the course of the day, in consequence of information I received, I went to his house. I saw the prisoners. The child was lying dead on a sea cot, wrapped in an English blanket. I opened the blanket, and felt the child. She was cold and stiff. The body bore marks of injury. The doctor came in about two minutes after. Miss Mackay was sitting on a sofa in her bedroom, shaking her head. The doctor and Mr. Smith spoke very sharply to Mr. Mackay, and Miss Mackay came running out, and said, 'Spare my brother—spare my brother.' But when the doctor turned the child's body round, and pressed the matter home to her, and spoke of mercy and justice, she said—'Oh! I did not do it all. My brother did part of it.' Mr. Mackay was present. I asked him, 'Why didn't you prevent this?' He said, 'I had not the courage to prevent it.' I remained about an hour in the house. During the present year all the missionaries were excluded from his house. Mr. Mackay said, 'They are very cruel; they have no sympathy with my sister.' Before February last the children were very healthy. They used to come to my children up in March. Subsequently to March, the intercourse was entirely broken off—not by me.

Cross-examined.—Mr. Mackay is a teacher in the same school with me. He treats the boys well and was liked by them. He was a humane man and an affectionate father. In consequence of certain representations made to me by Mr. Mackay, I advised him not to give the Bible to his children, because I found they were making the Bible a task for them. They were being made to learn the 51st Psalm by force, and I would not have religion converted into a task.

Ramphul examined.—I am a khitmutgar in the service of Mr. Mackay. I entered his service eight months ago. I saw both Mr. Mackay's children on the morning of the day on which one of them died. I saw them sitting in Miss Mackay's room. On that day I saw nothing done to either of them. They were allowed to go as far as the verandah, but not beyond that. This restriction was for about four months previous to the death of one of them. During these four months I used to see Miss Mackay beat the child (deceased child) with this whip. She used to beat her every second or third day, in order to make her learn her lessons. The child used to get both her breakfast and dinner regularly. She did not get either the day before, but she had regularly.

Mary Mackay, the sister of the deceased, and about eight years old, examined.—My sister is dead. I was in my father's house when she died. I was in my papa's study. I don't know whether I went there before breakfast or after breakfast. My sister was in Aunt's dressing-room while I was in the study. I don't know anything that happened to her that day. I heard Aunt beating her. I heard my sister cry. Papa was in his study at the time. I don't know whether I was in the study with him. I heard this beating of my sister very long. I do not remember my papa coming back from school. I did not see my sister after the beating and before she died. My sister had nothing to eat that day. Aunt beat my sister with a corded whip. I don't know whether she had ever beat her before in the same way. This is it. (The gutta percha whip). Aunt used to beat my sister with it very often. My sister was very much beaten. She slept in a godown the night before she died—by the godown, I mean Aunt's dressing-room. She would not sleep with me. I used to sleep in a bathing-room. My sister did not always sleep in the godown—sometimes there, sometimes in the bathing-room. I do not know way she used to be put into the godown. There was a bed in the bathing-room. Papa walked about in the study while Aunt was beating my sister.

Cross-examined.—Sister did not learn her lessons. She was sometimes very naughty. We used both to take preserves out of the jars, and on one occasion Aunt scolded us for taking jellaybees from the mohito wallahs and running away.

This was the case for the prosecution.

The counsel for the prisoners addressed the jury on their behalf, suggesting certain technical objections, which were overruled; the advocate-general having abandoned the second count.

Mr. Justice Colville delivered an able charge.

The jury retired to consult, and, after a consultation of about three hours and half, returned with the following verdict:

"The prisoner Helen Elizabeth Mackay is guilty of an aggravated manslaughter; and the prisoner John Mackay is guilty of being an accessory thereto."

Sir J. Colville asked them, whether they meant to say that they found the male prisoner guilty of being accessory to the manslaughter before the fact.

The Foreman replied in the affirmative; upon which

Mr. Corbett submitted that their verdict as to Mr. Mackay amounted to an acquittal.

Sir J. Colville informed the jury that this was so. In law a party could not be accessory to manslaughter before the fact, though he might be to a murder; and the verdict to be recorded as to the male prisoner must, therefore, be not guilty.

The Foreman, upon this, said the Court had misunderstood him. The verdict which the jury meant to return was, that the male prisoner had been present at the fatal assault, though not corporeally, yet within hearing, and that he was therefore guilty.

Sir J. Colville inquired if they meant to say that he had been present so near as to have rendered assistance to the child; and that, in having neglected to do so, he had aided and abetted the act of the female prisoner.

The Foreman replied that this was precisely their meaning.

Mr. Corbett submitted that the clerk of the Crown should take down the verdict in the jury's own words.

The Foreman, upon this, after briefly consulting with the other jurors, said that they found the male prisoner guilty on the first count.

The Clerk of the Crown made the following record of the verdict, which the Jury acknowledged:—"The prisoner Helen Elizabeth Mackay is not guilty of wilful murder on the first count, but is guilty of aggravated manslaughter;—and the prisoner John Mackay is not guilty of aiding and abetting in wilful murder on the first count, but is guilty of aiding and abetting in the aggravated manslaughter. Both are severally not guilty on the second count."

Sir J. Colville reserved the sentence, that Mr. Corbett might have time to move an arrest of judgment.

DECEMBER 13.

The Court having overruled the motion in arrest of judgment, Sir J. Colville passed sentence. After some preliminary observations upon the heinousness of the offence, he proceeded: "I can make no distinction between you. If you, John Mackay, have indeed been perverted from your better nature by the counsels and influence of the unhappy woman who is beside you—if you have passively sanctioned, rather than actively participated in, the cruelties with which you are charged, I cannot forget that your age, your position, your greater experience, all tend to increase your responsibilities, and that you at least cannot plead in excuse a temper exasperated by infirmity and disease. There is, moreover, abundant reason to conclude that what you have done, you have done against the remonstrances of your better advisers; that in answer to their remonstrances, you deliberately adopted a full share of responsibility for your sister's acts; and that in spite of their warnings you advisedly left your children in your sister's hands. Upon a patient consideration of the whole case, we feel that we are bound in duty to pronounce upon you both the full measure of punishment which the law awards to your offence. The sentence of the Court upon you both is, that you be transported to Van Diemen's Land for the term of your natural lives."

MR. ROBERT HOUSTON, late collector of Hooghly, has been appointed a barrister of the Supreme Court.

THE BETHUNE FEMALE SCHOOL.—It is said by the native papers that the number of girls in the Bethune Female Academy is gradually decreasing. The building, we observe, is progressing rapidly. We fear that it will one day, sooner or later, be devoted to some other purpose than that designed by its zealous founder, for it is not very likely that any one else will take the same deep and lively interest in its success that animated the personal exertions of Mr. Bethune.—Hurkaru, Dec. 8.

THE SHIP-BURNING REPORT has been received by Government with high praise. The reforms recommended in the Registrar's office are to be carried into effect, and the legislative measures recommended have been submitted to the Government of India.—Ibid.

MR. JOHN LAWRENCE had reached Jamalghuree, in the Euzoofzaie country, on the 11th of December, accompanied by Capt. Lumsden, the Deputy Commissioner. He is to cross the Indus, about the 18th, at Torbela, and proceeds thence into the Hazara country, visiting Hureepoor and Husan Abdal, whence he returns direct to Lahore.—Lahore Chron.

HOMOPATHY is spreading among the native community of Calcutta.

JOTEE PERSAUD.—We have reason to believe, that Sir Robert Barlow, who was sent up to investigate the charges brought forward by Lord Ellenborough against the proceedings in the Magistrate's Court at Agra, has completed his report and transmitted it to Government. It will, therefore, be ready to be presented to Parliament in the month of February. We state with equal confidence, that Jotee Persaud has placed his case in the hands of Mr. Morton, the most eminent barrister in the Supreme Court in Calcutta, and that there is every probability of an early and satisfactory adjustment of his claims. We are certain that whenever the whole truth comes to be known, it will be found that nothing was ever more gratuitous, even in this mendacious country, than the assertion that Government brought the criminal action against the contractor to escape his claim for the arrears due to him; and also that nothing was ever more confused, irregular, and unsatisfactory than the whole system of commissariat accounts and payments. It was owing entirely to the mode of doing business in this department that the present affair has arisen, and Jotee Persaud may claim the merit of commissariat reform now contemplated.—Friend of India, Dec. 18.

LIEUT.-COL. JOHN G. DRUMMOND, C.B., quarter-master-general of the army, whose death occurred at Jhelum army head quarters, on the 11th, from a paralytic attack, has cast a great gloom over the camp of the Commander-in-Chief, and will be universally lamented throughout the army. It would be difficult to name an officer who was held in higher general esteem. To unweary industry, and great experience in the duties of his department, Col. Drummond united a cordial kindness of disposition, an honest simplicity of character, and a generous warmth of hospitality, that endeared him to as extensive a circle of personal friends as any man in India ever possessed. He entered the army as ensign on the 4th June, 1808, obtained his lieutenancy on the 11th November, 1812, his captaincy on the 13th May, 1825, his majority on the 11th November, 1837, and his lieutenant-colonelcy on the 20th December, 1843. He served during the Nepal campaign 1814-15,—medal; was present at the capture of Nalaghur, Ramghur, and Malown; in the Burmese war, 1824-25, as depy.-asst. quarter-master-general; engaged with Gen. Morison's division at the attack and capture of Mahatee and Arracan; action of Maharajpore, 1843,—bronze star and C.B.; throughout the latter part of the Sutledge campaign, including the battle of Sobraon—medal; and with the Mooltan field force, army of the Punjab; present at the siege and surrender of Mooltan and action of Goojerat—medal and clasp.—Mofussile, Dec. 19.

FIRST JUDGE OF THE SMALL CAUSE COURT.—It is no longer a secret of state that Mr. Wylie, the Junior Magistrate of Calcutta, has been nominated to the post occupied by the late lamented Mr. Reddie, as First Judge of the Small Cause Court, and that the nomination now awaits the confirmation of the Governor General. He was not among the candidates; the office was proffered to him by the local Government, and he did not consider himself justified in refusing it.—Friend of India, Dec. 18.

EXAMINATION OF CIVIL SERVANTS.—We understand the Government has ordered a committee to examine young civil servants before they are appointed, in the same manner as the uncovenanted. The committee is to sit to-morrow, at the Sudder Court, to fix a day for the first examination. It consists of the following gentlemen:—President, J. B. Colvin, Esq.; Members, Messrs. B. Colvin, Bidwell, Ricketts, Trevor, Issur-chunder Serma, and another native gentleman.—Englishman, Dec. 19.

MOOLTAN PRIZE MONEY.—A Royal Warrant and a despatch from the Court of Directors have just been published here, bestowing the Mooltan prize money on the army of the Punjab, minus the amount of the six months' donation batta, which deduction will, it is to be feared, leave very little of the thirteen lakhs of plunder and booty to be divided amongst the conquerors of Moolraj and Shere Singh.—Ibid.

ASCLEPIAS THREAD.—At the monthly meeting of the Agricultural Society of the Punjab, on the 14th October, a sample of "asclepias thread" was examined, which had been forwarded by Dr. Thompson, who states, on the authority of a European weaver, that the thread will make excellent long cloth and shirtings. It was resolved to ask for a larger supply, in order that the specimens might be submitted to the Chambers of Commerce at the three Presidencies.

RAJPOOTANA.—We have heard that there is a probability of our troops at Neemuch being called out, owing to a dispute between the Rana of Oodepoor and his chiefs. Col. Lawrence has, we believe, proceeded to Oodepoor, to mediate between them. If left to themselves, the ability of the Rana to coerce is doubtful. Even were it politic to allow him to resort to force, the question is one in which the British influence may fairly be exercised.

SIRDAR UTUR SING, Kalewala, who enjoyed a jagheer of Rs. 40,000 of his village of Kale, about three miles on this side of Umritsar, has died, and with him his personal allowance. At the time this was settled, the sum of Rs. 8,000 was guaranteed, and will of course be continued, to his son Lal Sing. Utur Sing was one of the sirdars who accompanied Shere Sing to Mooltan, and the first to announce the Raja's defection to Major Edwardes, on the 14th of September, 1848.—Ibid.

MESSERS. CARNE AND TAPP.—As soon as the murder of Messrs. Carne and Tapp (mentioned in the last Mail, p. 36) came to the knowledge of Major Abbott, that officer instantly issued orders for the advance of troops towards the Hazara district. This prompt and energetic demonstration proved eminently successful, and Jehan Dad Khan, the Chief of Amb, has already sent in six and twenty men by way of hostages until the actual murderers can be discovered and delivered up to justice. The ill-fated gentlemen, having accomplished the object of their journey, were returning to our territories by a different road, when they were surrounded by a large party of the natives, armed to the teeth. Mr. Tapp earnestly advised his superior, as their own followers were well armed and trusty men, that they should boldly advance and fight their way through. Mr. Carne, however, though a brave and powerful man, was averse to violent measures, and imprudently resolved on trusting to the apparent friendliness of the natives. In compliance, therefore, with his orders and example, his party surrendered their arms, when—as might have been expected—they were instantly seized, pinioned, and put to death.—Delhi Gazette.

THE NEW LINE OF ROAD across the hills from Simla to Mussoorie has been decided on, and orders have been issued to commence the work without delay. The distance will, it is said, be considerably lessened by the new route; in fact, that instead of fifteen marches it will not be more than six or seven across at the utmost. We also learn that the Governor-General has sanctioned the extension of the Kennedy road from Dugshaie to Kussowlee.—Ibid.

THE AGRA BANK has applied for registration, under Act No. 43, 1850. The Hurkaru remarks that those who avoid this wholesome check upon the management "will presently be regarded with increasing suspicion and distrust." The Act has been very captiously objected to. It is not perfect, but its most stringent clauses are such as no directors having honest intentions can reasonably object to. We entirely agree with our contemporary as to the distrust which must overtake those who determine to avoid registration. After allowing a reasonable time to persuade distant and scattered shareholders, all unregistered joint-stockeries ought to be considered as bubbles, and those who trust them, will deserve no pity for any loss they may thereby sustain. Persons taking shares in unregistered joint-stockeries should be considered as lunatics, incapable of taking care of their own property, and put into the hands of trustees, to prevent any further misapplication or waste.—Englishman.

THE LATE HEAVY GALES.—The Enterprize steamer, which left Calcutta on the 10th ult., encountered her share of the very severe weather to which the unfortunate Lascar fell a victim on the following day, and would in all probability have shared her fate had she been a sailing vessel. When she reached the Sandheads, and put out to sea on the 11th, she encountered a high sea and a strong head-wind, which soon freshened into a gale. The vessel laboured fearfully, and rolled so violently and deeply, that her commander (Lieut. Sidney G. Boon) was in constant fear that her masts and funnel would be rolled out of her and go by the board; and as it was necessary to batten down the hatches and close her ports, the closeness of the atmosphere between decks was most distressing to the passengers below, and to remain on deck was extremely dangerous. In the midst of these trying circumstances, a Mr. Craig, a passenger, going down to Moulmein for the benefit of his health, suffered so much from heat and fever between decks as to become delirious and unmanageable. He was attended to during the height of the gale by Dr. Montgomerie, also a passenger to Moulmein. All aid was, however, fruitless, and he expired on the 12th, leaving behind him a young widow, who was with him. The body was interred at sea, and the Enterprize continuing her voyage arrived at Akyab at 2 o'clock in the morning on the 14th. She had one boat stove to pieces by the rolling of the ship, but suffered no further material damage, and stood out the gale in gallant style. The cool and seamanlike conduct of the commander and officers, and their unremitting attention to the passengers in the midst of the trying and harassing duties which they had to perform, are spoken of in the highest terms. Lieut. Boon has since been appointed to the command of the H. C.'s steamer Mahamuddy. The gallant officer was engaged in the taking Feo-chou-foo, in China, for which he obtained a medal.

Mr. VIVIAN LUKE, a midshipman of the Wolseley, whilst going in a dingy to Howrah for the purpose of conveying stores to the ship, fell overboard, sank, and was not seen afterwards. The body was found yesterday morning. The unfortunate boy was a most promising young sailor, and very generally liked. He was nephew to Mr. Luke, the Judge of Midnapore.—Englishman, Dec. 23.

BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION FOR THE AFFAIRS OF THE PUNJAB.—The office of deputy secretary of this board has been abolished by a resolution of the Governor-General, as also that of commandant or superintendent of police. Major Neville Chamberlain is to be the military secretary to the Board, and the captains of police at Mooltan, Dhera Ismael Khan, Rawul Pindee and Umritser, are to correspond direct with him on matters connected with the police. The office of pension pay master is to be held by an uncovenanted officer on a salary of Rs. 250. A considerable saving is effected by these new arrangements.—Lahore Chron. Dec. 16.

LORD STANLEY.—Lord Stanley had arrived in Calcutta, and immediately engaged in visiting the public places and institutions in the presidency. His stay was short. He has since set off for the upper provinces, and would proceed by way of the Indus to Bombay; thence he would return to Europe.

SIR HENRY ELLIOT.—It affords us much pleasure to learn from the Delhi Gazette that this distinguished officer was not ill at Saharunpoor, as we had been informed.—Lahore Chron.

THE AGRA BONUS FUND COMMITTEE of the civil service announce that their scheme has been carried out by the assent of a large proportion of the service. The voting is as follows:—Unconditional assents, 98; conditional, including joint responsibility, 9; assent, excepting joint responsibility, 4; dissents, 13, no answer, 6; total members of service in North-West Provinces, exclusive of members about to retire, or absent at sea, 130. Mr. Rowland Money, c.s., has consented to act as secretary to the "Agra Bonus Fund." We have now to see the effect of the scheme on promotion; we have heard it estimated that sixteen officers, holding the highest appointments, can be easily tempted to retire immediately. If so many retirements take place, upwards of sixty steps to a higher grade will be the advantage gained; that is to say, more than one-third of the service will be immediately benefitted by the bonus fund. The lion's share of the vacant annuities will be secured to the N. West, and if the fund is properly supported, and based on well-considered principles, the juniors, who are now paying for promotion, will in their turn receive the amount back again when they wish to retire.—Delhi Gaz. Dec. 20.

DOLLER SING.—We understand that the manor house estate, Mussoorie, has been taken for the Maharajah Dulkeep Sing, and that he will proceed to that station as soon as possible after his interview with the Governor-General.—Ibid.

STUDY OF THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—We notice that a certificate of high proficiency in the Hindee language has been granted to a young officer of the Company's service, viz. Ena. Lowe, of the 11th N.I.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

CANAL DEPARTMENT.

Fort William, Dec. 5, 1851.—The official designation of officers employed as "assistants in the canal department," is changed to "deputy superintendents."

REPORTS OF ARRIVAL OF MILITARY AND MEDICAL OFFICERS.

Fort William, Dec. 12, 1851.—Instances having lately occurred of military and medical officers arrived from England delaying to report, in person, at the town major's office, their return to duty; and subsequently requesting that their return may be reckoned from the date of arrival of the ships on which they were embarked, instead of from the date of the town major's counter-signature to their return certificates, the honourable the president in council is pleased to call attention to general orders, by the commander-in-chief, dated September 26, 1846, with reference to which it is directed, that cadets and assistant-surgeons on first arrival, and military and medical officers on return from furlough, shall report their arrival, or return, in person, at the town major's office, which is open daily for that purpose, presenting, at the same time, the certificates granted at the India-house; and such arrival or return will be reckoned from the day on which the town major may affix his counter-signature to those documents.

2. The only cases in which exemption from the above rule will be admitted, are those of medical officers in charge of troops, whose absence from the ship might lead to inconvenience, and of officers suffering from illness. In both of these cases a written report will be received.

3. By government general order, No. 21 of January 20, 1841, it is directed that military and medical officers of this presidency arriving at Bombay, whether on their way to, or return from Europe, shall report themselves to the adjutant-general and town major at Bombay. These reports also should, when possible, be made in person.

MADRAS.

THE MOPLAHS.—The Bangalore Herald quotes a letter from Cannanore to this effect:—"I hasten to inform you that we have just received news from Calicut, of the discovery of a plot which some Moplahs were in course of forming for another outbreak. It is said that, through the activity of the magistrate, seventeen of these scoundrels were apprehended between the 8th and 10th November, and are now in durance vile. It is to be hoped that such an example will be made of them as will effectually tend to deter the Moplahs from again making any disturbance. Nothing short of the gallows will bring about this desideratum."

THE RAJAH OF TREVANDRUM was highly gratified by the receipt of an autograph letter from her Majesty, in acknowledgment of the ivory state chair offered by him for her acceptance. The ceremony of the presentation of the letter is said to have been a most interesting one.

MANGANEZE.—A letter from Jubbulpore states that a large supply of manganese, also some first-rate clay for pottery, had recently been discovered on the Mirzapore road in its neighbourhood; while Dr. Hunter gives an account in the Madras Athenæum of a rich ore which has been found in the vicinity of Vizagapatam, some of the blocks weighing from 200lb. to 300lb.

FRENCH MISSIONARIES AT TONKIN.—The French corvette Capricieuse has been despatched to Tonquin to demand the release of certain missionaries whom the ruler of that country had imprisoned.—U. S. Gaz.

NATIVE CRICKETERS.—A cricket match has been lately played at Madras, in which sepoys have been mixed up with British officers and soldiers. The sepoys are said to have played capitally. Their batting especially elicited the admiration of the bystanders, and Brigadier Mayne, himself engaged as a player, declared that they would be "by no means the worst off in any eleven in England."

MR. PORTER.—We understand that Mr. Walter Elliott, the commissioner for the northern circars, has failed to prove the charges which he brought against Mr. Porter, the collector of Masulipatam, and that in consequence the proceedings have been referred to the Court of Directors. We are bound to suppose that justice has been done in the case, but when does it happen that a member of the civil service is found guilty under similar circumstances? An investigation carried on within the scope of the accused's influence is purely farcical, and no sane man will peril his own prospects, and to a certain extent his reputation, by preferring complaints against an asserted delinquent, unless he has the fullest assurance that the trial will take place in a distant locality.—Athenæum, Dec. 16.

CAPTAIN MONTGOMERY, of the Mysore commission, and Captain Dobbs, of the Chittledroog division, have been ordered to exchange appointments.

COURTS-MARTIAL.—Lieut. MacLeod, 40th M.N.I., has been sentenced to dismissal from the service for having falsely stated that he had called a brother officer (Lieut. Dale) a coward. The sentence is remitted at the recommendation of the court. Lieut. Buchanan, 4th M.L.C., is sentenced to three months' suspension for insolence to his commanding officer. Ensign Ryves, 19th M.N.I., has been tried for having neglected to redeem his promise given in a bond for debt, and acquitted.

BOMBAY.

THE LONDON MAIL of Nov. 21 arrived at Bombay Dec. 24th, per Auckland.

RESIDENT AT BARODA.—COL. OUTRAM, the Resident at the court of Baroda, is now in Bombay, and, it is expected, will leave India by the steamer of the 17th January, or 3rd of February. The colonel has resigned his appointment (one of the most lucrative which a military man could hold in any part of India) for the same reason that, some years ago, he would not appropriate to himself his share of the Scinde prize-money, namely, that he could not keep either the situation at Baroda, or the plunder of Hyderabad, without effectually shutting his own mouth against injustice. We have learned from the Bombay Gazette that the gallant colonel will not return to Baroda. Our contemporary adds: "He has made the place too hot to hold him. The scoundrels have been too many for him;—and the Bombay Government has given him no support. Major Lang, political agent in Kattywar, has, it is said, been offered the appointment from which Colonel Outram has thus, in a measure, been driven, as being too honest for it; but, with a becoming soldiery sympathy and pride, Major Lang has refused to accept it. Indeed the offer of the appointment to any honest man, under the circumstances, is little short of an insult, which, if he have much sense and spirit, he cannot but resent, by refusing to accept it, whatever temptations he may have put in his way." We understand that the appointment of resident at Baroda is to be given to Mr. John M. Davies, of the civil service, the collector and magistrate of Surat. The Government could hardly have chosen a better man than they have done to succeed Col. Outram. Mr. Davies is looked upon as one of the best magistrates in the presidency, and has always been greatly beloved by the natives, especially by the ryots and poorer classes, wherever he has been stationed. The inhabitants of Surat and the surrounding districts, will have cause to lament their collector's removal to Baroda. With regard to the motives for Colonel Outram being about to proceed to England, we have heard a report that he does so at the desire, and by the wish, of Government, in order to lay before the Court of Directors a plan for the annulling of certain defects in the present treaty existing between the English Government and the Guicowar of Baroda, as well as for placing the whole treaty on a different footing from what it is at present. Connected with this report, we have heard that Colonel Outram is, at the end of his sojourn in England, to return and again take up his appointment as resident at Baroda. We sincerely trust the above rumour is true: its announcement from official sources would rejoice many persons who are sorry to see bribery, corruption, and villany unpunished at the court of his highness the Guicowar.—Telegraph, Dec. 30 and Jan. 2.

THE STEAMER "SURAT."—The Ajdaha returned to port on the 23rd ult., her search after the missing steamer Surat having proved fruitless. She put in to Porebunder, and examined all along the coasts of Cutch and Kattiwari, but could gain no intelligence of the object of her search. All hope of the existence above water of the Surat may now, we fear, be given up; her fate will probably for ever remain involved in mystery. The following is a list of the names of the Europeans who were on board the Surat when she left Bombay:—P. Duverger, master; J. Watt, chief officer; B. Somerville, chief engineer; and Lieutenants Goddard and Stainforth, of the Bombay engineer corps, passengers. The total number of souls on board is supposed to have been about ninety, the whole of whom it cannot now be doubted have perished.—Bombay Times, Jan. 2.

EUROPEAN CORPS.—It is rumoured that, during the present year, there will be no movements amongst the European regiments of the Bombay army.

A SURVEY from the mouth of the Gulf of Cambay southward to approach Bombay is about to be undertaken by Commander Bennie, I.N., the object being to obtain more exact determinations as to the soundings and changes that may be in progress in the basin of this part of the sea.—B. Times.

MAHABALESHUR TEA.—The Bombay Times mentions, that certain Chinese are cultivating tea at Mahabaleshur, with a view to profit, and expect to obtain tea of good quality from the plants.

THE ENGLISH LOOM with the fly shuttle is now becoming popular among the natives. It has also been introduced by the German missionaries into the South Mahratta country, and the juvenile criminals in the Bombay School of Industry are instructed in it.

ENSIGN BENNETT, who received an unattached commission for planting the colours of his corps on the walls of Mooltan, has been attached to the 1st Fusiliers till further orders.

INFANTICIDE.—A meeting of the chief Rajpoots of Mynpooree has been held, to put down the horrible custom of infanticide formerly so prevalent amongst that nation, but which of late years has been well nigh extirpated.

CEYLON.

The Ceylon papers contain copious descriptions of the grand banquet and ball given by the Kandian chiefs to the Governor on the 10th December, at Kandy. The library rooms were enlarged by a temporary gallery in front, and the road thence to the district court-house (where the supper was laid) was covered over and lighted up. The whole was decorated with white olas and fruits, in the native style. From an early hour in the day, natives began to arrive in town, having the esplanade opposite the Maligawe Temple as a concentric focus, until at dusk the street became actually impassable. The crowd was very great; a venerable priest declared he had never seen so large a gathering before; such a "sennegge," he exclaimed, "was not even seen in the days of the kings of Kandy."

At the supper, the chief Dunnuwille proposed the health of their guest. "Admiring, as we cannot but do," he said, "the glorious constitution under which we are placed, and remembering that the British rule is one to which the Kandian nation has voluntarily subjected itself, we, the hereditary chiefs and descendants of the ancient Kandian families, who are to-night assembled from various parts of the Kandian country, desire to testify our unfeigned loyalty and attachment to our absent sovereign by a suitable manifestation of our personal regard and esteem for her present representative. Borrowing, therefore, from our European friends the notion of a public entertainment, as the fittest and most civilized mode of displaying those feelings, we have to-night chosen a no less memorable building than the ancient audience-hall of the kings of Kandy, as a befitting place for this noble purpose; a building which, while it serves as a memento of the by-gone independence of our nation, is calculated to suggest to our minds the pleasing idea of our now living under a Government whose grandest and most distinguishing characteristic is its unflinching love to dispense justice to all its subjects; for in this very hall, whence as from a star chamber at one time issued the sanguinary decrees of a despot, is now administered that justice to the Kandian people which their own deposed sovereign so recklessly denied them. Having, therefore, ladies and gentlemen, no grounds to complain of the transition we have made, but everything to make us reconciled to the change, the chiefs of these provinces have always been anxious to testify their gratitude to such of the British Governors as have befriended them."

THE HON. JAMES STEWART, Esq., Acting Queen's Advocate (whose demise it lately became our painful duty to announce), was the eldest son of the late Capt. James Stewart, of the Ceylon Rifle Regiment. He was born in the colony on the 24th March, 1821, and received his education at the Colombo Academy, and subsequently under the private tuition of the Rev. James Selkirk, at Cotta. It was chiefly, however, under the domestic roof, and by the teaching of his father, that the son's education was completed, and those extraordinary powers of reasoning and debate, which rendered him afterwards the successful and accomplished advocate, were exercised and improved. Mr. Stewart studied for the Bar, which at that time presented the only prospect of success for promising young men, and was admitted as proctor of the Supreme Court in 1840, when only nineteen years of age. He was not a week in the profession when he distinguished himself in a case before the North District Court, in which he contested certain monopolies claimed by head Moormen. The case was appealed to the Supreme Court, and on his appearance there, Mr. Justice Carr complimented him upon his able argument. His practice rapidly increased, and on the division of the Bar,—a measure which Mr. Stewart opposed,—he was enrolled as advocate in 1844. At this time, the ordinance forbidding the distinctions between the classes of the Wellale caste,—of which the first class refused to sit with the other classes on juries,—was argued before the Legislative Council, when Mr. Stewart made a speech in behalf of the opponents, which, though it did not succeed in arresting the ordinance, raised him to eminence as an orator. In 1845, he was appointed Deputy Queen's Advocate of the Midland Circuit. In 1847, Sir Arthur Buller left Ceylon on leave, and Mr. Stewart was appointed to act as Deputy Queen's Advocate for the whole island, in which office he was confirmed in 1848, on the appointment of Sir Arthur to the Indian Bench, and the promotion of Mr. Selby to the office of Queen's Advocate. In December, 1849, Mr. Selby was summoned before the Parliamentary Committee, and Mr. Stewart succeeded him as Acting Queen's Advocate and Member of the Legislative and Executive Councils. In these offices he gave universal satisfaction, and in his private life he was esteemed and respected by all. He died on the 18th November, of a disease of the heart, at the early age of thirty.

At the next meeting of the Court, the Chief Justice alluded to the death of Mr. Stewart, by which, he said, the profession had lost its brightest ornament. He said he was one of the cleverest men he knew, and he acknowledged the valuable assistance which the Bench had always received from his great learning and industry. Notwithstanding the enormous amount of public business he had to manage, he had invariably displayed so much industry and application in every case he was entrusted with that one would suppose he had nothing to attend to but the case on hand. On all cases in which he was engaged, he brought the greatest talent and industry to bear. In argument he was clear and logical, and clothed his ideas in most perspicuous language.—Abridged from the Ceylon Observer.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

The intelligence brought by the Hellespont is to the 28th Dec. from Cape Town.

The Trans-Kei expedition, comprising about 4,000 men, crossed the Kei in two divisions—the one near the mouth of the river, and the other higher up. The main division, under Major-general Somerset, 2,000 infantry and 1,000 cavalry, formed three columns, which started respectively from King William's Town, the Blinkwater, and Whittlesea, and met at the Imvani, on the northern border of British Caffraria. These columns were under Col. Mackinnon, Gen. Somerset, and Capt. Tylden. Col. Mackinnon's column, about 1,600 men, and including detachments of the 12th Lancers, 60th Rifles, the 2nd, 6th, and 73rd regiments, Cape Mounted Rifles, and other corps, left King William's Town on the 27th November, and marched northward to the Imvani. At Imvani, on the 3rd December, this column formed a junction with that of Gen. Somerset, who had arrived from the Blinkwater by way of Kat River, and also with the force of Capt. Tylden, from Whittlesea. Gen. Somerset's column comprised about 1,000 men, and Capt. Tylden's about 400—both being composed chiefly of burgher and native levies, with some men of the Cape corps.

After this junction, Gen. Somerset proceeded on to the White Kei, detaching Capt. Tylden with about 900 men, and afterwards Major Somerset with 100 cavalry, to scour the country about the headwaters of the Kei, whither the Caffres were supposed to have driven their cattle. This service was well performed, and about 2,000 head of cattle were captured. Some skirmishing took place during these operations, and several Caffres were killed. On the 7th instant Gen. Somerset formed his camp at Kakadu, near the White Kei; and on the following day Col. Mackinnon and Lieut.-col. Michel started on patrol, with about 2,000 men. Nothing is yet known of the later movements of this division. The operations had been greatly impeded by heavy rains.

While these movements were attracting the attention of the enemy towards the Upper Kei, Lieut.-col. Eyre, with his division, about 1,000 men, left King William's Town on the 1st December, and marched directly upon Butterworth, the mission station near the principal residence of Krelli. In crossing the Kei, he encountered and defeated a large body of Caffres, under Bookoo, an inferior chief, who, like Krelli himself, had hitherto professed to be neutral. Forty-three Caffres were killed in this engagement, including two nephews of Bookoo. On our side four men are said to have been killed or wounded. After arriving at Butterworth, Col. Eyre made patrols into the neighbouring country, where he captured a considerable number of cattle, and again defeated a body of Caffres.

Whilst these successful operations had been going on beyond the Kei, the hostile Caffres within the colony were no less active and successful in their forays in some of the frontier districts. Fort Beaufort, Cradock, and Somerset districts have suffered severely from the ravages of the enemy, whose principal strongholds are in the Waterkloof and the Fish River Bush. At the former place the camp of the Caffres and rebel Hottentots, on the Kromme Heights, is reported to occupy a space as large as the town of Fort Beaufort, and to be well supplied with cattle and sheep. Since the departure of the expedition beyond the Kei, these marauders have driven off from a single farm in the Fort Beaufort district about 1,900 sheep (of which 450 were recovered) and 250 head of cattle. Many other valuable flocks and herds have been swept off from the adjoining country. In some instances patrols of farmers and troops have been able to recover the spoil; but in other cases, the plunderers, who move usually in large bodies, comprising both horse and foot, have repulsed their pursuers, and carried off their booty in triumph.

Sir Harry Smith remained at King William's Town. No military operations have taken place in that immediate vicinity.

In the Orange River sovereignty, and in Natal, tranquillity prevailed. The political affairs of both those settlements were, however, in an unsettled state. The assistant commissioners, Major Hogge and Mr. Owen, had arrived at Bloem Fontein. A number of the settlers, both English and Dutch, had presented an address to the commissioners, in which the troubles in the sovereignty were ascribed to the improper interference of the local authorities in the quarrels of the native tribes. The project for the abandonment of the sovereignty has given great dissatisfaction to the colonists, who allege that it would not secure peace, but would encourage the turbulence of the Caffres.

The enemy took advantage of the absence of the troops on the Trans-Kei expedition to make an ineffectual attempt to carry Alice and Fort Hare.

The Cape Legislative Council had been in session during the greater part of the month. The second reading of the constitution ordinances was not to come on before the 28th of January. The course pursued by the Council, in passing important laws, and pledging the public credit for large sums, had excited very great and general dissatisfaction. Public meetings had been held at Cape Town and other places, to express the sentiments of the inhabitants in regard to the constitution embodied in the draught ordinances, when resolutions were passed, gratefully accepting this constitution, and expressing the general desire that it should be established at once, and without alteration.

BORNEO.

An occurrence has taken place, not far from Labuan, which can leave little further room for doubt as to the existence of pirates in this quarter, and satisfies Mr. Cobden's demand for proof that the pirates, if any such existed, ever molested an English vessel.

Mr. Robert Burns, a grandson of the Scottish bard, has been engaged for some time past in commercial speculations in Borneo. The Dolphin, a vessel of which Mr. Burns was supercargo, had been trading at Maludu Bay, a gulf situated at the north-eastern angle of Borneo, some leagues above Labuan. As she was preparing to leave, she was hailed by two prahus, offering goods for sale, and accordingly dropped her anchor till the next morning. Pursuant to their intimation, the natives came on deck, and produced their commodities, which Mr. Burns proceeded to examine. While he was thus engaged, the chief of the prahu suddenly drew a concealed kresse, and struck his head from his body. The captain, who was pacing the quarter-deck, received at the same time a blow in the cheek, which wounded but did not disable him. He scrambled to the bowsprit and begged hard for life, but the crew of the prahu under the vessel's bows drove their spears through his back, and he fell dead into the water. The pirates, after butchering three more of the ship's crew, and a woman, carried off their prize, and anchored off Benggaya, in Labook Bay, not far distant. As it happened, however, they were disappointed in the selection of their anchorage; for the sheriff or chief of Benggaya, Yassin by name, on recognizing Mr. Burns's schooner, took possession of her and carried her up the river. Shortly afterwards, the Hon. Company's steamer Pluto, on a cruise after pirates, called in at Maludu Bay, and, on hearing the intelligence, departed at once for Benggaya, where she received the Dolphin from the hands of Sheriff Yassin, with her decks still dyed with blood. Sheriff Yassin earnestly besought the commander of the Pluto to furnish him with protection against the return of the pirates, who, as they had plainly threatened, would, he said, most certainly reappear with a powerful force and avenge themselves for the loss of their prize. Neither was there any doubt about the race or country of these sanguinary marauders. They were Borneans, from a district well known and within easy reach, and the Pluto, in fact, was actually in quest of some such prey when she received the intelligence which despatched her to Benggaya.

The Times, in reporting this occurrence, remarks that, in the debate upon the Borneo pirates, "Mr. Bright and his friends relied, with considerable plausibility, on the evidence of Mr. Robert Burns, who was not on good terms with Sir James Brooke; unpleasant communications had passed between them, and as the particular question of piracy was one on which their views especially differed, it was highly natural that strong testimony should be forthcoming in favour of Mr. Bright's assumptions. Parliament, however, decided the other way, and with reason too, for Mr. Burns has unhappily furnished in person a fatal refutation of his own evidence."

The difference between Rajah Brooke and Mr. Burns, referred to above, arose out of the refusal of the rajah to sanction some dealings of the latter with the native chiefs of Borneo. Sir James, as Rajah of Sarawak, exercises a monopoly of its antimony mines, supposed to be the richest in the world. Mr. Burns found mines equally rich in the territory of the independent Sultan of Borneo, 150 miles away from the territory of Rajah Brooke. On the latter discovery, Mr. Burns obtained permission from the native prince to work the mines; but this, it appears, was refused, and Mr. Burns alleged that the rajah employed his influence, as a servant of the Crown, to obstruct fair competition. In June last, he addressed to Lord Palmerston a formal complaint against Sir James Brooke, of the obstructions and discouragement offered by him to the prosecution of his (Mr. Burns's) lawful and authorized views. He states:—"It will be in your lordship's recollection that an application was made to the Foreign Office early in 1848 to sanction a negotiation which I had entered into with the Sultan of Borneo Proper, on behalf of a highly respectable mercantile firm of this island and Glasgow, to work the antimony mines of Bintulu and other adjoining districts, under my immediate superintendence on the spot; and it was in furtherance of this object that I repaired to Bintulu, in February of the above year, under an escort provided by the Sultan of Bruni, and with a letter from him to the native chiefs of the country. I had resided there for about a month, when an armed prahu arrived from Sarawak, despatched by Rajah Brooke's representative or deputy in the government of that territory, with a letter, of which one Haji Adjoosman was the bearer, to the Bintulu chiefs, in which they were informed that they were not to permit any white man either to work the mines or to reside in the country, and that, if they disobeyed, a steamer would be sent up from Sarawak to punish them. This letter was read out, in my presence, before the Bintulu chiefs, the Pangerans who accompanied me from Bruni, and in the hearing of several hundred natives; and on examining it I found that it bore the seal of the Sarawak Government, and it was signed, 'A. Crookabank, for the Rajah.' I put it to the Bintulu chiefs whether they were subject to Sarawak, or would respect the authority of the Sultan, and I was not interfered with; but had I not been resident long enough among them to ingratiate myself with the chiefs and people, and hearing the letter of the Sultan, the consequences to me of such a letter might have been serious, and affected my personal safety. The Sarawak letter was subsequently conveyed to Bruni, and I am informed was delivered to the Sultan, or to one of his ministers. I do not, of course, mean to maintain that Sir James Brooke was accountable for an act done during his absence, and when he was himself on his way out from England, unless it shall appear to be part of his own system. But your lordship will allow me to say that, when brought to his notice, such interference of his representative in Sarawak with the undoubted rights and privileges alike of British subjects and natives of Borneo, and such an assumption of Sarawak superiority to be upheld by British armed force over the Bintulu chiefs, called for due consideration at the hands of her Majesty's Commissioner in Borneo. Your lordship will, however, perceive, from the correspondence which I have the honour to inclose, and to solicit your lordship's attention to it, that my representations on the subject were deemed so improper, that Sir James Brooke declined to have any further communication with me. I very respectfully submit to your lordship that Sir James Brooke must be considered as adopting the responsibility of an unjustifiable interference with the intercourse of British subjects with the natives of Borneo for lawful objects. A similar example of this policy was furnished by Sir James Brooke himself, in afterwards addressing a letter to the chiefs of Bintulu, calling upon them to turn me out of the country. This letter was brought by the H.C. steamer Phlegathon, which had been despatched to the coast by Sir James Brooke from Singapore, shortly after his arrival there from England, and reached Bintulu in July, 1848, just after I had returned from my explorations in the country of the Kavana. Like the former letter, it was read before the chiefs in my presence, and in the hearing of a numerous audience of natives; but as I was at the time desirous of returning to Singapore, and availed of the arrival of the Phlegathon to leave Bintulu, it occasioned no difficulty, and did not prevent several of the principal chiefs, and a large body of the natives, from accompanying me on board of the steamer to the mouth of the river. I beg also to state that Sir James Brooke has since made use of his influence to excite hostile feelings towards me among the natives, and to spread, both amongst them and among Europeans, derogatory views of my character and objects. It is not many weeks since I returned to this settlement, from a trading voyage to the north-west and north coast of Borneo, which occupied nearly a year, visiting the various rivers and ports, and I found that, when last at Labuan and Bruni, Sir James Brooke had called together certain Bruni Pangerans and Nakhodas, to make inquiry of them into my proceedings, in a manner which testified his own hostile disposition, and his desire to hear me injuriously spoken of."

All these allegations are, of course, to be regarded as ex parte; Sir James may have a very satisfactory answer to them.

Mr. Burns, who had penetrated further into Borneo than any other European (having acquired two of the native languages), has written an account of his travels, and of the tribes he visited, in the Journal of the Indian Archipelago for February, 1849.

Mr. Hume has addressed a letter to the Times, in which he denies he ever stated that there were no pirates on the coast of Borneo; he says, what he maintained was, "that the 500 Dyaks of Sarabes and Sakarran put to death on the night of the 31st of July, 1849, by the ships of war under the command of Capt. Farquhar, R.N., and by the natives of Sarawak, under command of Sir J. Brooke, were not sea pirates, and ought not to have been massacred under the vague allegation that they were so." Sir James Brooke has replied to this letter, in the same journal, taxing Mr. Hume "with having uttered a falsehood in stating," in the letter, "that he has never alleged anything against his (Sir James's) private character;" whereas Mr. Hume, he says, had accused him of murdering the innocent, knowing them to be innocent; as influenced by motives of personal ambition, and urged forward by views of sordid interest; had applied to him the term "impostor," and spoken in a strain to blast the character of a man, and to dishonour him as a gentleman.

LITERATURE AND SCIENCE.

A VERY curious paper, by Major A. Cunningham, of the Bengal Engineers, on the Topes of Central India, is published in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society.

Of these topes, none had before been described, except the largest of the Sanchi group, near Bhilsa, where there are five distinct groups of topes. This large tope, as well as the second sized, had been breached, in a clumsy manner, but no relics had been obtained. Major Cunningham and Lieut. Maisie determined to proceed in a different manner, by sinking perpendicular shafts down the middle of each tope, so as not to injure the external appearance of the building. In this way they opened nearly thirty topes, of which about ten yielded relics of different kinds.

"A tope is a solid hemispherical building, varying in size from the great Sanchi chaitya, which is 106 feet in diameter, to the smallest at Bhojpur, which is only 6 feet in diameter. The most ancient topes were simple hemispheres, such as the great Sanchi chaitya, which most probably dates as high as the middle of the sixth century B.C. The next in point of antiquity are most of the Bhilsa topes, which date from the end of the third century B.C. In these the hemisphere is raised a few feet above the plinth by the addition of a cylindrical portion. The third class of topes is found in Afghanistan, and dates about the commencement of the Christian era. In these the hemisphere is raised considerably above the plinth. The last class, of which the Sarnath tope, near Benares, is a magnificent specimen, has the hemisphere raised to an height equal to its own diameter.

"A tope is a religious edifice dedicated emphatically to Buddha, that is, either to the celestial Adi-Buddha, the great first cause of all things, or to one of his emanations, the Mánushi, or mortal Buddhas, of whom the most celebrated is Sákya Muni, who died in B.C. 513. Topes were also dedicated to the most illustrious of Sákya's disciples, and to those other Buddha priests who, through superior sanctity, were believed to have attained complete absorption into the divine self-existent spirit from which they originally sprang.

"In the topes dedicated to the celestial Buddha, the invisible Being who pervaded all space, no deposit was made, but the divine spirit, who is Light, was supposed to occupy the interior, and was typified on the outside by a pair of eyes placed on each of the four sides, either of the base or crown of the building. Such is the great Chaitya, near Kathmandu, in Népál, dedicated to Sambhu or Swayambhúvāth, in which the eyes are placed on the sides of the crown of the building. Such also are the numerous chhodens (m-Chhod r-Ten) in Tibet, which are dedicated to the celestial Buddha, in contradistinction to the Dung-tens (g-Dung r-Ten), which are built in honour of the mortal Buddhas. The first means simply 'an offering' to the Deity, the latter, as its name implies, is a 'bone [g-Dung] receptacle,' that is, a building containing the bones or relics of one of the mortal Buddhas. In these the eyes occupy the sides of the basement. A specimen of the first kind is represented in the third compartment of the inner face of the left hand pillar of the eastern gateway at Sanchi, in which the two eyes are placed one above the other.

"The great topes at Sanchi and at Sattdhara, in which no deposits were discovered, were, I believe, dedicated to the celestial Buddha, Adināth, as well as most of the topes in Afghanistan, in which no relics were found.

"The remaining topes around Bhilsa would appear to have been chiefly the receptacle of relics, either of Sákya Muni himself, or of some of his more eminent disciples and followers. Of Sákya Muni we have no undoubted relic; but I fully believe that a minute portion of bone, which we found enshrined in a small crystal tope covered by an earthenware box containing various stone beads and scraps of gold, is that of the great sage himself. The earthenware box once had an ink inscription on the outside of its lid, but as the pot had been first thickly whitewashed, the thin coating had mostly peeled off before our discovery, and we were quite unable to identify a single letter out of the five or six fragments that remained.

"Of Sáriputra and Mahá Mogalāna, the right and left hand disciples of Sákya, we found bone relics both at Sanchi and at Sattdhara, and at both places the relics were found together in the same tope. At Sanchi the relic boxes (of steatite) were placed in square stone boxes, on the lids of which were inscribed respectively SARIPUTASA, '[relic] of Sárputra,' and MAHA MOGALANASA, '[relic] of Mahá Mogalāna.' The box of Sárputra was placed to the right or south (Dakshina), he being the right hand disciple. Inside the lids of the steatite boxes were inscribed in ink, Sá and Ma, being the initial letters of the two names. This is perhaps the oldest ink-writing in existence.

"The next most valuable relics are those of Mogaliputra, the high priest of the Buddhist religion, who conducted the proceedings of the Third Convocation, or religious synod, which was held in B.C. 247. His relics were found both at Sanchi and at Andher. At Sanchi they were found along with those of eight others. The Sanchi inscription is short, being simply SAPURISASA MOGALIPUTASA, '[relic] of the emancipated MOGALIPUTRA.' The Andher inscription is longer, SAPURISASA MOGALIPUTASA GOTIPUTA ATREVASINO, '[relic] of the emancipated MOGALIPUTRA, of the family of GOTI, race of ATRI.' I have ventured to take Atrevasino as the equivalent of Atrivansya, because I find it coupled with Pándukula in one of the inscriptions from No. 2 tope, which will be mentioned hereafter. The chief objection, if not the only one, to this reading, is the statement of the Maháwanso that Maggah, the father of Tisso (or Mogaliputra), was a Brahman. Sapurisasa I take to be the equivalent of Sapurushasya, 'joined with the Supreme Being,' or 'emancipated.'

"The relics next in importance are those of the missionaries who were despatched to various countries for the propagation of the Buddhist religion immediately after the close of the Third Convocation in B.C. 247. Of these great men we have the relics of two who are mentioned in the Maháwanso (pp. 71, 74), as having been deputed to the Himavanta country, or Himalayan region. These are Majhima and Kasapa. The relics of the first were found only at Sanchi, with a simple inscription, '[relic] of the emancipated MAJHIMA.' Those of Kasapa were found both at Sanchi and at Sonári, each inscription distinctly mentioning the mission to the Himavanta country. The Sanchi inscription is SAPURISASA KASAPA GOTASA SAVA-HIMAVATA-CHARITASA, '[relic] of the emancipated KASAPA GOTASA, the missionary to the whole Himavata.' The Sonári inscription merely adds the name of his father, Koti-putasa, the son of Koti; the rest of the legend being exactly the same.

"Another eminent missionary of the same period was Goriputra. He is not mentioned in the Maháwanso; but the inscription on a small piece of steatite, from Sonári, inclosed in a crystal box with his relics, leaves no doubt upon the subject. It is as follows:—SAPURISASA GOTI-PUTASA HIMAVATASA DABABHISASA DAYADASA, '[relic] of GOTI-PUTRA, the brother-of-religion to Dardábhistrá, of the Himavata.'

"The meaning of dayáda (literally, son, offspring, relative) is best illustrated by the following anecdote from the Maháwanso, p. 36. When Asoka had dedicated his son Mahindo and his daughter Sanghamitá to the priesthood, he inquired from the great priest, Mogaliputra, 'whose act of pious bounty to the Buddhist religion had been the greatest?' The crafty priest, 'foreseeing that it would tend to the advancement of the faith,' replied, 'Ruler of men! a greater donor and benefactor to the faith even than thou art, can be called only a benefactor; but he who causes a son or daughter to be ordained a minister of our religion, that person will become not a "benefactor" (dayáda), but a "relation" (dayádo) of the faith.' GOTI-PUTRA had therefore earned the same title of dayádo by the ordination of a son or daughter as a minister of the Buddhist religion. But the most interesting part of this inscription is the mention of the country of Dardábhistrá as the scene of GOTI-PUTRA's missionary labours. These countries lie along the Indus, the former (Dardu of the present day) being to the west, and the latter, Abhisira (the Hazára of our maps), being to the east of the river. GOTI-PUTRA's relics were also discovered at Sanchi.

"The other holy men of whom we have found relics, but of whom no mention is made in the Maháwanso, are the following:—1. Kosaki-putra (Sanchi and Sonári). 2. Hariti-putra (Sanchi and Andher). 3. Maha Vinaya (Sanchi). 4. Majhima, the son of Kódini (Sanchi and Sonári). This Majhima must be different from the other, because the relics of Majhima, as well as those of Kódini-putra, were found together in the same tope at Sanchi. 5. Váchhi-Surijayata (Sanchi and Andher). 6. Váchhi, race of Goti (Andher). 7. Alábagira (Sonári). 8. Upahitaka (Bhojpur). 9. Patito (Bhojpur).

"These discoveries appear to me to be of the greatest importance for the illustration of the early history of India, as they authenticate in the fullest manner the narrative of the most interesting portions of Asoka's reign. The various specimens of red and black pottery, especially those which are covered with a dark metallic glaze, seem to merit examination on their own account, while they are curious on account of their antiquity. The steatite vases and boxes are elegant in shape, but their ornaments are rough and coarse. The crystal boxes are also interesting, especially one of nearly cylindrical shape, which is about one inch and a half in height, and rather more in breadth, while it is less than one-eighth of an inch in thickness.

"An ink inscription, found at Andher, is worthy of special notice, as it records that the relics of HARITI-PUTRA were the 'gift' of ASWA DEVA (Asa-Devasa dānam). This legend is written inside the lid of the steatite vase.

"In my account of Mogaliputra's relics, I mentioned that the term Atevasino was found coupled with Pādava in one of the inscriptions of No. 2 tope at Sānchi. It is as follows:—

"PATI-BANASA BHICHHUNO PADATASA ATEVASINO-DANAM.
"Gift of Prativarna, the Mendicant Priest, a Pāndava of the race of Atri."

"The inscriptions, which are found upon the rails, pillars, and coping-stones of the colonnaded enclosures at Sānchi, amount to about two hundred and forty. Some of them are, of course, but of little value; but the whole, taken together, are of considerable importance, as they record the names of cities and of races, and exhibit the language and alphabet of India at the time of Alexander and his successors. Every letter of the alphabet which James Prinsep found in the longer inscriptions, I have found in these short ones. Lastly, they prove most unmistakably the predominance of the Buddhist religion by the use of names and terms peculiar to that belief; and they establish the early existence of the Buddhist triad of Buddha, Dharma, and Sangha, by the frequent occurrence of such names as

"Budha Pālita	Dhama Pālita	Sangha Pālita
Budha Rakhita	Dhama Rakhita	Sangha Rakhita

"A few of these inscriptions are partly obliterated; but I have copied and translated the whole, as I consider that every word of the language will lessen the difficulties of translating the longer inscriptions. A few specimens may be interesting:—

"No. 90 of my list. Upedadasadānam.
'Gift of Upendradatta.'

"No. 62. Ujeniya Upedadatasa pajavataya Māyādataya dānam.
'Gift of Māyādatā, the mother of UPENDRADATTA, of Ujain.'

"No. 63. Ujeniya Upedadatasa Bhaginiya Himādataya dānam.
'Gift of Himādatā, the sister of Upendradatta, of Ujain.'

"I cannot now attempt any description of the numerous bas-reliefs further than to state generally that they exhibit the adoration of topes, of bo-trees, and of wheels, processions escorting relic boxes, apparently after a successful campaign for their acquisition; ascetic life in the woods, where both the Śrāmanas and Śrāmanās (Σειῖνοι and Σεῖμαι) are represented in various acts of meditative abstraction, &c. These are the Gymnosophists of the Greeks; for I believe that the term Buddha (the 'wise') was literally translated by the Greeks, and that Sophists, Philosophers, and Gymnosophists, all equally mean 'Buddhist Priests.'"

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON,

TUESDAY, February 3, 1852.

LITTLE more than forty years ago, when the country was shuddering at the dismal prospect of being entirely denuded of gold, he would have been reputed a madman, or rather a fool, who should have suggested the possibility of so prodigal a yield of the precious metal that the world would be, in such a brief interval, invaded by an opposite dread, that of being overwhelmed and smothered by it. Yet at the very time when gold was vanishing from our circulation; when an enormous premium was paid for light guineas; when paper was almost the only medium of commercial transactions, the standard metal having risen from 3*l*. 17*s*. an ounce to 4*l*. 12*s*.,—at this very time, gold was lying, as it were, broad-cast upon the surface soil of California, requiring little more than picking up, and was so abundant even in our own colony of New South Wales, that, at a later period, roads were made and bridges built of this inestimable, indispensable ore, lurking in its native matrix.

No incident, amongst the many wonderful discoveries of science and the equally surprising efforts of art which characterize the present age, will affix to it a more permanent mark of distinction than this mighty treasure-trove. It is no South Sea Bubble or Mississippi Scheme, flatulent with ideal wealth; the gold fields are no creations of the fancy, which seems, in this instance, to have lagged behind reality; we have tangible evidence in the annual millions of bullion pouring from the Californian diggings, which seem again to be in a fair way of surrendering their attractions to the more startling revelations of those in Australia. The reports in the colonial papers are more than confirmed by the statements in private letters, which speak of "enormous masses of gold ore" in the Bathurst district; of "quantities of pure gold which stagger all belief;" of "veins of nearly pure gold five or six inches thick," &c. A piece of ore, or clod, weighing 150 lbs., one-third of which was pure gold, was brought into Sydney, in September last, from the estate of a gentleman whose lands had been supplying gold ore, in mountain quartz, for making roads and building bridges. In short, a country supposed to be destitute of all metals, turns out to be a huge gold-mine!

What is to become of us in this strange calamity? Some provision can be made against an impending famine, a potato disease, or a terrible fall in the stocks; but here comes a fearful torrent of gold, from the effects of which, it is said, nothing can secure us. It is absurd to bury our money, in order to meet an evil day, as used to be done; better sell our gold whilst it is worth anything. Then, what shall we take in return for it? Bank-notes, unhappily, are re-convertible into gold, so that we shall be no better off by the exchange. We have before us the provoking fate of being impoverished by becoming too rich; like Midas, we run the risk of starvation in the midst of unbounded opulence.

These are the melancholy forebodings with which the auriferous intelligence from the modern Ophirs fills our torpid capitalists. That the sudden and extraordinary influx of this precious metal will produce important consequences in the commercial world, especially in those countries where gold is the standard of the circulation, no one can doubt. It is, however, by no means certain that these effects will be injurious, far less disastrous. Gold, like other commodities, derives its worth solely from its exchangeable value. The gold-finders, therefore, in order to realize their wealth, must exchange their metal, which they cannot eat or drink, for something else. The more gold they disinter, the larger amount of other articles they must buy with it. In this view of the case, the apparently redundant supply of gold will operate, in the first instance at least, as a stimulus to trade, creating a demand for the other products of labour, and consequently an additional fund of capital for the payment of wages. That, in process of time, should the supply of this precious ore continue to increase, it will derange the relations between the circulating medium and the prices of commodities, is extremely probable; but the operation will be slow and gradual, and it must be remembered that, in proportion as gold falls in its relative value, there will be less activity at the diggings, and the profits of ordinary commerce will allure men from a pursuit which, at the best, has always hitherto been a precarious one.

These are, however, but crude speculations; the results of all great changes in the world's affairs have been seldom, if ever, correctly foreseen by the most discerning minds. We may safely assume that these stores of a highly-prized and a highly useful metal, so long concealed and so simultaneously disclosed, were not repositied in the earth for purposes inconsistent with the good of mankind. It is only an abuse of the precious ores that makes them irritamenta malorum: rightly used, they administer to the exigencies and the conveniences of the human race, and we can see no reason why the commercial and financial arrangements of the civilized world, which has a common concern in this matter, should not adapt themselves to the change, without prejudice to the interests of any particular classes.

In contemplating the rapid progress of science and art, and the impulse given to discovery in the domain of pure physics, it is natural to indulge a wish that these material benefits may be followed by moral improvements amongst the masses of society. It is humiliating to think that, as the human family rises in the scale of intellectual greatness, and augments its acquisition of the means of happiness, it makes no corresponding advance in the path of social regeneration. Let us hope that, as we have gained so many victories over the elements, and have now the prospect of superabundant capital to furnish employment to labour, we shall soon behold symptoms of a beneficial change in those classes which feed our prisons and infect our social atmosphere, and hail the dawn of brighter days in the moral world.

It is not very unusual for Courts-Martial in India to miscarry in some way or other; but the Court at Cannanore, which tried the sepoys of the 39th regiment of Madras Native Infantry who ran away from a handful of Moplahs in August last, has rather distinguished itself in this respect. Ten men, including three native non-commissioned officers, were found guilty of having "misbehaved before a body of fanatics in arms, by shamefully retreating in disorder and panic before them, casting away their arms, and one of them (a havildar) his accoutrements and ammunition also." For these grave military offences, inferior only in degree to downright treachery, the Court sentenced the culprits to two years' imprisonment, the non-commissioned officers to be likewise reduced to the ranks,—a sentence utterly disproportioned to their guilt: the misbehaving before an enemy, and the casting away arms or ammunition in presence of an enemy, being each punishable in the Royal army with transportation. But the Court virtually mitigated even this lenient sentence, by recommending the prisoners to mercy, on the ground that "they were in such a position that they could neither use their bayonets, nor fire on the enemy, while drawn up in files." This apology, weak and futile as it is, turns out to be without any foundation. From the "Remarks" of the Commander-in-Chief, it appears that the detachment was formed for passing a causeway in its front, but that the men fled on the first intimation of the advance of the Moplahs, who, our readers will recollect, numbered about twenty, armed only with knives and spears, the sepoys consisting of sixty-five muskets.

The convicted runaways of the 43rd regiment, in the affair of 1849, were sentenced by the Court to seven years' imprisonment, with hard labour, for which the Commander-in-Chief (Sir G. Berkeley) substituted dismissal from the service. General Armstrong has dismissed the offenders in the present case, having very properly declined to confirm the sentence, as being most incommensurate with the offence and obviously inappropriate, since it retains in the service men who, in abandoning their arms and flying in the face of "a paltry number of half-armed fanatics," have shown their unfitness for it, or that they had voluntarily renounced their character of soldiers.

In a former article,* we attributed the cowardice exhibited by the Madras sepoys, upon the several occasions of misbehaviour before Moplahs, to an unconquerable superstitious dread of these fanatics. In thus accounting for their conduct, we intended in no degree to excuse it. To expose these men unnecessarily to so severe a trial, is, in our opinion, highly injudicious; but to admit such a plea in extenuation of such an offence would be ruinous to discipline. The Court-Martial does not, however, rest its recommendation to mercy upon this ground, but, on the contrary, expresses its assurance that "had the men been formed in line, facing the Moplahs, when both muskets and bayonets would have come into play, the men would have behaved gallantly!" It would be just as reasonable to adopt the suggestion of the old subadar, that the Moplahs "are not an enemy, but thieves and robbers, and there is no honour in killing them."

NONE of the functions of our Government in the East are so embarrassing and difficult as those which bring it into immediate contact with the religious creeds of the people, ranging as they do through an infinite variety of strange doctrines, from Atheism to Pantheism. By compact, express or implied, with the nations that have submitted to our rule, they are entitled to toleration and protection in the free exercise of their religion. Policy herein coincides with justice; for the permanence of our authority over those subjugated nations, and the hope of reclaiming them from their errors, greatly depend upon a forbearance on our part from any proceeding calculated to shock their religious prejudices, which are highly sensitive, and, when excited, not easily soothed and pacified. The recent outbreak at Bombay, occasioned by apparently a very harmless act of a Parsee editor, but which the Mahomedans interpreted as an outrage upon their faith, is an indication of the fires that slumber beneath a treacherous surface throughout British India.

To many persons, who do not subscribe to the wild theory, that it is obligatory upon Christian governors to extinguish by violence all creeds but their own amongst their subjects, it doubtless appears an easy matter to pursue a middle course, leaving encouragement of superstition on one side, and persecution on the other. But between these two extremes there is sometimes a neutral ground, where the ruling authority has to find its way with no other lights than are afforded by its own good intention, and is liable to be suspected of leaning, through accident or design, to one or other of the obnoxious boundaries. The Government connection with temple property in the south of India, though entirely free from any taint of association with the degrading rites of Juggernath, which it tended to check and restrain, was, through a pardonable excess of zeal, denounced in this country, and the connection, much to the contentment of the priests of that idolatrous establishment, and greatly to the increase of its votaries, has been dissolved.

A similar crusade, upon a smaller scale, is in operation in Ceylon, where the "Buddhist Question" has for some time past been a topic of fierce controversy in the journals, as well as in private circles. Buddhism seems to present an impassive obstacle to the progress of Christianity in that island, and the honest indignation of the missionaries seeks to batter it down. Revolting descriptions are given of a creed which, uncorrupted by idolatrous practices with which it has no original association, is remarkably inoffensive, presenting externally many points of analogy with Romanist observances, whilst its moral code harmonizes with the Christian. The hostility of the enemies of Buddhism has been recently exasperated by an act of the Governor of Ceylon, transgressing, as they allege, the line of demarcation betwixt toleration and encouragement.

It appears that, in 1847, the local government, in obedience to instructions from home, withdrew entirely from "all participation in the outward practices of Buddhism;" amongst other things, it relinquished the custody of the "Tooth of Buddha," the supposed palladium of the State, as well as of the faith,—an act which is said to have created so much discontent amongst the influential classes of Singapore, that it has been reckoned amongst the causes of the late insurrection. The instructions were carried into execution so scrupulously, that the late Governor refused to sign the commissions appointing the high priests of Wihares (principal temples), and the Basnaik Nilemes, or lay chiefs of Dewales, which had been previously considered essential to their validity. These appointments are merely civil instruments, investing the holders with a legal tenure, as trustees, in property of which they are the undoubted owners, and the continued possession of which was guaranteed to them by solemn compacts on the subjection of the country to British rule. In consequence of this refusal, the representatives of the temples were disqualified from carrying processes into the civil courts against those who disputed the legal claims of those establishments, or who sought to defraud them; in other words, a grievous civil and secular loss was inflicted upon them, in direct violation of the convention of 1815, which promised "protection to the Buddhist religion."

Here, it was evident, the Government had suffered the balance to incline too much one way; to avoid the appearance of encouraging Buddhism, it was really, though unintentionally, persecuting it. Sir George Anderson, seeing the matter in this light, did not hesitate to rectify an act of undesigned injustice, and resumed the practice of signing the civil deeds, called commissions. This equitable proceeding on the part of the Government has provoked a violent outcry in the island; the journals are stuffed with letters and leaders stigmatizing the act as nothing less than patronizing Atheism, and the clergy of the diocese of Colombo, with the archdeacon at their head, have memorialized the bishop upon the subject, urging him to join them in a petition to the Crown, praying for "an absolute severance of the Government of Ceylon from the idolatrous abominations of the country."

The memorialists argue that the grievance alleged by the temple trustees might be removed by other measures; that the signature of a Government officer to any document by which the priests are authorized to hold temple property makes it to be regarded as a Government act, and the document becomes a powerful instrument of persuading the people that Buddhism is directly sanctioned by their rulers; that it is not only inconsistent in a Christian Government, but also unwise, to maintain even the slightest connection with a religion which denies the existence of a Creator, and keeps in bondage the minds of the people; that the resumption of the practice will encourage the hopes and stimulate the efforts of the priests to attempt the recovery of other abolished practices; and that the return to a system deliberately abandoned as wrong implies greater guilt than the original support of it.

The bishop, concurring in the "general principles" expressed in the memorial, declined to accede to it. He observes, in his reply, that the act complained of partakes in no respect of a religious character; that to security in their unquestioned rights all the subjects of the British Government, Christians or heathens, lay or clerical, are alike entitled, and to deprive them, or even allow them to be deprived of it, from the want of legal protection, pledged as the Government is to secure that protection to them, would amount to a breach of good faith; and "to represent, therefore, so simple an act of justice to helpless claimants, though of a different creed, as in any sense a religious act, is a misrepresentation of its true merits."

Few, we think, who take a right view of the obligations contracted by the British Government towards its subjects in the East, will dissent from the conclusions of Bishop Chapman, who is entitled to great credit for his frank and candid avowal of sentiments so liberal, though so little in accordance with those of his over-zealous clergy.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—In the Englishman overland summary, received by a recent mail, there is some account of a very desultory and unsatisfactory meeting of certain of the members of the Bengal Military Fund in Calcutta, in which the old war-cry of the insolvency of the Fund, and the insufficiency of the present rates of subscription of the members, was loudly reiterated and insisted upon. Of course, such speechification, though well understood on the spot,—and taken there at its real value,—does mischief elsewhere. We have heard of whole coteries of ladies in Europe being alarmed for the continuance of their pensions, and of military gentlemen at the clubs being agitated at the idea of being called upon for increased contributions.

The question is certainly a rather alarming one; but I can assure your readers, who take an interest in the subject, that there is no ground at all for either of the contingencies apprehended. Mr. Neison, the able actuary, who in 1849 so thoroughly sifted the affairs of the Fund, has again been referred to on certain points of supposed difficulty; and I have authority for stating that, on further and fuller investigation, he has adhered wholly to his former opinion, and has even adduced several sources of benefit to the Fund which he had not taken into account in his former report. He is thoroughly convinced of the soundness of the institution.

Without professing to be an actuary, in the case of a public association like the Bengal Military Fund, where the rules and rates of subscription are published in all the East-India Directories, no great stretch of amateur calculation is required to arrive at a pretty safe solution, or, at all events, to form an idea whether the means of the Fund and its income from subscribers are sufficient to provide for its stipends to widows, and the other outlay it incurs.

We know that every cadet who proceeds to India is a compulsory subscriber. He has to pay a certain well-defined sum regularly while he lives, according to his rank; and we know that, assuming his age to be 19 when he goes to India, the tables of mortality for that climate have fixed his "expectation of life" at about 30 years. It is not impossible he may marry at the usual average age, say from 25 to 30,—as estimated from the data and numerous facts which have been published on the late inquiry. Taking these grounds, there is no difficulty in finding that every officer, one with another, so situated, must pay into the Fund during his "expectation of life" a sum not less than £1,650, as improved at compound interest at the rate of 8 per cent. allowed by the Government to the institution.

Let us further suppose a hundred officers so paying, and that each had married, as assumed. It will be found by the same tables of mortality that, of the hundred ladies, only seventy wives can have survived their husbands, and that the sum applicable to each lady, to meet her annuity, will stand at no less an amount than £2,357.

Under the circumstances assumed, the pension for the widow would be £205. 6s. 3d.; or, if entitled to a higher grade of pension, a corresponding and higher contribution must have been paid by her late husband, who, if a lieutenant-colonel, must perforce have left £2,800 at interest at 8 per cent. (secured by the Indian Government), to meet an annuity of £273. 15s. I therefore fearlessly ask if there is a single assurance office in London which, on such terms, would not gladly undertake to pay these pensions to ladies who, although beyond the age of 40, do sometimes remarry, and thus surrender their pension?

The same kind of calculation may be applied to all the circumstances generally of the married members of the Fund, and will show that all subscribers contribute on the average amply sufficient to meet the claims of their widows. It is unnecessary to touch upon the unmarried classes, further than to say that they pay considerably more than they can beneficially receive from the institution, and therefore must materially aid and support its general stability. In a word, the result of the present little investigation, strengthened as it is by the mature opinion of one of the first actuaries in Europe, entitles me to affirm that the late meeting in Calcutta was altogether inconsiderate in its alarm, and uncalled-for in its public observations.

I am, Sir,

Jan. 24.

Your obedient servant,
MILES.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—Permit me to offer a few remarks on the correspondence that has recently appeared in your paper between a Mahomedan Moonshee and a Madras Civilian. It appears to me that the gentlemen differ more from misapprehension of each other's statements, than from any material error on either side. I do not happen to have by me the Moonshee's letter, as my copy of the Mail goes in due time to the country; but the impression on my mind is, that he simply said, or meant to say, that the Hindustani is the language most extensively spoken and understood, more or less perfectly, throughout the Indian empire, taken as a whole. If this, and no more, be his meaning, I have no hesitation in agreeing with him. Again, if I recollect rightly, the assertion of "A Civilian" amounts to this, that Hindustani is not spoken in the Madras presidency. Now this will not stand the test of daily experience. I will, in fairness to the Civilian, believe that he meant to say, "that in no district of the Madras presidency is the Hindustani a vernacular language," in which case he would be quite correct; but to say that Hindustani is not spoken or understood in Madras, is a satire on the rulers of that presidency. Why, in your very last Mail, I see no fewer than nine young gentlemen's names in the Madras army who have passed their examinations in Hindustani. Now, if Hindustani be not spoken or understood in Madras, what malicious motive can induce the authorities there to make their young officers learn it, and pass an examination in it?

The plain fact is this: Hindustani, in its various dialects, is vernacular from Patna to the Sutlej; along the main stream of the Ganges and its numerous tributaries to the east and west. Circumstances have contributed to make it the "Lingua Franca" of the whole of our native troops throughout the three presidencies. It is also more or less known by the more respectable inhabitants in every town in the empire, particularly such as held official situations, and those who have travelled in pursuit of traffic. Many of the Madras troops, as is well known, come from the southern parts of the Bengal presidency, particularly Berar, &c. The Hindustani is very extensively known and spoken in the Nizam's territories, being the court language of that kingdom. It is spoken and understood by Musalmans everywhere, even in provinces where it is not vernacular. It is the naval tongue of the lascars, from the mouth of the Ganges to that of the Red Sea.

From this it clearly follows, that, if a young man has a prospect of going to India in a year or two, either in the civil, medical, military, or naval service of the East-India Company, he cannot possibly fix on any Indian language so certain of being useful to him as Hindustani. I know, from long experience, that there is no earthly difficulty, far less impossibility, in acquiring such a knowledge of it as will suffice for all useful purposes, in this country, to be followed by a few months' colloquial practice in India. As for knowing it idiomatically, in the sense spoken of by the Moonshee, it is not to be expected. But in that sense I will venture to say that no native of India ever did or ever will know English, unless he be brought here when very young.

I am, Sir, &c. &c.

D. FORBES.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—Permit me to make a few observations on the letter of a "Mahomedan Moonshee," which I have just seen in your paper of the 19th November. The subject he writes upon is of paramount importance to the welfare of our Indian dominions.

The Moonshee declares that he never in his life met, either in India or in England, with an Englishman who could correctly read, write, or speak any of the languages current in India. Now his means of observation have either been very limited, or he is injuring his cause by trying to prove too much. I can point out to him the names of many Englishmen, in the three presidencies of India, whose attainments in the native languages currently spoken in their respective localities would no doubt surprise him, and perhaps induce him to modify an assertion which more intimate inquiry would prove to be unfounded.

It is not difficult to perceive that the Moonshee's experience is confined to one presidency. Though he may have visited Madras or Bombay, as his port of departure from India, he evidently has little acquaintance with those divisions of the country. By writing of our Indian empire under the title of "Hindoostan," he leaves his readers erroneously to infer that "Hindoostanee" is the general language of India; or, as you express it, "the easiest and commonest medium of communication with the people." I need scarcely remind the Moonshee that his own countrymen apply the name of Hindoostan only to the north-western provinces of the Bengal presidency. But he must permit me to inform him, that the Oudee, or Hindoostanee, is almost invariably styled, by the natives who speak it in the southern peninsula of India, "Moosulmaanee bae,"—that is, "the language of the Mahomedans,"—thereby clearly pointing out its origin, and proving that it is not the language of India in an extended sense. In the Mahratta, Teloogee, and Tamul (languages spoken by millions of Hindoo inhabitants of the presidencies of Madras and Bombay, and of the states of Nagpore and Hyderabad), the Hindoostanee is in like manner designated "the language of the Mahomedans."

It would, therefore, have been useful had the Moonshee told us what provinces of India he referred to, when he called Hindoostanee the "language of the land," inasmuch as it is quite possible to travel many hundreds of miles through the heart of the peninsula, from the Nerbudda to Cape Comorin, without ever hearing Hindoostanee spoken by the people of the country, merely by avoiding the military and civil stations on the route. Is the Moonshee aware that there are districts in India in which the Mahomedans themselves prefer using the vernacular of the Hindoo population, both in writing and speaking, rather than avail themselves of the Hindoostanee?

The Moonshee writes of the Hindoostanee as though it were everywhere written and spoken after the pattern of the class-books used in the College of Fort William; whereas those persons who have had experience of that language, as spoken in the three presidencies and in the native states of Central India, must be aware that it differs extremely in various localities. Being formed by an union of the languages of the court and the camp, Hindoostanee, as spoken by natives of the country, is always found to be greatly corrupted by the introduction, not only of words, but of idioms, taken from the predominant language of the province or territory in which it may be used. This is the case to an extent little understood by some, who indulge in strictures upon the relative knowledge of Hindoostanee possessed by Company's servants in Madras and Bengal.

It is a fact which must not be concealed, that Hindoostanee is much less cultivated by the natives of India than the observations of the Moonshee lead us to suppose; and I have met many native Government officials in all three presidencies who knew it only colloquially. When the use of Persian was abolished in the judicial courts of Upper and Central India, it was not at all unusual to find that the Serishtahdars and other Amlah, who could express themselves in flowery Persian, enriched with Arabic phrase, were very much at a loss, both in orthography and construction, when compelled to write roobekaries and depositions in Hindoostanee, as I could easily prove.

The reason is obvious: Hindoostanee possesses no literature of its own; the works extant in the language are not original, but generally translations from the Persian; and it is only fair to add, that for these translations we are indebted to the liberality of the East-India Company, and the labour and research of its servants in India, who compiled the only grammars and dictionaries to be found in the language.

Hindoostanee is, moreover, a language in which no Mahomedan of rank or education will correspond, unless he is compelled to do so by Government. He prefers to communicate his ideas in Persian, which he acquires as the basis of a liberal education. To this must be added a fact not yet noticed, that natives of India, of all degrees, consider it more dignified to employ a scribe, than to indite their own correspondence. Consequently, every chieftain keeps a moolsuddie, who conducts his correspondence, the principal contenting himself with attaching his final mark (adda) to the letters which are despatched, and placing his seal upon the envelope. Such is their prejudice in favour of Persian, that I know many instances of native chiefs who did not conceal their dissatisfaction when addressed by letter in the Hindoostanee language, which they considered to be the "cheenee zuban," and unadapted to the correspondence of persons of rank. It may be supposed, therefore, that their astonishment was extreme when they were informed that the use of Persian had been interdicted.

Although I agree with the Moonshee in opinion, that the native languages are much less studied than they ought to be, I deny the existence of such general ignorance on the part of the Company's servants as he asserts. The affairs of the country would be at a stand-still were that the case. It would not be difficult to cite much more ludicrous examples of error than those he has brought forward in corroboration, and he has not been very happy in his selection. I cannot say much for the Hindoostanee of his sepoy, who, when they could not understand the interpreter on parade, remarked, "Sahib ne girja keea;" neither can I commend the Moonshee's translation of the phrase. I have interpreted to sepoy of all three presidencies, and have had long acquaintance with Bengal sepoy; but the phrase is quite new, and I think only proves that the men who used it were no great proficient in Hindoostanee.

Khoda and Russool are proper names most ordinarily borne by Mahomedans, and it is not very extraordinary that a young civilian should be so little acquainted with the Mahomedan confession of faith as to mistake "God" and "the Prophet" for the names of a defendant's witnesses. But the Moonshee is hypercritical when he animadvert on the civilian's translation of the sentence, "I have made a mistake." The word "mistake," in Hindoostanee, is as often used with an active as a passive verb, as a reference to authorities that have issued from the press under the patronage of the Indian Government will prove. I can assure the Moonshee that the form of expression which he condemns is in common use in a Mahomedan city, the inhabitants of which consider that they speak the purest Hindoostanee current in India.

It is impossible to deny that the native youth, educated in the colleges of Calcutta, learn to read, write, and speak the English language as fluently as Englishmen. They do so under extraordinary advantages. They commence at an early age; their minds are entirely devoted to the attainment of that one object; they have uninterrupted opportunities of hearing English spoken by educated persons; and they have access to the noblest literature in the world. But how different is the case of the cadet or young civilian in this country! In addition to the other branches of a liberal education, he can devote but little time to the attainment of Oriental learning; he must content himself with occasional lessons from a professor or moonshee, and has no opportunity of hearing the language spoken till he gets out to India, and is called upon to perform other duties. Any measures that will facilitate the attainment of a knowledge of the native languages, by the Court's nominees, in England or in India, will be an incalculable boon. Colloquial proficiency I consider of more importance than a knowledge of reading and writing; but, unfortunately, more attention is paid to the latter than the former. Young men pass examinations from books, but never learn to speak the language.

There is a struggle going on between English and Hindoostanee, and the natives of India are, without doubt, making more rapid advances in the former than we are doing in the latter. They are respectively the languages of the conquerors of the country, and if we retain India long enough, it is not improbable that English will drive Hindoostanee out of the field.

I am, Sir, yours obediently,

London, 28th Jan. 1852.

AN OLD MULL.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—Is it not reasonable to suppose that the holders of loan notes in India would be entitled in equity to demand from the Crown payment of such notes, in the event of a change taking place in the Government of India, in the same way as the East India Company itself could, in terms of the charter act, demand redemption of the dividend? The holders of loan notes may have perfect confidence in such securities, chargeable as they are upon the revenues of India, as long as the East India Company exercises its present functions; but, under another state of things, they might be inclined to withdraw from such investment, and the securities themselves might fall considerably in value.

What the territorial debt of India may be, I am not prepared to say within a few millions; but this, together with the twelve millions that would have to be paid to the proprietors of stock, and the home bond debt, would form a considerable amount for our Government to provide for, after a transfer of management to a department of state, which might, in all probability, prove an utter failure.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant.

City, Jan. 31, 1852.

LORD BROUGHTON retires from the Board of Control, and Mr. FOX MAULE takes his place. Solve senescentem. He has left some heavy work to his successor in the construction of the new bill for the government of India. That work devolves on a man whose long habits of business, strong sense, and genial temper particularly qualify him for it. The Indian charter being about to lapse, something was necessary to be done, and Lord JOHN has given the work to the best man for the purpose he could find in the existing Cabinet.—Times.

GOVERNOR OF THE CAPE.—Downing Street, Jan. 20.—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Major-General the Hon. George Cathcart to be Governor and Commander-in-Chief in and over the settlement of the Cape of Good Hope and its dependencies, and to be her Majesty's High Commissioner for the settling and adjustment of the affairs of the territories adjacent or contiguous to the eastern and north-eastern frontier of the said settlement.—London Gaz.

CHARLES HENRY DARLING, Esq., is appointed Lieutenant-Governor of the Settlement of the Cape of Good Hope and its dependencies.—London Gazette, Jan. 27.

THE REV. SAMUEL W. STEEDMAN, chaplain to the troops at Hongkong, is appointed to the colonial chaplaincy of that island, in the room of the Rev. Vincent John Stanton, resigned.—Observer.

MR. CHARLES HENRY STEWART is appointed Deputy Queen's Advocate at Ceylon.—Ibid.

THE AUSTRALIAN STEAM COMPANY (via the Cape of Good Hope) have announced that their first iron auxiliary steamer, of 1,500 tons registry and 300 horses power, will be ready to start for Port Phillip, Adelaide, and Sidney, early in April.

AN IRON VESSEL, called the Three Bells, just arrived from Australia via Calcutta, furnishes a very satisfactory proof that the objection against the use of iron in the Indian Seas, on account of the impossibility of preventing it from fouling, can be effectually overcome. The Three Bells was coated with the protective paint which has lately been brought into use, and she has returned, it is said, without any barnacles and with less fouling than many coppered vessels coming off a voyage from Calcutta only. This vessel was built at Dumbarton for the Australian trade, but her first trip was to the St. Lawrence, on which occasion she made the passage from Quebec to Glasgow in fifteen days and eleven hours. She is 730 tons, old measurement, and her hold is divided into five water-tight compartments. Her time from Calcutta was 111 days.

FAREWELL DINNER TO MR. PEACOCK.—The bar of the Home Circuit gave a farewell dinner on the 17th January, at the Albion, Aldersgate Street, to Mr. Peacock, on his appointment as legal member of the Supreme Council of the Indian Government. Mr. Serjeant Channell, as leader of the circuit, presided; and among the gentlemen present were—Mr. Baron Platt, Sir Frederick Thesiger, Mr. Serjeant Shee, Mr. Montagu Chambers, Q.C., Mr. E. James, Q.C., Mr. Bramwell, Q.C., Mr. Bodkin, the Hon. R. Denman, Mr. Serjeant Gaselee, Mr. Petersdorff, Mr. Locke, and about fifty other members of the circuit.

INDIA COTTON from the new experimental grounds continues to come forward, and the India Company have ordered their agent to forward 781 bales for sale at Manchester, chiefly raised from New Orleans' seed in the collectorates of Dharwar and Kandeish.—Times' Manchester Letter.

BRITISH SHIPPING.—It appears now to be pretty well ascertained that the best built English clippers, especially those of the Aberdeen model, are, in point of sailing qualities, more than a match for the best built American vessels of the same description—that is, the vessels which have been built in the United States expressly to compete with the vessels of this country in the China and East India trade. When what was said to be the extraordinary sailing qualities of the American clipper Oriental were so lauded, we very soon received several communications showing that the boasted passage of the Oriental had been equalled, and even surpassed, by British ships. Indeed, our shipping columns of to day contain a record of the achievement of a British ship, which we believe has never been approached by the shipping of any other country. We refer to the Statesman, Capt. Godfrey, which has made her passage from London to Melbourne (Port Phillip) in seventy-six days; and this, too, with a cargo fifty per cent. above her register tonnage; while the American clippers, of which we have heard so much, are seldom found to carry their register tonnage. We hope, therefore, there is an end to any further boast of the unequalled performances of American vessels. We have shown that in point of sailing qualities British ships are found to excel the best American vessels; but as seagoing ships, for safety, strength, and durability, the former are far superior to them. This arises, if not from the construction, at least from the materials of British vessels. As to construction, it must be divided into two branches—the modelling and the practical workmanship; the one the business of science, the other of mechanical operation. Here, again, we say, England can successfully compete with any foreign country; in modelling, we need only instance the Aberdeen clipper vessels; and in the practical operation of building—the shipwrights' work—we do not believe any country will venture to compete with England.—Shipping Gazette.

THE "RIPON."—The Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company's ship Ripon, Capt. R. Moresby, I.N., arrived at Southampton on the morning of the 19th January, with the heavy portion of the East-India, China, and Mediterranean mails. The performance of the Ripon, during this her first voyage since the improvements she has undergone, has fully justified the expectations entertained of a great increase of her speed. On the outward voyage she met with head winds the whole way to Alexandria, with the exception of about 20 hours, and homewards she experienced a succession of head winds, excepting for 22 hours on the coast of Portugal, when she had a strong south-west breeze with a heavy swell and thick weather, and across the Bay fresh easterly winds. It is somewhat remarkable that, going a distance of over 6,000 miles, and steering in every point of the compass during a voyage occupying 600 hours, only 42 hours of favourable weather were experienced during the whole time; but for this she would have been in Southampton on the 17th or 18th, and, as it is, this is the earliest arrival of the Southampton portion of the India mails on record. The voyage from Alexandria has occupied about 13½ days; this, if 36 hours be deducted for stoppages at Malta and Gibraltar, will give 12 days as the mean steaming time, showing an average speed of over 10½ miles, equal to nearly 9½ knots an hour,—an excellent result, considering the adverse winds that have been encountered, and contrasted with the speed the Ripon used to attain before the new boilers and patent paddle-floats were supplied. The number of the Ripon's passengers was augmented just before leaving the Bay of Biscay, by the accouchement of Mrs. Theodore Dickens, of Calcutta, who was safely delivered of a daughter.—Times.

THE SHIPMENTS OF SPECIE by the Peninsular and Oriental steamer Beatrice, which sailed on the 20th January, amounted to 390,000*l.*, in bar silver and dollars, for India and China, and 12,000*l.* for Alexandria.

THE TEA-TRADE.—The following remarks on the course of the tea-trade during the past year is from the annual circular of Messrs. William James and Henry Thompson:—"The review of the course of the tea-market during the past year, as also the comparison of prices ruling at its commencement and close, present striking contrasts; but, at the same time, are fully accounted for by the laws relating to supply and demand. At this period last year we were congratulating ourselves upon the prospects for 1851, consequent upon the great reduction in the stock, under an excess of which the market had so long laboured, hopes being entertained that the exports for the season would again be on a moderate scale. On this point, however, it is almost needless to say how fallacious all estimates have proved, or how shipments have been unduly stimulated by the rates ruling here during the latter part of 1850 and the first quarter of 1851; leading to most disastrous consequences, not only during a portion of the past, but (with the ruinously high rate of exchange) threatening even worse results for the operations of the present year, unless a material check to shipments takes place, or some extraordinary circumstance should act upon the home market. The stock shows an excess of 13,000,000 lbs.,—the delivery for consumption an increase of only 2,800,000 lbs.,—while the range of low prices has continued sufficiently long to counterbalance any effect from the previous high rates; and we are thus confirmed in a former expressed opinion, that, until we have a reduction in the duty, it is in vain to look for any great extension to the trade. The imports into the United Kingdom have been 71,500,000 lbs., against 49,300,000 lbs. in 1850. The deliveries for home consumption have been 53,800,000 lbs., against 51,000,000 lbs. in 1850. The deliveries for exportation have been 4,700,000 lbs., against 5,400,000 lbs. in 1850. The stock remaining on the 31st December was 47,500,000 lbs., against 31,500,000 lbs. in 1850." In the face of this report, three ships, the Forfarshire, the Sir Robert Sale, and the Cheapside, all from Whampoa, have arrived in the Downs, with cargoes of tea amounting together to 2,405,000 lbs.

THE FAILURE OF MESSRS. DONALD MACKEY, HADOW, AND CO., East-India merchants, was announced in the City on the 22nd January. The firm have two houses in India,—one at Calcutta and the other at Moulmein; but they express a hope that these may stand. Their liabilities are small.

ORIENTAL BANK CORPORATION.—On the 23rd ultimo, a general meeting of the proprietors of this bank took place at the establishment in Lothbury. Henry G. Gordon, Esq., having taken the chair, Mr. Cargill, the general manager, read the notice convening the meeting. The chairman said they had the pleasure of meeting to increase the board by two directors (making eight altogether), not only in compliance with the charter, but also in consequence of the great increase of the business of the Oriental Bank Corporation. John Pollard Willoughby, Esq., late a member of council at Bombay, and William Scott Binny, Esq., late of Madras, were then elected unanimously as directors. A resolution was passed, fixing the remuneration to be paid to the directors. Col. Bothwick then moved, and Major Gibson seconded, a vote of thanks to the chairman, deputy-chairman, and directors, which was passed unanimously, and the meeting adjourned.

The Essex has been engaged for the freight of stores to Madras.

BOOKS.

India in Greece; or, Truth in Mythology: containing the Sources of the Hellenic Race, the Colonization of Egypt and Palestine, the Wars of the Grand Lama, and the Buddhist Propaganda in Greece. By E. Pococke, Esq. Griffin and Co.

Ever since the hallucinations of Major Wilford, upon the subject of an intimate connection between the mythology and the literature of the East and West, were thoroughly exposed, very few attempts have been made to revive a theory which every sound scholar has repudiated. Now and then, an enthusiast in this path of inquiry has endeavoured to rekindle curiosity, and to pursue analogies which lead to nothing. Colonel Tod, an indefatigable Indian antiquary, as well as an amiable man, laboured hard to prove an identity between the martial institutions of the Rajpoots and the feudal system of Europe, and to establish links of union between the mythological legends of Scandinavia and those of Rajwarra. But the utmost his comprehensive research and great ingenuity could accomplish was, to point out certain accidental resemblances, or practices which the same exigencies would suggest amongst nations utterly unknown to each other. These speculations are very alluring, but, at the same time, very deceptive.

Of this class of theorists, the author of the work before us is the most extravagant that has ever fallen under our notice. He is not content, like his predecessors in this line, with modestly suggesting possibilities or probabilities; he has, he affirms, "solved the problem;" the antiquarians (he means antiquaries) of Greece, according to Mr. Pococke, have originated "a gigantic system of absurdities and a tissue of tales, the opprobrium of history;" and he undertakes to "prove incontrovertibly" the theory he has adopted, which, as far as we can comprehend it,—for his language is remarkably turgid and obscure,—is, that India and Greece were originally one. "The case," he says, "may be stated as follows:—The Picture is Indian; the Curtain is Grecian; and that Curtain is now withdrawn."

This demonstration is made out, not by historical evidence or deductions from admitted facts, but by the instrumentality of verbal resemblances, which are effected by operating upon names in such a way that the eyes of the reader are cheated much in the manner of M. Robin, the potent "Physicien." Words, in the exotic dress given to them by Mr. Pococke, appear to bear a strong mutual resemblance, though they have really no radical affinity whatever with each other. We never met with so signal a confirmation as this work affords of Pope's hackneyed apophthegm, that "a little learning is a dangerous thing." Mr. Pococke appears to have read a good deal, and we regret that it should have been to so little purpose. It is melancholy to see so much labour thrown away.

The Peerage, Baronage, and Knighthood of Great Britain and Ireland, for 1852, including all the Titled Classes. Twelfth Year. By CHARLES R. DON, Esq. Whittaker and Co.

MR. DON has earned a distinguished reputation in this branch of literature, which may properly be termed "polite." His Peerage and his Parliamentary Companion have become manuals amongst even the highest classes. The former work (of which the latest edition, corrected to the beginning of the present year, is now before us), independently of its record of names and pedigrees, contains much miscellaneous information, and we admire the skill with which so much has been compressed within such moderate limits, without the slightest sacrifice. The Second Part, appropriated to courtesy titles, titular distinctions, and terms relating to ranks, &c., is a valuable appendage to such a work. In the article on "Precedence," prefixed, we find a table of precedence in the East Indies, conformably to the Royal Warrant of 1841. Mr. Don remarks two results of this Warrant, which are peculiar to India: "The wives of bishops, &c., have equal rank with their husbands; and the wives of baronets or knights of orders have no rank whatever, although they are persons of title, unless their husbands hold an office of some kind, and even then they must take rank according to that office."

The Appellate Jurisdiction: Scotch Appeals. Edinburgh. Black.

THIS is a strong protest against the manner in which Scotch appeals are dealt with in the House of Lords,—a tribunal presided over by English judges, and led by English advisers alone, who imperfectly understand the law of Scotland, which the writer describes as a simple and consistent system, singularly free from unnecessary subtleties, fictions, and technicalities, and well suited to the habits and character of the people. "The general impression prevails," he says, "that the law of Scotland does not receive fair play in the Court of Appeal; and that this naturally arises out of the want of a sufficient acquaintance with the law itself, and of any present aid by which that want might be supplied at the moment when it was required."

NEW BOOKS, MAGAZINES, and REVIEWS,

VIA BOMBAY, AT ENGLISH PRICES.

Messrs. R. C. LEPAGE and Co. are now giving much of their attention in London to a direct business with the Western and North-Western Provinces of India. They undertake to supply Book Clubs, Officers' and Soldiers' Reading Societies, Private Individuals, &c., with New Books, Magazines, and Reviews, as published, charging them at the English prices.

The cost of transmission by the "Overland Route" is precisely on the scale of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company's Parcel Tariff.

Further particulars may be learnt on application to R. C. LEPAGE and Co., Calcutta; or Mr. JOHN TURNER, Steam Parcels' Agent, Bombay.

ORIENTAL LANGUAGES.—Mr. G. SEYMER, M.A., 14, Michael's Place, Brompton, just returned from India, where he has been employed for about ten years in connection with the C. M. and G. P. Societies, and who possesses high testimonials of his services, wishes to instruct in Tamil, Hindoostanee, or Persian, gentlemen whose views involve those tongues. Mr. Seymer begs to say that the attention he bestowed on Arabic, which enters largely into Hindoostanee and Persian, enables him, he trusts, to render especial assistance to students of the two languages last mentioned.

Terms—a Guinea for Three Months.

FIVE YEARS' LION HUNTING IN SOUTH AFRICA; with ADVENTURES amongst the WILD BEASTS and FORESTS of the FAR INTERIOR. By R. GORDON CUMMING, Esq., of Altyre. With numerous Illustrations of the Chase.

"After testing, where such test was applicable, every fact recorded by Mr. Cumming regarding the habits and actions of the living animals by what is known of their anatomical structure, we have found his statements, with one unimportant exception, to stand that test; and his very ignorance of the organization, which would suggest to the physiologist the habits and actions portrayed in the book, gives the best testimony to the accuracy of the hunter's sketches."—Quarterly Review.

"We feel bound to say that we give entire credit to the truthfulness of the book, which is assuredly one of extraordinary interest, after its kind."—Quarterly Review.

"The style is so natural and fresh from the scene, the scene itself in the far interior of Africa so new, and the hazards attending the chase of the formidable beasts of those wilds so great, that it is difficult to lay the volumes down until the issue of each adventure, as they rapidly follow one another, has been ascertained. In fact, the narrative has the charm of a vivid romance, and the professed novelist may study with envy the native spring of its sinewy style."—Quarterly Review.

PHYSICIAN.—George Burrows, M.D., F.R.S., 18, Cavendish Square.

ACTUARY.—David Jones, Esq.

The principle adopted by the Universal Life Assurance Society, of an annual valuation of assets and liabilities, and a division of three-fourths of the profits among the assured, is admitted to offer great advantages, especially to those parties who may wish to appropriate their proportion of profit to the reduction of future premiums.

The following Table will show the result of the last division of profits, as declared on the 14th of May, 1861, to all persons who had on that day paid six annual premiums, being a reduction of 45 per cent. on the current annual premium. This will be found a most liberal reduction, if the original premiums be compared with those of other offices adopting a similar plan of division of profits:—

Age when Policy was issued.	Date of Policy.	Sum assured.	Original Premium.	Reduced Ann. Premium for current Year.
20	On or before 14th of May, 1846.	£1,000	£19 6 8	£10 12 6
30		1,000	24 8 4	13 8 7
40		1,000	31 10 0	17 6 4
60		1,000	66 11 8	36 12 5

* The attention of Gentlemen connected with India is particularly requested to the Regulations of this Society; as, on comparison with other offices, its terms will be found peculiarly advantageous, especially as regards the liberal plan adopted on the return of Indian Assurers to reside permanently in this country; and the Indian Rates have been calculated from extensive data and Tables exclusively in the possession of this Society, by which the true risk of life during residence in India has been most accurately ascertained.

AGENTS IN INDIA.

BOMBAY—Messrs. Leckie & Co.

MICHAEL ELIJAH IMPEY, Secretary.

TO WIDOWERS AND LADIES RETURNING TO INDIA.

A CLERGYMAN and his WIFE, residing in one of the best situations in Brighton, are desirous of giving home education to two of their children, of the respective ages of 5 and 7 years, and would be happy to take the entire charge of one or two children of similar ages. Those entrusted to them would receive the best instruction from a well-qualified teacher, who would devote all her time to their advancement and recreation, and they would have the same parental care as the children of the advertisers. Terms (inclusive), for the entire year, 70 guineas.

Address (prepaid), A. B., care of Mr. BOLLEN, Confectioner, Western Road, Brighton.

TO PARENTS AND GUARDIANS.

A LADY, the wife of a gentleman holding a high official situation, is anxious to undertake the charge of TWO or THREE CHILDREN TO EDUCATE with her own little girl. The services of a superior resident governess will be secured. Widowers or parents residing in India will find this a desirable opportunity of placing their children in a comfortable home, the Advertiser being able to offer satisfactory references and unusual advantages. She would also be quite willing to take the charge of a little boy.—Terms, £100 per annum, exclusive of dress and medical attendance; £140 with those items included. Should there be two of the same family, £160 or £200 inclusive.

Address M. L., 45 Cornhill, City.

EDUCATION.

THE REV. H. H. CAMPBELL, assisted by a retired Officer of the Indian Army, receives a limited number of Pupils. Mr. Campbell particularly addresses himself to parents in India, assuring them that it will be his endeavour to be a parent to those who are intrusted to his care.

Three or four young gentlemen can be received as parlour boarders, and prepared for the army, direct cadetships—Sandhurst, Addiscombe, and Haileybury. The highest references to clergymen, general officers, and others.

WYCLIFFE HOUSE, Twickenham, near Richmond, London.

THE HEAD MASTER of an ENDOWED GRAMMAR SCHOOL, ten miles from London, receiving twelve private pupils, has now three vacancies.

Gentlemen preparing to pass the Army Examination are received for limited periods, upon special agreement.

The usual course includes the Classics, Mathematics, and Modern Languages, by qualified resident masters; Drawing, Surveying, &c. &c.

Terms, from 60 guineas, in proportion to the age.

For particulars, address "BETA," care of Messrs. Raife and Fletcher, Stationers, 150, Aldersgate Street, City.

COCOA is a nut which, besides farinaceous substance, contains a bland oil. The oil in this nut has one advantage, which is, that it is less liable than any other oil to rancidity. Possessing these two nutritive substances, Cocoa is become a most valuable article of diet, more particularly if, by mechanical or other means, the farinaceous substance can be so perfectly incorporated with the oil, that the one will prevent the other from separating. Such an union is presented in the Cocoa prepared by JAMES ERSS, and thus, while the delightful flavour, in part dependent upon the oil, is retained, the whole preparation will agree with the most delicate stomach.—1s. 6d. per lb.

CHOCOLATE—Those who require a very light beverage, will find the prepared chocolate adapted to their particular taste: it is thinner and more highly flavoured than the Cocoa, possessing more the advantages of Tea and Coffee.—2s. 6d. per lb.

A SEARCH AFTER HEALTH, AND WHERE IT IS TO BE FOUND. A LETTER BY A LIVERPOOL MERCHANT to his Brother Merchants, and to all who are labouring under the Great English Malady, the wear and tear of the system, or an over-wrought brain.

"The letter is written in a high tone of elation, because of a complete return to health.... He had consulted most of the eminent physicians at home and abroad; visited Harrogate, Buxton, &c., and the German Spas. All of no avail. At last he places himself under Dr. Macleod, at his palatial establishment of Ben Rhydding, from which, at the end of three months, he emerges completely cured."—Glasgow Citizen.

GARDEN & SON, ARMY ACCOUTREMENT MAKERS, SADDLERS, &c., 200, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

In consequence of the death of Mr. H. GARDEN, of this firm, ROBERT S. GARDEN feels called upon to inform their distinguished connection and friends that the firm will be continued, and the business carried on as heretofore; and he trusts, by strict attention to the wishes of his patrons, to retain that confidence for so many years placed in his late father.

ESTABLISHED 60 YEARS.

PEAKOME'S SADDLERY, &c. for all parts of the world.—Noblemen, gentlemen, and emigrants are solicited to purchase at fair remunerating prices, and compare them with extortionate prices charged by others.—Best hogskin saddles complete, four guineas; ditto second quality, 70s.; best double bridles, 18s.; best patent carriage collars, 15s.; best pair-horse carriage harness, 18 guineas; round double reins, 40s.; best single harness, £7. 7, Princes Street, Cavendish Square, and 8, Edwards Street, Portman Square.

DECAYED TEETH and TOOTH-ACHE.—Price 2s. 6d.

Patronized by Her Majesty and H.R.H. Prince Albert. Mr. HOWARD'S WHITE SUCCOSANUM for stopping decayed Teeth, however large the cavity. It is placed in the tooth in a soft state, without any pressure or pain, and immediately HARDENS INTO A WHITE ENAMEL, in which remains in the tooth many years, rendering extraction unnecessary, and arresting the further progress of decay, and is far superior to anything ever before used, as it will NEVER become discoloured in the tooth. All persons use it themselves with ease, as full directions are enclosed. Prepared only by Mr. Howard, Surgeon-Dentist, 17, George Street, Hanover Square, who will send it into the country free by post. Sold by Savory, 230, Regent Street; Sanger, 150, and Hanny, 63, Oxford Street; Butler, 4, Cheapside; Johnston, 68, Cornhill; and all medicine vendors in the kingdom. Price 2s. 6d. Mr. Howard continues to supply the loss of teeth on his NEW SYSTEM OF SELF-ADHESION, without springs or wires. This method does not require the extraction of any teeth or roots, or any painful operation whatever. 17, George Street, Hanover Square. At home from 10 till 4.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AN EXTRAORDINARY

REMEDY FOR LIVER COMPLAINTS.—Extract of a letter from Mr. Robert James, of Tredgar, dated December 16th, 1851. To Professor Holloway. Sir,—With gratitude I write to inform you of the wonderful cure your Pills have effected on my daughter, who had been suffering from enlargement of the liver, palpitation of the heart, dropsy, and a troublesome cough. Her case was given up by the medical attendants as hopeless. At this alarming crisis I was induced to try your Pills, and, after taking them, it was astonishing to see how rapidly she regained her health. She is now perfectly recovered, and as well as a parent could desire.

Sold by all Druggists, and at Professor Holloway's establishment, 944, Strand, London; and by all European and Native vendors of medicine throughout the whole of the East Indies.

TO PRESERVE LIFE IN SHIPWRECK.

LAURIE'S PATENT FLOATABLE MATTRESSES

(NOT INFLATED), PILLOWS, LIFE BELTS, and sundry buoyant articles. S. W. SILVER and Co., Sole Licensees. Every Ship Mattress will sustain eight persons in the water for an indefinite period, and at a small increase on the usual cost of those in common use. Every pillow or seat-cushion will sustain one or more persons. The Life Belts are preventives to sinking, the cheapest yet submitted, very portable, and applied in an instant in case of accident. SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

OUR differences with the court of Ava, there is reason to believe, will be terminated without recourse to the ultima ratio regum. On the 1st of January, a letter from the king of Burmah, addressed to the Governor-General of India, was delivered to Commodore Lambert, with a letter to himself from some of the ministers at Ava, expressing their regret that any misunderstanding should exist between the two governments through the misconduct of the governor of Rangoon, and offering to make every reparation in their power; stating that the governor had been recalled; and that the court had directed the governor of Prome (who, it appears, has the government of the lower province from Prome to Martaban) to come down immediately and inquire into the charges brought against the late governor, and to reimburse those parties who had suffered by his extortion. The Court of ~~India~~ has, in fact, as far, at least, as professions go, shown a disposition to do all in its power to be on friendly terms with the English Government.

The Mooltan force, according to the Delhi Gazette, was in the field. A despatch was received from the Governor-General on the night of the 31st December, ordering the immediate advance of the force in the direction of Sukkur. On the 3rd January, the company of European artillery, the 5th irregular cavalry, and the 12th and 41st regiments N.I., under the command of Brigadier Hewitt, marched for Khyrpore, via Bhawalpore. To act in conjunction with these troops, the wing of H. M.'s 64th regiment at Kurrachee had been ordered to join the other wing at Hyderabad, and thence push on by forced marches to Khyrpore. The horse artillery, the 1st grenadier regiment, and the sappers and miners, were also proceeding towards the same destination, being conveyed by steamers as far as it is practicable or expedient. Colonel Stopford is at the head of the Kurrachee troops, subject to the divisional command of General Mansson. The reserved force from Kurrachee was encamped at Hyderabad on the 10th January, waiting further orders. General Mansson had arrived at that station.

The destination of this force is still a matter of doubt and conjecture. It is stated in letters from the camp, that Ali Moorad, against whom it is supposed to be directed, has no apprehension, and has offered to co-operate with his contingent. The Delhi paper observes, that "a force of such imposing magnitude could not be required were Ali Moorad alone and unsupported; accordingly, well-accredited rumour speaks of his successful intrigues with the neighbouring hill tribes, and it is also suggested that in his territories will be found the last gathering of the Sikh nation. It is certainly not a little curious that so many thousands of this warlike and bigoted people should have vanished from the arena without leaving any correct clue as to their place of retreat. At least 30,000 well-armed Sikhs escaped from the fatal battle-field of Goojerat, and although the majority most probably separated to their respective homes, it is more than suspected that many thousands kept together, in the hope of present defence and future revenge." The Kurrachee Advertiser hazards the following conjecture as to the movement of the troops to Upper Scinde:—

"We have heard a report, which appears to us far from impossible, that Herat is threatened by Dost Mahomed. The dying request of the chief of that place to his son was never to succumb to the ruler of Cabul and Candahar, and to seek aid from Persia if it was requisite; any dilatoriness to afford help from the Persians being suspected, was to be met with an appeal to the British power. May it not be then that this movement of troops in Scinde, together with the fact of the forces at Mooltan, Lahore, and Ferozepore, being ordered to prepare for service, is in connection with the expected, perhaps already solicited, succour from us, which we may be induced to grant to Herat?"

The Commissioner of Scinde, Mr. Frere, has started for the scene of action in a political capacity.

The force under Sir Colin Campbell, in the Michnee district, remained inactive at the fort of Dubb, which was nearly completed, and would be garrisoned by the companies of the 71st, hitherto posted at Mutta. The officers' quarters are in the centre, and form a sort of donjon-keep. It is generally believed that the force would move on to Tunjee, and there construct another fort. They had suffered no serious annoyance from the hill-men, said to have been assembling in multitudes around them, and who probably took up a position in the neighbourhood with the view of preventing our advance, or seizing such plunder as an army on the march always affords. Sir Colin Campbell was expected at Peshawur for the purpose of receiving the Commander-in-Chief.

That the Western tribes are bent on giving us trouble, is said to be beyond a doubt; they see that if they do not keep up the agitation, they must abandon the sources of support on which they have depended for subsistence. A chief to the north of Dhera Ghazee Khan, hitherto paid by the British Government to preserve peace in his district, has broken his covenant, and a party of Bozdars had shown themselves in that direction, so that the Momund and Wuzereee infection is evidently spreading southward. The Lahore Chronicle says:—

"Rumours of various kinds, as to extensive risings amongst the tribes surrounding the valley of Peshawur, including, as a matter of course, the Yoozoozales, the Kutuks, and all the tribes who have quietly and cheerfully acquiesced in our rule, have been afloat and caused some uneasiness. But they owe their origin to a well-grounded report, prevalent in the camp of Sir Colin Campbell, that the religious chief of the Swatees had expressed his determination of leaving his mountain fastnesses and measuring swords with the British on their own plains. How far he may be inclined to carry out his threats is another affair, but the general thought he might as well be prepared for any emergency, and directed Col. Markham to hasten onwards. H.M.'s 22nd foot had made over a considerable portion of the treasure they carried from Lahore to H.M.'s 32nd, and that corps were not to have left Rawul Pindie until the 30th of December, but the commanding officer no sooner received General Campbell's missive, than he made immediate arrangements for his departure, and left Rawul Pindie at ten a.m. on the 29th of that month."

About the middle of December the Momund chief, Sadut Khan, ventured on paying a visit to Jelal-oo-deen at Jellalabad, where he remained three days, and whilst there received a message from Dost Mahomed Khan, begging him to come to Cabul. He declined, assigning as his reason that the Ameer had refused him assistance and insulted him in the person of his son, whose servant's ears he had caused to be cut off. Suspecting he might be sent forcibly to Cabul, he fled from Jellalabad to Lalpoor, at which place a large body of Momunds had assembled. A few days after this, Meer Akhor arrived at Bussowli; on hearing which, Sadut Khan went in person to the ferry near Lalpoor, accompanied by a numerous body of followers, and forbade any one crossing the river with the Dost's envoy, who vainly remonstrated, and was at last obliged to trust himself alone in the hands of the Momund chief. He assured Sadut Khan that the Ameer was very well disposed towards him, and that, if he would proceed to Jellalabad, all differences between them would be easily arranged in a personal interview. The other replied that when the Feringees had marched into his territory, the Dost not only refused to assist him against the enemy, but had grossly insulted him. For these reasons he should decline rendering homage to the Cabul chief, and would effect a general rising of the hill tribes, with whose aid he would inflict signal vengeance on the invaders and despoilers of his lands, or fall a martyr. Meer Akhor was then permitted to recross the river, and to return to Cabul. In the mean time Sadut Khan remained at Lalpoor with all the Maliks of the Moorchuh Khel, waiting to see the result of the Ameer's deliberations.

On the 21st December a strong party of Momunds made a night attack on Durbungee, a considerable village on the Tatarah road, one coss from Upper Takal. They succeeded in setting fire to a few isolated houses, but their further progress was stoutly opposed by the inhabitants of the village and neighbouring town, who gallantly turned out under the command of their urbabs. After an hour's contest, the assailants were repulsed with some slight loss. These people are subject to our rule, and, though dwellers in the plains, are both respected and feared by their neighbours. As might be expected, they hate the Momunds with a deadly hatred.

Offensive operations have also been commenced by the people of Suwat. On Christmas-day some 800 sows and about 1,000 footmen made an irruption into our territory from the direction of Tahanah. The object of their attack was one of our Euzofye villages named Moolakund; but the inhabitants gave them a warm reception, and compelled them to fall back some distance. Lieut. Lumsden and the corps of guides immediately hastened to the point threatened by these new enemies, and taking up a favourable position at Tunjee, effectually succeeded in keeping the hill-men in check.

From Cabul we learn that Dost Mahomed was suffering severely from dropsy, and that his legs were so much swollen as to prevent him from walking; he was therefore carried about in a litter. Jubbar Khan and Gholam Hyder's wives had reached Jellalabad, where they expected to be soon joined by the latter prince and the Ameer. Shere Ali Khan had arrived in Cabul, and was to take charge of the city as soon as the Dost started for Jellalabad. Wullee Mohummed had also returned from Hazarah. Kohundil Khan had sent his brother-in-law to Cabul to persuade Rahamdil Khan to go back to Candahar, and it is stated that the latter had consented to do so, and was to be accompanied by Mirza Samee Khan.

From the Nizam's dominions we learn that General Fraser, after exhibiting some repugnance to accept a partial payment, at length accepted bills on the Presidencies to an amount something short of ten lakhs of rupees. This is virtually giving grace to the Nizam's government. The mercenary bands in the Government service were, as usual, mutinying for arrears of pay; and powerful landholders were waging war with each other, as if they were independent chiefs.

The Governor-General arrived at Shahjehanpore on the 20th December, and marched towards Furruckabad on the 22nd. The camp was expected at Cawnpore about the 10th or 12th of January. From Allahabad Lord Dalhousie would proceed by steam; but, in order to avoid the pomp and state attending a public reception in Calcutta, his Lordship, it is said, contemplated going at once to the Government House at Barrackpore, without visiting the Presidency. He was looked for about the 15th January.

The Commander-in-Chief was on his way to Peshawur, where he was expected to arrive about the 4th of January.

The intelligence from China furnishes no decisive information respecting the rebellion in the Kwang provinces. The Calcutta Englishman quotes a statement from a Canton letter, that the Kwangsi rebels were within one day's march of Canton, and were only prevented from sacking the town by their dread of the "outside barbarians." The Hong Kong paper, however, merely records the continuance of the rebellion, adding that the reports respecting it were contradictory. It was rumoured that Keshen, the well-known imperial commissioner at Canton, has been denounced for some high offence, and condemned to die by the bow-string. This may have some connection with intrigues at the capital.

Nearly the whole of the Chinese part of Victoria has been destroyed by fire.

The Singapore paper announces that Senhor Lopez de Lima, formerly Governor-General of Goa, had arrived at Dilli, in an armed brig, invested with full powers to reorganize the Portuguese possessions in the Eastern Archipelago, consisting of the islands of Timor and Solor. These islands have hitherto been regarded merely as penal settlements; but a commercial company has recently been formed in Portugal, who are determined to develop their dormant resources.

The same paper likewise announces that the Eastern Archipelago Company have succeeded in raising cotton at Labuan, of the Egyptian and Sea Island varieties. The colour is said to be good, the fibre silky, and the staple long enough for European manufacture.

BENGAL.

THE MOFUSSIL COURTS.

There has not been in any country a more effective agency than that which is employed by the British Government of India for the prompt decision of all civil disputes, and the immediate trial of all criminal offenders. The civil business of the country is entrusted to Munsiffs, Sudder Amins, principal Sudder Amins, and Zillah Judges, who receive and dispose of cases according to their several grades; whilst at the seat of each Government is fixed the Sudder Dewaní Adawlut, the highest court of civil and criminal jurisdiction, which, in addition to its judicial duties, exercises a visitatorial authority over all the subordinate Courts. In these Courts, except the last, arrears are unknown. The local jurisdictions of the Munsiffs have been carefully adjusted with reference to the expected income of cases, and to the convenience of having these rural Courts fixed in the vicinity of Mofussil treasuries (tahsils): These local jurisdictions are altered whenever any apparently permanent alteration occurs in the ordinary proportion of the income of suits at the several Munsiffs. A Court of this grade is abolished in one part of the country, and re-established in another, when the Sudder Dewaní Adawlut see fit to make the arrangement; and, as the total number of Munsiffs' Courts throughout the country is at present sufficient for transacting the sum total of the civil business, the strength of the judicial agency is easily and speedily adjusted to the demands of each part of the country.

The Sudder Amins' Courts have generally very light files, and they are most useful in relieving the Munsiffs' files, whenever, from temporary causes, an accumulation has there taken place.

The principal Sudder Amins' Courts can hardly be considered as quite distinct from the Courts of the Zillah Judges, though the functions of each are quite separate: but it is foreign to our purpose to enter into particulars on this dry part of our subject, more than is necessary to show the efficiency of the judicial agency employed. The Courts of the principal Sudder Amins are very seldom overwhelmed with business; and whenever they are, an additional principal Sudder Amin is appointed. The heaviest work of a Zillah Judge is the hearing of Munsiffs' appeals; and this class of cases he can make over to the principal Sudder Amins. Thus, if the Judge is pressed, he relieves his files by transferring suits, and if the principal Sudder Amin is pressed, an additional officer is appointed. Here, then, as in the case of Munsiffs' Courts, no arrears can accrue, and the principal Sudder Amins are moved to any part of the country where their services may be required, just as the Munsiffs are moved. A more efficient agency, so far as strength is concerned, can hardly be conceived; and no one will deny to this underrated judicial system the merit of affording speedy justice.

We do not enter upon the integrity of the native Judges. It is a subject full of interest; one upon which the most conflicting opinions are entertained, and one of greater importance, perhaps, than even those subjects which now occupy our attention. The integrity of the Munsiffs and Sudder Amins is not what is alluded to by those who complain of the "corruption" of the Anglo-Indian Courts; the corruption complained of is in the accepting and demanding of gratuities by the Amlah, in consideration of which they are supposed to exercise an influence over the Court, though no one seems to know how.

Taking a general view of the whole subject, the Anglo-Indian Courts appear to be as good as can reasonably be expected, and not wholly unfit for the trial of Europeans charged with criminal offences. They are located all over the country, so that the offender would be promptly tried where the offence was committed: the language of the prisoner (supposing him to be a European) is known to the Judge, as well as the language of the witnesses; the qualifications of the Judge, for the purposes of a criminal trial, are not inferior to the qualifications of those who, in the existing state of the law, sit in judgment upon European British subjects; their practical independence is equal; their experience is far greater, and of a kind infinitely more valuable; the corruption, so much talked of, is the fault of the people, not of the Courts, and it pervades all the tribunals of India alike: there is nothing to prevent any prisoner employing English counsel, if he can pay for it; whilst the greater power of appreciating evidence, and the assistance of natives, give to the Anglo-Indian Courts a positive superiority over all the other Courts of Hindustan.—Calcutta Review.

THE EXPEDITION TO RANGOON.

THE only authentic intelligence which has reached us is contained in a letter dated H.M.S. Fox, Rangoon, Jan. 2:—

"A demonstration was made on Christmas-day, in consequence of some report on shore that the commodore intended firing a salute. A few guns were brought down on a wharf opposite the frigate, whilst others were placed on the king's wharf, to fire into the Serpent and steamers. The town was cleared of every soul, with the exception of the picquets. At 9 A.M. a message was brought on board, to request the commodore not to fire; he returned for answer, that he had no intention of doing so, as it was not our custom. Yesterday the letters from Ava were brought on board, one in a velvet cover, for the Governor-General, and the other for the commodore, in a plain paper envelope. The latter was to the effect, that the governor of Rangoon was removed (this really took place two days ago), and would be examined at Ava, and that the governor of Prome was ordered down with full powers to arrange matters with the commodore. The officers, three in number, one of whom was from Ava, stated that he could not be expected for five days. This looks well, and I have no doubt they will accede to our terms; but not so easily as most of us expect. They will at any rate make an attempt to procrastinate, and if possible to get clear of any payment of money; but I am much mistaken in the commodore, if he does not bring matters to a close in a few hours after his interview with the new governor. So far as we have gone, he has acted well. No one could have done better, every attempt has been made on the part of the late governor to provoke hostilities, but without effect. At the same time the commodore has behaved with the greatest forbearance, coolness, and determination throughout a very much more difficult matter with these people than many would suppose. We have now only to wait with patience the arrival of the Prome governor.

"The scene on shore at the wharf opposite the frigate, when the letters were brought down, was well worth seeing; but requires a better pen than mine to describe with full effect. There were armed men, stationed on both sides of the road, as far as the eye could reach, in the most grotesque and mixed uniforms. A discharge of heavy guns was heard in the distance, which we knew to be at the governor's house, from the position of the smoke, and also that they were intended as a salute to the letter, most probably at the moment of its departure. In about twenty-five minutes after, three splendid elephants were observed coming towards the wharf, with two or three people on each howdah, and eight golden umbrellas. All the other wharfs along the river were crowded with spectators. The elephants were brought close to the wharf, when they knelt down, and the riders dismounted; after a short delay, three boats were seen approaching the frigate in line, and in them officers of different ranks, several of whom came on board, whilst their boats shoved off to make room for the fourth boat, bearing the letters which were placed in the bows, to prevent any one being in front of them, and shaded from the sun by three golden umbrellas."

This termination of the affair was not expected by those on the spot.—Englishman, Jan. 7.

THE LONDON MAIL of Nov. 24 arrived at Calcutta on January 2nd, per Hindustan. The subsequent mail of Dec. 24 left Aden on Jan. 14, per Oriental.

A CASE was tried before Sir L. Peel, as judge of the Small Cause Court, involving the whole question of the power of a secretary to a Joint Stock Company to bind his employers "in a certain transaction, over which he has hitherto always exercised a control, but which has been repudiated in the present instance." It appears, that the secretary of the Assam Tea Company instructed the company's broker to secure freight for 350 chests of tea on board the Nile. The broker, on inquiry, found that freight on board the Nile was, in his judgment, too high, and agreed with the captain of the Ellenborough to ship the tea at a lower rate. On informing the secretary of the difference in rate, he received permission to ship on the Ellenborough, and forwarded to him the shipping order, which was accepted. On the following day, however, the order was returned, with the observation, that the tea had been shipped on the Nile. The captain of the Ellenborough, accordingly, brought an action for his loss of freight. The defence was, that one of the directors had shipped the tea, and that the secretary had no power to ship without reference to the directors. The Judge held that, as the secretary had frequently completed similar transactions before, and they were perfectly consistent with the primâ facie power of his office, the company were bound by his acts.

THE FACILITIES OF TRAVELLING along the line of the grand trunk road are increasing every day. Twenty-six years ago, when the siege of Bhurtpoor was about to be undertaken, the fact of Lord Combermere reaching Agra in eight days from Calcutta, was considered next to a miracle, although he travelled with a double set of bearers. Any one, minded to bear the fatigue of rapid travelling, can now reach Meerut in five days from the metropolis, and Lahore in four days more; the bad state of the roads alone preventing his travelling over the second at the rate of the first section. The charge used to be five anas a mile for the slow palkee rate, with etceteras of all kinds. A seat in a carriage, at a greatly increased speed of travelling, may now be had for Rs. 265, and from Meerut to Lahore the charge is Rs. 85, according to a scale of the North-Western Transit Company, recently established by an enterprising post-master, Mr. W. C. Brown, of Delhi.—Lahore Chron.

THE SIKHIM MORUNG, the tract of country resumed from the Rajah of Sikhim for his misconduct in detaining Messrs. Campbell and Hooker, is thus described by Dr. Campbell, superintendent of Darjeeling, in his Report. It extends from the river Mechi on the west, to the Teesta on the east, with Purneah and Rungpore to the south, and the hills on the north. It contains about 4,000 square miles, and a population of about 36,600, the greater part being of a tribe called Koochees, who style themselves Hindoos. Dr. Campbell divides the tract into the Upper and Lower Morung, the former being forest land, at the base of the hills, the latter the cultivated plains below. Both are very fertile, but very unhealthy. The principal vegetable staple of the former is cotton, of the latter rice. In both, considerable care and skill are bestowed on the cultivation. Hemp, jute, betel-nut, oil-seeds, are also cultivated, and the castor-oil plant, for the support of a worm which produces the endi thread, from which a very strong textile fabric is made. The manufactures are common earthen pottery, gunny bags, mats, wooden ploughs, mortars for husking rice, wax bangles, small hooka snakes, leather of bad quality, endi cloth, and blue and white checked and striped cotton cloth, chiefly from English thread. At Phansedewa there are about 300 families of weavers engaged on the manufacture. The people are all pleased with the transfer of the country to British rule; the assessment is easy, but very unequal, a defect which must be remedied at the next settlement, when also an addition of 20 to 25 per cent. may without difficulty be made to the jumma. To increase the value of the district to its full extent, however, its climate must be improved by the clearing of forest lands, and an extended cultivation. For this purpose, Dr. Campbell suggests the outlay of three years' revenue, or Rs. 60,000, in advances to industrious settlers, at the rate of Rs. 30 to Rs. 50 each, for the purchase of plough, bullocks, seed-corn, and the maintenance of a family for the first year.

RANGOON should be made a British port. There are ample, and more than ample, grounds to justify its immediate occupation. The port and town, with its suburbs, and as much of the adjoining country as would be required for the formation of a defensible line landward, would be all in the shape of territorial acquisition which circumstances could force upon us. The port-dues, and a light house assessment, would maintain the only civil establishment necessary, moulded on that which has worked so well at Aden. The military and naval forces, needful to hold the place, could be supplied without increasing public charges. The Madras army, numerically so infinitely in excess of requirement, would furnish the one, and her Majesty's vessels in those seas the other. The expenses of occupation and defence of the position might, it is true, be inconsiderable; but what would their utmost cost be compared to the valueless victories of another Burmese war, or the disastrous necessity of adding on the eastern flank of our Indian possessions a companion territory to the Young Egypt in which we rejoice on the west? We write, as we have said, upon the piece-goods side of the question. We see articles of British manufacture entering duty free into a new British port. We see British subjects protected in a new field of commerce, and the beneficial effects of this extension of trade redounding to the advantage of our own adjacent provinces. We see, finally, the honour of our flag vindicated, and another permanent proof lasting given of the determination of our Government, which willingly and knowingly does no wrong, to set itself right where wrong, without redress, is offered to its subjects.—Indian Charter, Dec. 22.

OPPIUM SALES.—From a statement of the results of the past year's opium sales at Calcutta, it appears that the amounts realized during the past three years have been respectively 3,493,027*l.*, 3,313,934*l.*, and 3,197,120*l.*,—thus exhibiting a considerable yearly decline in this branch of the revenue. The number of chests sold has yearly fallen off: in 1849 there were 36,085; in 1850, 34,863; and in 1851, 34,014.

INSOLVENTS.—No less than thirty-one cases were heard in the Insolvent Court of Calcutta on the 5th inst. Mr. R. H. Buckland, formerly a partner in the firm of Tulloh and Co., applied for his discharge, for the third time since 1846. In that year he applied for a release jointly with the other partners of the House, and also for his private debts to the extent of Rs. 84,340. In 1849, he again applied for release from debts to the extent of Rs. 30,000, and now again for Rs. 71,411, to meet which the only assets are debts owing to him to the extent of Rs. 11,580. He was discharged. A section writer also obtained his discharge from debts to the amount of Rs. 1,473, being his second insolvency in three years. Mr. W. Bloyd Barlas applied for release from liabilities to the amount of Rs. 2,29,000, and stated that he had joined Lackersteen and Co. after their insolvency, and with them purchased goods to the extent of about two lakhs. Lackersteen and Co. drew against the consignments and sold the bills, and "it depended on the chance of the consignments selling at a profit, whether we should go on in our speculations or stop." The Commissioner said the system was a most unhealthy one, but he should not visit it on the individual. He was, therefore, discharged. We wish some member of Parliament would call for a return of all the liabilities of all those who have obtained the benefit of the Insolvent Court at the three Presidencies since it was established, and also of all the sums which have been paid from their estates. This statistical return would enable us to form some idea of the social and commercial morality of the community.—Friend of India, Dec. 11.

RULES OF PROCEDURE IN COMPANY'S COURTS.—The attention of the home authorities having been drawn to the results of appeals tried by the Sudder Adawlut of Calcutta, and they, having also been informed that a good deal of dissatisfaction exists on the subject, sent out orders for a return of the number of appeals rejected on technical grounds, and the number decided on their merits in the last four or five years, together with a comparative statement of like nature relative to a preceding period of equal duration. Since the receipt of this order, the Sudder judges have recommended to Government to revise the existing rules of procedure in all Company's Courts, which they represent as being too stringent and technical. They recommend that appellants and plaintiffs may be allowed to amend their plaint or appeal, so that it may not be rejected merely on technical grounds.—Englishman, Dec. 22.

FRIENDLY INCUMBRANCES.—The Supreme Court has decided a point of some importance, establishing the right of a judgment creditor to redeem a mortgage standing in the way of his execution. The general opinion in the profession appears hitherto to have been, that a judgment creditor in this country had no such right. The practice is, unfortunately, too prevalent here, for zemindars and other landholders, when in embarrassed circumstances, to raise small sums by way of mortgage on their landed possessions, and then with the aid of a friendly mortgagee, practically succeed in holding the rest of their creditors at arm's length indefinitely. "The equity of redemption" is not seizable, and as long as the friendly incumbrancer declined being paid off, the lands were considered safe from all molestation by other creditors. The present decision is, therefore, a great boon to creditors holding unsatisfied judgments, where the debtor has lands mortgaged, but to an amount much below their value.—Hurkaru, Dec. 10.

TRAVELLING.—The Lahore Chronicle informs us that a seat in a carriage from Meerut to Lahore can now be obtained, through the North Western Transit Company, for Rs. 85, and that the journey only occupies four days.

FIRST LOCOMOTIVE.—We have letters from Roorkee to the 29th ult., which contain an account of what ought to be of interest to Indian readers, viz., the start of the first locomotive on the 22nd, which took place at Roorkee bridge at two p.m., amidst the plaudits of all the spectators. Our correspondent speaks in rapturous terms of the college, and the stupendous works connected with the great Ganges Canal. On the whole we regard Roorkee as one of the most interesting stations in Upper India.—Englishman, Jan. 6.

DR. O'SHAUGHNESSY.—We are glad to learn that the Trade Association, which has repeatedly set a good example to that inert body the Chamber of Commerce, has actually commenced a subscription for the purpose of presenting Dr. O'Shaughnessy with some acknowledgment for his exertions in bringing the electric telegraph into use. These exertions have been far greater than is generally known, for many of the contrivances adopted are original, suited to the country and the people who must be intrusted with the work, and not only display the scientific skill of the superintendent, but must have cost him much time and labour.—Englishman, Jan. 6.

MR. PRINCE, the civil and session judge of Purneah, has been suspended by the Bengal government, pending instructions from home.

THE BANK OF BENGAL has declared a dividend for the last six months at the rate of 12 per cent.

FRACAS.—The Blenheim, arrived at Calcutta from England, has been made the scene of a fracas. Lieutenants Straubenze and Acton, of H.M.'s service, Mr. Goune, of the civil service, Mr. Doyné, a barrister, and a cadet of the name of Graham, combined in an attack on a fellow passenger, Lieut. Eckford, of the artillery. The affair has been submitted to a court of enquiry, which, it is said, has reported that the charge was not proved.

EXPECTED CHANGES IN THE CIVIL SERVICE.—From the Englishman we learn that the following changes are likely soon to take place in the Bengal civil service:—Mr. Dunbar, of the Sudder Court, will take his departure for the Cape on medical certificate, in January; he has leave for eighteen months. Mr. Mytton is to officiate for Mr. Dunbar. Mr. B. J. Colvin goes to Moorsheadabad, vice Mr. T. Taylor, about to resign the service. Either Mr. Trevor, or Mr. Samuells, it is supposed, will be the Sudder Registrar. Mr. H. T. Raikes moves to Dacca, vice Mr. Mytton. Mr. P. Taylor goes to Bancoorah as Judge, as his appointment of collector did not suit the Government. Mr. H. V. Bailey is to be salt agent at Hidglee, as a reward for services performed when superintendent of stationery. Mr. John Torrens is to succeed Mr. Raikes, as Judge of the Twenty-four Pergunnahs.

THE KALA-BAGH SALT-HILL contains salt in inexhaustible amount, and it is the finest in India. It occurs in solid masses of hundreds of tons, surrounded by red marl, the whole topped by stiff yellow loam. A salt stream runs waste from it, that would make the fortune of any man, if he could get it to Allahabad. Alum is also made in great quantity from black alum schist, at Kala-Bagh. The town is large and thriving, but unhealthy, goitre and disease of the lungs being common here.—Corr. Englishman.

MADAME PFEIFFER, the lady-traveller, who has traversed almost every country in the world, made her way unattended across India, and traversed Central Asia in safety, has arrived in Singapore. She purposes visiting Borneo, the Celebes and other portions of the Indian Archipelago, and intends to trust herself among the savage tribes of New Guinea.

JOTEE PERSAUD.—The Englishman states that the Government has restored to the Lalla Jotee Persaud his deposit of five lakhs of Company's paper, so long withheld from him.

CASHMERE.—The Lahore Chronicle states that, in consequence of recent events in Cashmere, it is the intention of Government to appoint a British resident at the court of Maharajah Goolab Singh; and that Major G. H. Macgregor, now deputy commissioner of Lahore, is likely to be the first incumbent.

A COURT-MARTIAL has been ordered to assemble at Agra to try Capt. G. P. Thomas, 64th N.I., upon a charge of having, contrary to his oath, revealed to one of the newspapers the verdict of a court-martial, of which he was a member.—Citizen.

CAPT. G. RAMSAY, officiating resident at Nagpore, is to take up the duties of a similar appointment at Nepal.

MACKEY & Co.—We are exceedingly sorry to notice, that the first mercantile house in Calcutta which has fallen before the pressure of the times, is that of D. C. Mackey and Co., who have stopped payment in consequence of severe losses incurred through the state of the money market. The total liabilities of the firm amount to about 20 lakhs, two-thirds of which are covered. The assets are estimated at nine lakhs. We are sure that this announcement will be received with feelings of deep regret. Not only is Mr. Mackey one of our first merchants in India, in point of spirit and energy, but he is a universal favourite wherever he is known, and the calamity which has now overtaken him will raise the sympathy of a large circle of very attached friends.—Friend of India, Jan. 1.

MR. CUPPIDGE.—A serious accident occurred at Calcutta, on the 5th of January, to Mr. Cuppidge, a young Bengal civilian. It appears that a friend of Mr. Cuppidge, being about to proceed to the upper provinces, was examining his pistols previous to his departure, and, there being no cap on, said jestingly, if I am attacked, I shall cover my man in this way, pointing his pistol at the same time, when unfortunately it exploded, and the ball lodged in Mr. Cuppidge's head. He was at first reported to be in a very precarious state, as, owing to the extensive hemorrhage, all attempts at extracting the ball have proved unsuccessful; but the Englishman, of January 7th, states that "Mr. Cuppidge is doing well, and that the doctors see no reason to doubt his perfect recovery. He has had a very narrow escape, for the ball entered his face close to the eye, passed through the nose, and lodged near the angle of the opposite jaw, and has not yet been extracted."

LIEUT. SHARPE, of the Bengal artillery, accidentally shot himself at Gurroundah, on the 3rd January, whilst on his way by dak to Delhi.

CADETS.—The Calcutta Morning Chronicle says, that, in consequence of the expected removal of the artillery head-quarters from Dum-Dum to Meerut, new arrangements will be made for the cadets of that service on their first arrival in this country. Hitherto, they have been allowed to remain for some months at the Presidency, nominally attached to Dum-Dum, but in reality hanging loose on society in Calcutta. As soon as the new arrangements are completed, they will, it is said, be forwarded directly to the head-quarters of their regiment in the north-west.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

WITHDRAWAL OF OFFICERS FROM REGIMENTS.

Camp Shajehanpore, Dec. 26, 1851.—The Most Noble the Governor-General is pleased to publish the following paragraphs of a despatch from the Hon. the Court of Directors to the Governor of Bengal, No. 122, dated 29th October last.

"14. Agreeably to the proposal of the Governor-General,* as noticed in your letter of the 22nd July, 1850, the rule which limits the simultaneous withdrawal from regiments of Native Infantry to six officers for staff and detached employments, was so far relaxed as to admit, under particular circumstances, of a seventh being withdrawn.† This latitude, however, was designed only for cases of emergency. The general rule fixing the limit at six, is that which we are desirous of maintaining, and which is applicable to the armies of the three presidencies.

"We cannot doubt, that by availing yourselves of the services of Madras officers, and reducing as far as possible detached employments which can be dispensed with, you will henceforth be enabled to avoid the necessity—which we greatly deprecate—of withdrawing a seventh officer from any regiment."

NATIVE TRADERS.

A list of the shippers of goods on board the bark Union, recently stranded on the South Beach, contains the names of eleven native and three European or East-Indian firms. The disproportion shows the rapid inroads which native traders are making upon the ancient monopoly of the great mercantile houses.

There is no subject more deeply interesting than this, of native competition. It extends to almost every department of industrial effort, from preaching to portrait-painting. There is a native editor who conducts an English newspaper with great ability, and in due season, when the domain of the lawyers has been invaded, we shall no doubt hear of native attorneys and barristers. The Hindus, if they do not reconquer the country, will win back all the advantages they care to possess, and the wealth which they make without risk they can enjoy without fear. The law of force is abrogated; the rule of cheating flourishes, and obtains universal toleration.

A host of native commission agents are rising up, and it is easy to foresee that, so far as the disposal of ordinary commodities is concerned, they will eventually obtain possession of the market. Nature has eminently fitted them for shop-keeping. Their obsequiousness has no bounds, and their impertunity takes a thousand forms of supplication. All their faculties are engaged in the business of buying and selling. They make a religion of it, and their piety brings much profit. One of the native shippers alluded to above was congratulated the other day on his good-fortune in the matter of the Union. He acknowledged the blessing, and quietly observed that Heaven was sorry for him; the Dely knew that he had lost a round sum by the fall in cotton, and wrecked this vessel to make him some compensation.

Whenever the native producer or seller is able to supply an existing demand, he must inevitably drive the European and East-Indian out of the field. The money which the latter expend upon what, to him, are superfluous comforts, forms a handsome return for the capital invested. The trader who lives sumptuously on Rs. 50 a month, and pays wages to his establishment on the same scale of personal wants, has only to take care that the articles in which he deals suit the public taste, and his success is certain. Precisely the same results which are seen to take place in the competition of the lowest class of labourers, will follow in the case of the highest. If the community can get more for their money by dealing with a native, we may rest assured that all other considerations will be made to give way. Nobody would think of engaging a European groom to do the work of an ordinary syce; and as soon as Indian workman can make elegant coaches, beautiful marble tables, and procure regular supplies of "Europe goods," our fashionable tradesmen and shopkeepers may feel that their vocations are in peril. The best that they can hope for, under such circumstances, will be to make a living. Large profits will be out of the question.

We are not prepared to say that the change which is stealing over the mercantile and trading classes is one to give much cause for rejoicing. With the lowering of prices to the level of native means of living, will also be joined the degradation of commercial morals to the standard of native habits. False weights and measures, and the practice of limitless falsehood, will be encountered by other methods than those suggested by the rules of probity and plain dealing.

It is a sad state of affairs, when a whole class, from highest to lowest, is found to give no scope for reliance on good faith and justice, and our merchants at home are beginning to experience the consequences of it. They are accustomed to see the small vices disappear, as men achieve eminence in trade. The grocer that sands the sugar and waters the tobacco is not the wholesale dealer who buys ten thousand hogheads of a summer's morning. The grasping, usurious Jew, whom we read of in novels and police reports, is not of the family of Rothschild. But the Asiatic trader never despises the means by which he rose to wealth. His rule is the same throughout all seasons. He will make money by "every artifice of acquisition," and thinks it a delusion to prefer any kind of reputation to that of possessing the largest amount of riches.—Athenæum, Nov. 29.

THE NAWAB OF THE CARNATIC, at the termination of a course of lectures on natural philosophy, delivered before him by Mr. Kenrick, presented that gentleman with Rs. 2,000, a diamond ring, and other valuables.

THE BANK OF MADRAS has declared a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum. The net profit for the half year amounted to Rs. 1,41,106. The reserved fund amounts to Rs. 44,272.

ELOPEMENT EXTRAORDINARY.—Extract of a letter from Ootacamund, 27th Dec.:—"The gossips of Ootacamund have been in luck's way, and their topic of late has been nothing less than an 'elopement'; one, however, without the slightest particle of Gretna Green romance to brighten it. Both of the silly people (lovers we wont call them) are married, and the woman—foolish creature—has been a wife seventeen years, and left behind a tail of eight children. On a certain night, towards the middle of last month, a coach, containing the romantic swain, dashed up to the door of the house in which resided the superannuated Venus, and in she bounced, not forgetting to carry along with her jewellery to the value of some hundred rupees. In a few minutes, the coach pulled up at the door of the gallant, and their romantic flight was at an end. The case was taken before the police magistrate, but how it terminated we are not informed. This affair is certainly sufficient to put elopements out of the fashion.—Bangalore Herald, Jan. 2.

MURDER OF LIEUT. JOHNSTONE.—Col. Osborn and Major M'Goun, with two other officers in the department of the Judge Advocate General, have proceeded to Jaulnah, to investigate circumstances connected with the murder of the late Lieut. Johnstone. It is said that additional information had already been obtained by them, such as it is hoped will lead to the detection of the assassin.

THE RAILWAY.—The prospects of the embryo Madras Railway are looking up—on paper. Major Pears is sanguine as to the easiness and paying capabilities of the line, and no doubt a beginning will be made before the expiration of the Charter. But every day confirms us more strongly in the belief, that the results of Indian railways will be widely different from those afforded by the experience of Europe. They must depend almost entirely upon goods traffic, for just as it is certain, that no working man in England could afford to travel by railway if the fares were sixpence a mile, we may rest assured that the thrifty and poverty-stricken Hindu will never pay two-thirds of an anna, the lowest cost of transit. That sum is more to him than sixpence is to the English labourer. His style of locomotion will not be a matter of choice but of necessity. A journey to Wallahjanugger would absorb more than six weeks' earnings, whilst a cooly will walk the distance with ease in a couple of days. But we may let the project go forward, with the comfortable certainty that plenty of time is left to take measures with regard to the actual progress of the work.—Athenæum, Jan. 3.

MOVEMENTS OF TROOPS.—It is reported by the Spectator that the following movements of troops will take place at an early date:—H. M.'s 25th regiment to Bellary; H. M.'s 94th to Bangalore; 1st Madras fusiliers to Cannanore.

EMIGRATION OF EAST-INDIANS.—A meeting was held on the 3rd of January, in the hall of the Polytechnic Institution, presided over by Sir W. W. Burton, to promote a scheme of emigration to our Australian colonies for the benefit of the East-Indians of Madras.

DRAINAGE.—The Athenæum says, that orders have been issued by the Court of Directors to complete the drainage of that capital, and a steam-engine is promised, whenever the works are sufficiently forward to authorize the expenditure.

LIEUT. J. G. B. GRIFFIN, of the 25th M.N.I. has been removed from his staff appointment in the Nizam's army for having failed to pass his examination in Hindustani. The removed officer is an accomplished Hindustani scholar, and the translator of several works into that language. It was fully expected that the Governor-General would at once reinstate him on learning the peculiar circumstances of the case, but, we regret to say, his decision is adverse. The facts will occasion no small surprise.—Athenæum, Jan. 13.

CARNATIC STIPENDIARIES.—A large and influential meeting of the Carnatic stipendiaries has taken place at Royapettah. "These parties," says a local paper, "have real and distinct grievances to complain of, and if they are only properly represented, the Imperial Parliament cannot turn a deaf ear to their remonstrances."

MOPLAH OUTBREAK.—Intelligence has been received from Cannanore, via Bangalore, of another Moplah outbreak. The scene of the disturbance is reported to be between twelve and fifteen miles from the former place. According to present information, the Moplahs broke into the dwelling of a wealthy native—whose offence was success in a law-suit against some of their party—killed him and all the members of his family, amounting in all to fifteen persons, and then set fire to the dwelling. Another account swells the amount of destruction committed. A detachment, consisting of one company of H.M.'s 94th regiment, and two companies of the 16th M.N.I. has been sent against the insurgents.

MASULIPATAM.—This district has of late been attracting a large share of public attention, and sad indeed is the tale of corruption, oppression, and wretchedness that has been unfolded by the commissioners appointed to investigate the affairs of the collectorate. In the words of an authenticated communication, "The district has been in a terrible state, and inquiry only discloses fresh enormities. Every department seems alike, but the public works, or Maramut department, seems the one most favoured by the delinquents. The Government, the people, the labourers, all, all were plundered!" One fact only we will here mention: such was the administration of Masulipatam, that the people emigrated by thousands into the Nizam's dominions; unable to endure the tyranny of British rule, the wretched inhabitants fled for shelter to the territories of that prince, who will some day be deposed by us for ignorance of the science of government. Mr. Porter, who has had charge of the district for the past nine years, "remained in blissful ignorance of evil."—Athenaeum, Jan. 13.

COURTS-MARTIAL.

LIUT. F. H. G. MACLEOD, 40TH N.I.

Head-Quarters, Choultry Plain, Dec. 2, 1851.—At a general court-martial held at Secunderabad the 15th October, Lieut. Francis Hector George Macleod, of the 40th regt. N.I., was arraigned on the following charge preferred by Lieut. James Douglas Dale, of the same regiment, viz.:—

Charge.—I charge Lieut. Francis Hector George Macleod, of the 40th regt. N.I., with conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, and unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having, at Jaulnah, on or about the end of January or the beginning of February, 1851, maliciously aspersed my character by falsely stating to Lieut. T. E. L. Higginson, of the same regiment, that, at an altercation which took place between us at the Mess-house, and in which he alleged I had insulted him, he, Lieut. Macleod, had told me that he believed me to be a coward, and that I had before shown the white feather; such statement being false, and calculated to degrade me in the estimation of my brother-officers (to some of whom it was secretly communicated), for having submitted to be so stigmatized without taking any steps to exonerate myself; the false statement made by Lieut. Macleod to Lieut. Higginson not having been brought to my notice until 11th of May following.

Finding.—The Court is of opinion that the prisoner is guilty of the charge, with the exception of the word "maliciously."

Sentence.—To be dismissed the service.

Recommendation.—The Court, having performed their duty in awarding a punishment suitable to the crime of which the prisoner has been found guilty, would at the same time most earnestly recommend him to the clemency of His Excellency the Commander-in-chief, and on the following grounds:—

1. That the nature of the altercation, and the time and place at which it occurred, might have created an impression on the prisoner's mind, that terms of the import of those specified in the charge had been employed by him on the occasion in question.

2. That, had the officer to whom the prisoner applied for advice in the matter done his duty, either to his friend, or to himself, or to his regiment, any false impression of the kind would at once have been cleared up, the matter satisfactorily adjusted, and all the evil consequences which have ensued from the prisoner's adopting the pernicious advice he received would have been avoided.

3. That the line of conduct pursued by some of the prisoner's brother-officers in the matter occurred during his absence from the regiment, and, although indirectly the cause of this line of conduct, he would not appear to have participated therein.

Remarks by the Court.—1. the peculiar nature of the charge, involving as it did the character of the prosecutor no less than the conduct of the prisoner, rendered it indispensably necessary that all the circumstances bearing on the one or the other should be fully inquired into, and hence the length to which the proceedings have extended.

2. The Court desire to record their unqualified opinion, from all that has come before them, that there were no grounds whatever for the imputation said to have been cast on the prosecutor's character: placed in a position of no ordinary difficulty, his straightforward conduct from first to last, in denying the assertion, repelling the imputation, and courting open inquiry, deserves the Court's highest commendation.

3. The Court cannot close their proceedings without bringing prominently to notice the conduct of some of the officers of the 40th regt. N.I. in the matter to which the charge refers: this is so fully shown on the proceedings, that it is not necessary to particularize it, beyond the expression of the Court's opinion, that, if admitted into practice, such conduct would be as baneful to the peace and harmony of society, as it would be utterly destructive of all discipline: the Court refrain from adding more on the subject, lest it should aggravate, rather than lessen, the evil which they desire thus generally to bring to notice.

Approved and Confirmed.

(Signed) R. ARMITAGE, Lieut.-Gen., and Commander-in-Chief.

Madras, 1st Dec. 1851.

Remarks.—The difficulty that must be experienced by an officer in the situation of the prosecutor, in meeting a case of this description, owing to the privacy of the parties when the insult is stated to have been offered excluding all positive evidence in his favour; the damage done to the prosecutor's character, in having laboured under undeserved imputations disseminated in secret for several months; and the further injurious consequences that might have resulted to him, had he been unable successfully to prosecute the charge against his accuser, are considerations that might well excuse my declining to attend to the recommendation of the Court in the prisoner's favour, were I determined to mete out justice with severity. The case, however, has been investigated by a court-martial of high respectability, from the rank, experience, and intelligence of its members, who have bestowed upon it the greatest care and deliberation; and this Court has most earnestly interceded for the prisoner, upon grounds deserving considerable attention. It is my wish to temper justice with mercy; and I therefore pardon Lieut. Macleod, who, it is to be hoped, from the imminent danger in which he has been placed, will so regulate his future behaviour, by a proper control over his feelings, and the utmost circumspection in all his acts, as to merit the clemency which is now shown him.

The conduct of the prosecutor, Lieut. Dale, throughout this unfortunate affair, has my approbation. It has given me a very favourable opinion of him; and I must express my full concurrence in the remarks made thereon by the Court.

In conclusion, it becomes my painful duty to notice the reprehensible conduct of those officers of the 40th regiment, who, knowing that there were injurious reports reflecting upon the character of their brother-officer, Lieut. Dale, remained on their usual terms of intimacy and friendship with him for three months, more or less, without making either him, or their commanding officer, acquainted therewith; and who, with strange inconsistency and singular injustice, suddenly withdrew their countenance from Lieut. Dale at the moment when those reports were brought to his notice, when he emphatically denied the truth of the imputations against him, appealed to his commanding officer to institute a rigid inquiry, and rejected any course of proceeding calculated to compromise his character. It is expected that these officers, whose names I refrain from particularizing, will profit by the animadversions passed by the court upon their conduct, in the entire justness of which I concur, and I trust they will, with soldier-like frankness, acknowledge their error, and do all in their power to atone for it; so that I may be justified in consigning to oblivion that which is past, without resorting to any rigorous measures to enforce a proper state of order and discipline.

Lieut. Macleod is released from arrest, and will return to his duty.

(Signed) R. ARMSTRONG, Lieut.-General and Commander-in-Chief.

LIEUT. J. BUCHANAN, 4TH LIGHT CAV.

At a general court-martial held at Kamptee, the 3rd Oct. 1851, when attending officially at the quarters of his commanding officer, Major T. Anderson, and after having been informed by him that a majority of votes of the officers of the 4th regt. light cavalry, for a representative at the ensuing races proposed to be held at Kamptee, was in favour of Lieut. J. S. Douglas, of the same regiment, and that he, Major Anderson, should uphold Lieut. Douglas's nomination, disrespectfully and contumaciously observed, "you (meaning the said Major Anderson) have no right to interfere in the matter; I will attend the meetings as representative in spite of you," or words to the same effect; thereby evincing a disposition to dispute the orders and opinions of his commanding officer, and treat his authority with contempt.

Charge.—For conduct unbecoming the character of an officer, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in the following instances:

First Instance.—In having, at Kamptee, on the 30th July, 1851, when attending officially at the quarters of his commanding officer, Major T. Anderson, and after having been informed by him that a majority of votes of the officers of the 4th regt. light cavalry, for a representative at the ensuing races proposed to be held at Kamptee, was in favour of Lieut. J. S. Douglas, of the same regiment, and that he, Major Anderson, should uphold Lieut. Douglas's nomination, disrespectfully and contumaciously observed, "you (meaning the said Major Anderson) have no right to interfere in the matter; I will attend the meetings as representative in spite of you," or words to the same effect; thereby evincing a disposition to dispute the orders and opinions of his commanding officer, and treat his authority with contempt.

Second Instance.—In having, at Kamptee, on the 30th July, 1851, addressed to the adjutant of his regiment, for submission to the officer commanding the Nagpore subsidiary force, an official letter of the same date, under his signature, couched generally in terms highly objectionable, and subversive of the respect and deference due from a junior officer to his superior and commanding officer.

Revised Finding.—The Court is of opinion that the prisoner is Guilty of the first instance of the charge.

Guilty of the second instance of the charge, with the exception that the Court finds that the letter therein alluded to should have been averred to have been dated the 29th instead of the 30th of July, 1851.

Sentence.—To be suspended from rank and pay and allowances for a period of three calendar months.

Remarks by the Court.—The Court cannot close its proceedings without remarking upon the very unjustifiable manner in which the prisoner, in his defence, has chosen to comment on the evidence of the witness in support of the prosecution, and the imputations he attempted to cast upon the two first witnesses on the defence.

Confirmed.

(Signed) R. ARMSTRONG, Lieut.-Gen.

Madras, 1st Dec. 1851.

Remarks.—This trial is partly attributable to Lieut. Buchanan's own perverseness, in refusing explanation when the opportunity was afforded him, more particularly before the Court of Inquiry, held for the investigation of the matter of complaint, and to his resolute determination not to apologize to his commanding officer for his disrespectful language and demeanour. But there would have been less excuse for his pertinacious perverseness in error, had he been permitted to peruse the letter from his commanding officer, forwarding his appeal to higher authority, to which there could have been no reasonable objection, as it had been previously read to him, and appears to have conveyed to his mind the impression that his veracity had been impugned. Lieut. Buchanan, however, seems to have resolved that the judgment of a court-martial alone should convince him that personal disrespect to his commanding officer, and want of deference to his authority, could not be justified under any circumstances; and by this obstinacy he has brought upon himself public exposure of his erroneous ideas of military subordination and punishment.

The Court has expressed its disapprobation of the style of Lieut. Buchanan's defence, in which I fully concur; it being generally offensive in tone, while his reflections upon two of the witnesses, and others not before the Court, are irrelevant to the matter at issue, unjustifiable, and not only indefensible in every way, but very injurious to his own cause. The Court pointed out the parts of the defence it wished withdrawn. It is to be regretted, that, so soon as its objectionable character appeared, it did not close the doors to take the whole of it into consideration; and having noted such parts as were irrelevant to the charge, and casting imputations on others without in any way being beneficial to the defence, or admitting of justification or excuse, it should have caused them to be expunged with or without the prisoner's consent. A prisoner has a right to say what is necessary for his defence, but he has no right to say more, or apply epithets to actions. He may comment on the evidence, character, and motives of witnesses; but it should be with some measure of decorum, and not simply for the gratification of ill-feeling. The situation of a prisoner before a court-martial gives him no right to sport with the feelings of others, or to make use of language regarding a commanding officer which military subordination would not tolerate on any other occasion, and which his defence did not render necessary. The tone of the defence has so manifest a tendency to promote bad feeling in the regiment to which Lieut. Buchanan belongs, that I esteem it essential that he should not be permitted to return to it for the present; he will therefore, at the expiration of his sentence, be ordered to join and do duty with some other regiment until further orders.

(Signed) R. ARMSTRONG, Lieut.-General,
Commander-in-Chief.

The period of suspension awarded Lieut. James Buchanan is to commence from the date of the promulgation of this order at Kamptee.

ENSIGN H. E. RYVES, 19TH N.I.

At a general court-martial held at Secunderabad, 15th Oct. 1851, and continued by adjournment, Ensign Henry Edward Ryves, of the 19th regt. N.I., was arraigned on the following charge, viz.:

Charge.—For behaviour unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in having, at Secunderabad, on the 6th of July, 1850, knowing that neither from his pay or allowances, nor from any other source, he had the prospect of performing the terms thereof, granted a bond under the same date to C. Soobrow, sowcar at the said station, for the sum of Rs. 450, promising, among other things, faithfully to repay the same by regular monthly instalments of Rs. 30 a month, and, failing to pay any of such instalments, guaranteeing to pay the whole amount on demand, with interest at two per cent. per mensem, on demand, the conditions of which bond he dishonourably failed to perform; he not having paid the whole, or any part of the said sum of Rs. 450, up to the 12th August, 1851, when he was sued for the same before a military court of requests, although repeatedly demanded from him; and, notwithstanding, he had further bound himself in the said bond not to fail in the terms thereof upon his word of honour, in the following words, namely, "I bind myself not to discontinue the above promise on my word of honour."

Revised finding.—Not guilty.

Approved and confirmed,
(Signed) R. ARMSTRONG, Lieut. General,
and Commander-in-Chief.

Madras, 3rd December, 1851.

Ensign H. E. Ryves is to be released from arrest and to return to his duty.

BARODA AFFAIRS.

The dismissal of Col. Outram, Resident at Baroda, forms the most important topic of intelligence the past fortnight supplies. The gallant officer has long been known as one of the most distinguished members of the service to which he belongs—the Bayard of the Bombay army,—eminent alike for his heroic gallantry, his stern uprightness, and unblemished probity and truth. In 1848 he was compelled to proceed on sick leave to Egypt, and soon after his return to India and resumption of the Residency, a circular to the political officers, judges, collectors, and heads of departments at out-stations, was issued by Government, stating that rumours were believed to prevail that decisions of all sorts, or the confirmation or reversal of decisions given by local officers, might be obtained at the Presidency through corrupt means, or khuiput—the native name for influence obtained by means of money. Col. Outram, knowing the flagrancy and long existence of such reports as these at Baroda, at once entered on the inquiry with the straightforwardness of purpose, assiduity and zeal manifested by him in all his undertakings,—and transmitted a voluminous report, pointing out a vast variety of instances in which such allegations had been made, and the extremely striking grounds for believing in their truth. Inquiry into this has brought other things to light, and the whole case of the plunder of the banking firm of the deceased Harree Bhugtie came before them. In 1846 the head partner died, and left two widows:—the elder, a woman of weak intellect, had a son,—the younger, a female of spirit and intelligence, was enceinte; the estate, worth above a million sterling, was settled on the children, under guardianship of their mothers. A son in due time was born, and all precautions adopted, where a heritage of such importance was at stake, to see that no imposition had been committed. At eighteen months old the child was stolen, and his mother, who had begun to check the interference of the agent in her affairs, imprisoned by the agent himself. She was pronounced an adulteress and an impostor; her child was called spurious, and she reduced to the miserable position of a childless Hindoo widow. Her former servant was now in possession of her treasures, and corruption had full swing—her appeals for justice were rejected, and she kept under surveillance in her father's house. On inquiring into the matter, Colonel Outram in July, 1850, brought the whole outrageous robberies to light. Baba Nafday confessed the child-stealing, but argued that it was apurious; in this case the abduction would have been an act of insanity. The spuriousness of the child could only have been proved by its presence; its removal convicted the wretch at once out of his own mouth that he knew it to be genuine. In pleading on this point he admitted the dilemma in which he was placed, that for a twelvemonth he had conspired with the Settancee and her friends in palming off a supposititious child with a view to defraud the house, when his conscience smote him, and he stole it from her, confined her in her own cellars, plundered the treasury, made away with the books, and set up two of his sons as bankers in the districts. Disclosure upon disclosure followed, and the whole subordinates of the residency were found guilty of the most outrageous corruption, the reputation of more than one European being brought into jeopardy. A commission to inquire into these matters, intended to all appearance as an excuse for hushing them up, was appointed by Government; and finally, on Colonel Outram's pressing his discoveries on attention, he was removed from office, Government having determined to prevent the inquiry being further proceeded with.—Bombay Times, Jan. 17.

THE LONDON MAIL of Dec. 8th arrived at Bombay Jan. 8th, per Victoria. The subsequent mail of Dec. 24th left Aden on Jan. 14th, per Sesostris.

THE LAHORE JEWELS.—We understand that a gallant officer, commanding a distinguished corps in the Deccan, has sent in, on behalf of his regiment, a memorial for the Lahore prize-money and jewels.—B. Times, Dec. 31.

COMMODORE LUSHINGTON.—The officers of the Indian Navy having unanimously resolved on adopting some means of showing their respect and attachment to the retiring Commander-in-Chief, in consideration of his uniform urbanity, kindheartedness, candour, and uprightness, waited upon him to ascertain what sort of testimonial would be most acceptable.—a public entertainment, a ball and supper, or whatever else might be permitted. With his usual consideration, Commodore Lushington stated that he required no evidence of their feelings towards him, and that he would be happy to accept a dinner from the members of the service, as a parting hospitality, provided it was made on such a scale of moderation as the purses of sailors permitted—remark- ing that it was not the feast but the hosts he prized.—B. Times, Jan. 16.

THE NEW BOMBAY CUSTOMS ACT has been passed by the Legislative Council, as also an Act regarding the collection of land customs on certain frontier stations of the Bombay Presidency.

PROJECT FOR RAISING THE “PACHA.”—A meeting was held, on the 12th January, of the shareholders in the company projected by Mr. A. P. Porter, for raising the steamer Pacha. The chair was taken by Mr. W. Crawford, barrister-at-law, who explained the objects of the company, and pointed out the necessity for taking advantage of the present fair season to make an immediate search for the vessel. For this purpose it was proposed that a subscription should be at once raised of Rs. 10 on each share of Rs. 100, and to despatch Mr. Porter by the steamer proceeding on the 18th to Singapore, where he would obtain the necessary assistance for pursuing his search. Mr. Porter explained his views to the meeting, and replied most satisfactorily to all the questions put to him by the shareholders present. The parties who seemed to take most interest in the project were Captain Baynes, Dr. Miller, Mr. Zorn, Mr. H. Leggett, and the Chairman. After the subject-matter of discussion had been debated for nearly two hours, it was resolved to appoint a committee to carry out the views of the company, and that the shareholders be called on at once for Rs. 10 per share.

The BANK of BOMBAY has declared a dividend at the rate of 5½ per cent. per annum for the past six months.

REVENUE ABUSES.—We hear from Hyderabad that some curious disclosures have been brought to light in that collectorate, regarding revenue matters, owing entirely to the searching inquiries which have and are being instituted by the acting collector. The head moonshee is, we believe, in durance vile, and not at all before he deserved it.—Kurrachee Adv., Dec. 31.

BRIGADIER SARGENT.—The reason assigned on good authority for the summary removal of Brigadier Sargent from the command of the Nagpore force, is the fact of the brigadier's having constituted himself British resident at Nagpore on the death of Mr. Davidson, although Capt. Snow, acting assistant resident, was on the spot. Col. Hall, commanding 28th, has taken the command of the force.—B. Telegraph, Jan. 17.

MR. E. C. JONES, of the Bombay civil service, agent at Alibagh, was attacked by a Goassein, under the following circumstances: Mr. Jones was returning from his cutcherry at Alibagh to his family at Kleem about five miles distant, and was riding along the sea-shore, when he was suddenly accosted by a man, whom he had seen for the two previous evenings at nearly the same spot, and who had on the preceding evening given him a paper to read. This person asked Mr. Jones what he had done with the paper, and seized his horse's reins. Mr. Jones replied, that he had sent back the paper, and desired him to let go the bridle, on which the fellow drew the sword he was carrying under his left arm, and lifted his right to make a cut at Mr. Jones, who was totally unarmed. He jumped off his horse on the other side, and turning on his assailant, seized his uplifted arm and succeeded in throwing him over, and wrenching the sword from his grasp, threw it to a distance. They then rolled over each other on the soft sand; but Mr. Jones, who is a remarkably active man, succeeded in pinning him to the ground, and with the assistance of some people who came up at the moment from an adjoining field, secured the fellow and took him to Alibagh, where the case is now undergoing magisterial investigation by Mr. Pelly, the present agent; Mr. Jones having left that place for Poona, to which he has been lately appointed collector and magistrate.

COURT-MARTIAL.

LIEUT. J. W. S. BURNS, 10TH N.I.

Head-Quarters, Bombay, Jan. 7.—At an European general court-martial assembled at Bombay, Dec. 12, 1851, and of which Col. F. P. Lester, of the artillery, was President, Lieut. J. W. S. Burns, 10th N.I., was tried on the following charges, viz.—

1st Charge.—For disgraceful conduct, unbecoming the character of an officer and gentleman, in the following instances, viz.—

1st Instance.—In having, in the month of April, 1850, drawn and given to a horse-dealer at Mominabad, named Fyz Mahomed Khan, alias Fyzoo, in payment for a horse purchased of him, a cheque or order upon J. G. H. Brown, Esq., Agra Bank, Bombay, for Rs. 514, payable at fifteen days' sight to the said Fyz Mahomed Khan, or his order, he (Lieut. Burns) well knowing, at the time, that he had no funds in the Agra Bank at Bombay, or in the hands of the said J. G. H. Brown, Esq., and no authority to give that order upon him, which was accordingly dishonoured on presentation.

2nd Instance.—In having, between April 30, 1850, and June 1, 1851, deceitfully made and broken to Capt. A. O. Abbott, of the Madras army, numerous promises, and especially two, contained in notes to that officer's address, dated respectively Jan. 27 and May 28, 1851, to refund to him the sum of Rs. 514, which Captain Abbott had paid to Fyz Mahomed Khan, horse-dealer, for a horse purchased of him by Lieut. Burns, in April, 1850, in consequence of the said horse-dealer bringing to him (Capt. Abbott), after Lieut. Burns's departure from Mominabad, the dishonoured draft which Lieut. Burns had drawn upon Mr. Brown, of the Agra bank at Bombay, and which is referred to in the preceding instance.

3rd Instance.—In having, in the month of August, 1850, drawn and given to Lieut. J. A. Wood, 20th N.I., a cheque or order upon the officiating agent to the Agra bank at Bombay, for Rs. 514, payable at thirty days' sight to the said Lieut. Wood or his order, he (Lieut. Burns) well knowing at the time, that he had no funds in the hands of the officiating agent to the Agra bank, and no authority from the agent to give that order upon him, which was accordingly dishonoured on presentation.

4th Instance.—In having, in the month of August, 1850, received from Lieut. J. A. Wood, 20th N.I. upon the faith of the cheque or order referred to in the preceding instance, the sum of Rs. 514, the property of that officer, and appropriated the same to his own use, he, Lieut. Burns, well knowing at the time that he had no funds in the hands of the officiating agent to the Agra Bank at Bombay, and no authority from that agent to give that order upon him.

2nd Charge.—For scandalous and infamous conduct, unbecoming the character of an officer and gentleman, in having, at camp near Deesa, on or about June 19, 1851, placed in the hands of Xavier de Souza, messman of the 10th N.I. with the fraudulent design of getting negotiated for Rs. 350, or thereabouts, a bill of exchange, No. 65, the third of a set for 35½ sterling, dated the 15th March, 1849, upon the officiating agent, Agra and United Service Bank, 15, Old Jewry Chambers, London, payable to Capt. R. Gell, or his order, with an endorsement by Capt. Gell, making the same payable to Mrs. Anne Stokes, or order; and a second endorsement, making the same payable to Lieut. Burns, 10th N.I., and purporting to be the writing and to bear the signature of "Anne Stokes," but such second endorsement being throughout, in fact, the writing of Lieut. Burns, himself, he (Lieut. Burns) having at the time every reason to believe that the first or second of exchange of the same set of bills had been paid in London about two years before, and well knowing that the third, which he was attempting to get negotiated, was in consequence of the false endorsement it bore, an instrument of no real value whatsoever.

Finding.—With reference to the first instance of the first charge, not guilty. With reference to the second instance of the first charge, guilty. With reference to the third instance of the first charge, guilty. With reference to the fourth instance of the first charge, guilty. With reference to the second charge, guilty.—But the Court find that the number of the third bill of exchange is 56, and not 65, as alleged in the charge.

Sentence.—To be cashiered.

Approved and confirmed,

(Signed) J. GARY, Lt. Gen. Com.-in-Chief.

Head-Quarters, Bombay, July 7, 1852.

The name of Lieut. J. W. S. Burns, of the 10th N.I., is to be struck off the strength of the army from this date.

CEYLON.

THE great subject of discussion continues to be "the Buddhist question." The governor has managed seriously to damage his position by an ill-judged minute, which took official cognizance of anonymous letters in the Ceylon Times as the productions of the archdeacon; and which, on hearsay evidence, condemned some sentiments said to be uttered by the Rev. B. Boake, in the pulpit of Trinity Church. Mr. Boake is about to publish his sermon, and the archdeacon has appealed to public sympathy in his own proper name, as a victim of "persecution" on the part of the governor and the bishop. It is, to say the least, "a curious coincidence," that all this hot anti-Buddhist zeal on the part of the archdeacon should be coeval with his quarrel with his diocesan.

Two minutes have been published, on whose propriety the press has been unanimous. The first is very stringent on the subject of the vernacular languages, for want of proficiency in which one of the ablest officers in the civil service has been refused promotion by the secretary of state. This looks like being in earnest. The other minute denounces a case of bargain between two civil servants, one of whom offered another a sum of money to induce him to retire. The effect of this latter minute has been weakened by the appointment of the gentleman who offered the bribe to the situation which tempted him.

Colombo has shared with the whole country in very heavy rains for more than a week. This, occurring in the midst of drying and shipping operations, has led to considerable inconvenience, and we have heard of some sickness amongst coolies on estates. But the weather now seems as if it would clear up. As matters stand the exports greatly exceed those of the corresponding period last year.—Colombo Observer, Jan. 15.

The Ceylon Times believes that the pearl oysters are migrating, and advances the following facts in support of his position:—"We are informed by the master attendant of Tutucoreen, that with the aid of the experienced divers of the coast, he has discovered banks of young oysters, carefully marking the localities. Notwithstanding the rocks being then covered with myriads of the young oysters at the time of inspection, two years afterwards he sent divers again to examine their state, and the result was that not one oyster was to be found."

CHINA.

THE LONDON MAIL of October 24 arrived at Hong Kong Dec. 15 (per Ganges).

The rebellion continues; but the reports respecting it are still contradictory. The rich men of Canton have been called upon by Seu, the viceroy, to subscribe large sums towards the expenses of the war.

Nearly the whole of the Chinese part of Victoria, from 470 to 500 houses, was totally destroyed by fire on the night of the 28th December. It is understood to have arisen from the firing off of crackers. Had it not been for a slight breeze springing up from the east, and the blowing up by the engineers and artillery of several houses to stop the flames from extending, a great proportion of the European part of the town would also have been destroyed, more particularly as there are grounds for believing that much gunpowder is stowed away in warehouses, notwithstanding the law to the contrary. The most melancholy result of the fire is the loss of life. With many natives we have to include the deaths of Col. Tomkyns and Lieut. Sugg, of the Royal Artillery; two privates of the same corps lie seriously wounded, and Lieut. Wilson, of the Royal Engineers, in a precarious state. The party were employed in blowing up a house. The gunpowder from some cause exploded sooner than was expected, and while they were inside the building. Col. Tomkyns was taken up sensible, but expired four hours afterwards. Lieut. Sugg's body was entirely consumed by the fire; nothing but his sword was left. The Governor had ordered mat sheds to be erected, and food to be distributed among the needy.

AUSTRALIA.

The latest accounts of the Australian gold-mines confirm all the anticipations entertained of a permanent and increasing yield. At Bathurst, and on the Turon river, operations were being steadily carried forward, and new deposits were found with sufficient frequency to show that the ultimate results are likely to be precisely similar to what has been realized at California. The fresh spots chiefly mentioned are at Braidwood and Lake Bathurst, about 150 miles south of Sydney, and consequently in a direction different to the discoveries hitherto, which have been to the north-west. The total export from Sydney had already reached 340,000*l.*, during a period of five months, and as it was estimated that at least 100,000*l.* was still in the hands of miners, it would appear that the total production has been at the rate of upwards of 1,050,000*l.* per annum. Some considerable quantities of the gold from Port Phillip mines had found their way to Sydney, and had been readily bought, on account of their great purity; 1,000 ounces, purchased by one party at 3*l.* 4s. 6d. per ounce, were found 7½ per cent. better than standard. The increasing shipments to England caused the bills drawn against them to be offered daily at lower prices, and the rate of exchange had fallen to 6 per cent. discount. The scarcity of money, coupled with the wholly disproportionate arrivals of goods and produce, had created a ruinous state of affairs in the import market. Flour had fallen from 25*l.* to 9*l.* per ton, sugar from 23*l.* to 17*l.*, and everything else in proportion. Cargoes were arriving from all parts, as if the wants of the population, instead of being lessened by the pre-occupation of their minds, could have been supposed to have increased a hundred-fold. The Legislative Council had taken a most important step, with a view to promote emigration from England, they having unanimously made a recommendation to the Colonial Government, which had been acceded to, to remit 175,000*l.* for the purpose. There was an increasing scarcity of hands, which threatened to put a stop to many important works. Common labourers were receiving 20s. a week, and it was doubted if the railway company would be enabled to obtain a tender for their second contract. The general rush from Melbourne and Geelong to the mines at Ballarat appears to have resulted in great disappointment, but there was subsequently a reaction in their favour. The police in the district had proved inefficient, and there had been some serious disturbances, accompanied by one or two instances of murder. The Lieutenant-Governor, during his visit to Ballarat, had proposed to the miners that they should withdraw for two months, their claims being meanwhile guarded, in order that the crops of the colony should not be destroyed. "This," it is said, "was warmly responded to by a very large majority, so that our harvest may now be considered safe." It remained to be seen, however, whether the resolution would be maintained, and it was likely to be affected by some great discoveries since made at a place called Mount Alexander, which was alleged to eclipse Ballarat, and where it was said one man had obtained 11 pounds weight of gold in 48 hours!

The expense of maintaining Aden is £60,000 a year, and the East-India Company have spent in fortifications, buildings, and works, since it was acquired, in 1839, £175,000.

LITERATURE AND SCIENCE.

In the last volume of the Journal of the American Oriental Society appears an article, by the Rev. W. G. Schauffer, American missionary in Turkey, upon the Jewish sect of Shabbathai Zevi, scattered portions of which still exist in various countries. Those who live in Turkey are semi-Mohammedans, conducting themselves like Moslems, though they do not attend the mosques. Their moral character, Mr. Schauffer says, is unimpeachable: drunkenness, lying, profanity, are unknown amongst them. Upon the subject of oaths, they cherish the principle of the Quakers. Little is certainly known of their true tenets; but it is said that they are akin to the doctrines of Christianity. "Of the truth of this assertion," he states, "I was satisfied by a communication addressed to me not long ago by one of their chief men, in which the writer makes a simple and candid statement of some of the articles of their faith." Mr. Schauffer has given a translation of this document (written in Turkish), which is very obscure and mystical; but the manner in which the "Messiah" is spoken of,—who, Mr. Schauffer says, "was declared orally, by the author, to be Jesus of Nazareth,"—leaves no doubt that the sect has renounced Judaism. The following is one of the passages referred to:—

"Adam, by eating this (the forbidden fruit), did sin; but the one coming after him, the Messiah, sent of God, making up for that sin, saved the world from the power of the enemy, and from his captivity. And the Messiah, by his own power, has pardoned and remitted all manner of sins, and by the waters of his fountain has purified our souls; has made known and manifested to us, afterwards, the Creator of the earth and of the heavens, and thus has made our souls to be again gifted and happy. For this is clear, namely, the soul is spiritual, and therefore nothing can make it happy except the knowledge of the true God. If a man does not know God, no good action will ever come from him; and if a man shall say, 'I know God,' without believing in the Messiah, this is beyond question contrary to the truth."

A schism is said to be imminent among the Jews in London, who are divided between the traditions of the Rabbis and the philosophical notions of the rationalist Judaism of Germany, which may have some connection with this sect; but our chief object in referring to the paper was to extract a notice of the founder, Shabbathai Zevi, whose history, and the incidents attending the origin of whose sect, bear some resemblance to those of Joe Smith and the Mormons.

Shabbathai Zevi was the son of a petty merchant of Smyrna, where he was born in 1625. He early distinguished himself by an extraordinary familiarity with the Talmud and Cabbala. At 18, he became a Rabbi, and lectured publicly on those books, multitudes flocking to hear him. He practised ascetic severities, ablations, &c. In his 20th year he married a beautiful girl of Smyrna, whom he divorced immediately after the ceremony, repeating this singular proceeding several times. At the age of 24, he began to disclose to his confidential disciples that he was the Messiah, the son of David. The Session of Rabbis having excommunicated him, and offered a reward for his assassination, he fled to Salonica, where he was at first received with honour, but afterwards anathematized. Athens, Alexandria, Cairo, and finally Jerusalem, became successively places of refuge to him. At the latter place he remained several years, lecturing and fasting, which increased his reputation for sanctity.

At Gaza he made the acquaintance of a German Jew, named Nathan Benjamin, who, after a time, appeared in the character of a prophet, declaring "A man of Smyrna, called Shabbathai Zevi, is the true Messiah; he will redeem Israel from the yoke of bondage." This man wrote letters to the Rabbis of the land, saying that the Messiah would disappear for some time to meet Moses, who was risen from the dead; to marry Rebecca, the daughter of Moses, and in his company to bring the ten tribes across the river Sambation: the Messiah was to enter Jerusalem upon a lion—which came down from heaven, and after his entrance, God would let down from heaven a temple made of gold and precious stones; the Messiah would offer sacrifices, the resurrection of the dead would take place, &c. This announcement produced a terrible excitement amongst the Jews.

Meanwhile, Shabbathai Zevi continued to lecture at Jerusalem, whilst his brothers, residing at Smyrna, secretly urged his Messianic claims, not without success. On a sudden, in 1665, he proclaimed his own Messiahship. Rabbinic opposition arose, and he fled to Smyrna, where he was received like a god. Many Jews prostrated themselves as he passed, and kissed his feet. His public discourses were listened to with rapture, and hundreds accompanied him wherever he went. The prophet Nathan arrived, and preached the Messiah. The excited multitude, headed by him or by Shabbathai Zevi, made processions through the streets, singing hymns. The opposition of the Rabbis was vain, and many of them fled for their lives. Shabbathai Zevi became master of the Jewish community of Smyrna; his house, a palace, was crowded with applicants for audience, and many were obliged to wait weeks for their turn. In all the synagogues prayers were made for him.

The religious epidemic spread, and extended to Constantinople. Men, women, and even girls, prophesied; Rabbis had convulsions, danced, and extemporized Hebrew poetry, in the dialect of the Cabbala.

In 1666, Shabbathai Zevi proceeded to Constantinople, to present himself to the Sultan, who was then absent at Adrianople. Hearing of the arrival of the Jewish saint, and that he was surrounded with worshippers, the Sultan ordered him to be apprehended, and, after an interview with the Grand Vizier, Shabbathai Zevi was sent to Kutayah, as a prisoner of state. There he was visited by such crowds, that it is said a dearth ensued in the city. Every one prepared for the appearance of Elijah, the forerunner of the Messiah.

At this time, Rabbi Nehemiah, a great Cabbalist, arrived from Poland, and, having disputed with Shabbathai Zevi for three days, declared publicly that he was an impostor. This caused a great tumult amongst the Jews at Kutayah, who would have torn the Rabbi to pieces, had he not, to save his life, declared himself a Mohammedan. Nehemiah prevailed upon the Grand Vizier to send him to Adrianople, to warn the Sultan against the deceiver; in consequence of which, Shabbathai Zevi was summoned to appear before Mohammed IV.

A great multitude followed him to the imperial residence. He was conducted to the Sultan's presence by four officers. When before the prince, he fell upon his face, and bowed. The Sultan commanded him to rise and kneel, saying, "I have heard much concerning thee, that thou art a man of God, and that thou desirest to redeem Israel from captivity, and bring them to Jerusalem. Speak the truth. If thou art truly a messenger of the God of Abraham, as Moses and Aaron were true messengers, do a miracle before me, as they did before Pharaoh and his servants. Then I will give thee help and protection, and will acknowledge the Jews as my brethren." Shabbathai Zevi answered, "My lord, I am a Jewish Rabbi. I have feared the great God, the God of Abraham, from my youth until now. As to what men say concerning me, that I am the Messiah, when it shall come to pass at the time accepted by the great God, the question will be settled, whether it shall be accomplished by my hands, or by those of another. This is known to our God." When the Sultan heard this, he was wroth, and said, "If it be true that thou fearest God, I will prove thee as thy father Abraham was proved. I will order that thou be stripped, and will shoot three arrows into thee; if thou remain alive, I will receive thee as the Messiah." Shabbathai Zevi begged for mercy; whereupon the Sultan offered to pardon him on condition of his becoming a Moslem. He accordingly took a turban from the head of one of the attendants and placed it upon his own; afterwards he ate and drank with the Mohammedans, and went to the mosque, receiving the name of Mehmed Effendi.

Notwithstanding his apostacy, many of his followers still adhered to him, and even after his death (supposed to have been a violent one), in 1676, his sect continued to increase, and his claims to the Messiahship were propagated far and wide. His great enemy, Rabbi Nehemiah, became a convert to his opinions, proclaimed his tenets in many countries, was anathematized by the synagogues of Poland, suffered the severest privations for his new creed, and died at Amsterdam, a blind beggar. The doctrines of Shabbathai Zevi found adherents, not only in the East, but along the northern shores of Africa, and spread throughout Europe as far as the Jewish race was then tolerated.

Mr. Bradley, surgeon in the Nizam's army, in a very elaborate account of the Statistics of the Sircar of Pytun, in the territory of his highness, has furnished a minute description of the Rock Cut Caves of Aurungabad, which we abridge from the Madras Journal of Literature and Science.

In the hills north of Aurungabad are some ruined Buddhist and Jain cave temples, half-concealed amidst fallen rocks and earth: much of the sculpture remains in tolerable preservation. The temples have been wrought in the same table-land that contains the caves of Ellora. The hills are amygdaloid trap, rising at their highest points to about 700 feet. These southern slopes are precipitous and barren-looking, with a struggling vegetation of low prickly bushes and stunted shrubs. It is this aspect that has been selected for the caves, which form three separate groups, scattered over a space of about a mile and a half, and are eleven in number.

Except one small Jain cave, they all come under the denomination of Vihara, or monastery caves, accompanied by the usual wagon-vaulted cave containing the Deghopa. Their general characteristics denote a period when Buddhism was fast declining, and had stooped to a temporising policy. The figure of Buddha is seen associated with Buddhist saints, or in a position most opposed to that of mental abstraction, in dalliance with scantily-robed females. Figures essentially Brahminical are admitted, not unfrequently associated with Orphic symbols, and there is a florid style of carving. Only one cave indicates any great antiquity, where a gigantic Buddha is represented as reclining on his side, obtaining beatitude by nirvani, or absorption. There is a peculiarity in these caves, in isolating the sanctum from the walls by a passage passing round, containing chapels and lateral cells for the priesthood. Stucco paintings appear to have covered the walls, minute portions being seen adhering in several places. The ornamental carving upon the pillars, doorways, and lion-thrones, is the exact counterpart of that at Ellora and Ajuntah. The principal idol is of gigantic proportions, seated on a lion-throne, the feet resting on the lotus-flower, and the hands in a position denoting holy contemplation. A remarkable sameness runs through the forms of the figures; the features are Ethioptic.

Mr. Bradley examined four of the caves. The first is small, consisting of an ante-room, vestibule, and sanctuary, with a passage round it. In the ante-room, Buddhist figures are arranged right and left on the walls in compartments, the seated figures of Buddha having the legs either dependent or crossed, with the hands placed in an attitude of devotion. The vestibule fronting the sanctuary has the roof supported by two square pillars and two pilasters, well sculptured. The sanctuary is 14 feet square and 10 feet high, a passage 3 feet broad passing round. In front of the door is the figure of Buddha, seated, 9 feet high as sitting, the legs resting on the expanded calyx of the lotus, the hands disposed in the usual attitude of contemplation, the thumb of the right hand pressing the little finger of the left. A thin drapery seems to cover a portion of the figure, the ends being gathered into the left hand. The face is without beard or mustachios; the hair of the head is arranged in small conical curls, terminating in a round knot on the summit; the ears hang low, with stretched lobes, pierced in the same manner as those of the modern Jogees. The sinkasan, or lion-throne, on which the figure is seated, has manded lions right and left supporting the bench; behind are several animals; at the base is an elephant crouching, his trunk curled up beneath his head; immediately above him rests a four-legged animal, in a rearing attitude, carrying a human figure on his back; he has a scaly neck, a goat-like head, with four short horns, two curving backwards and two upright, his tail and claws like a lion's. This fabulous animal is constantly represented in old Hindoo temples. Winged praying figures kneel on either side of the head of the idol, behind which appears a nimbus. Over the image in each corner are seated figures of Buddha in high relief, and the walls have similar figures one above another, in four rows, some with the legs crossed, others depending. The doorway is simple. A plain pillar-moulding forms the door-frame outside, with a simple lintel surmounted by ornamental carved work of pagodas, each containing three niches, the centre one holding Buddha seated, and the two on either side standing figures of Bodhisattvas. On each side of the door stood gigantic darpals, or door keepers, 9 feet high, each accompanied by a figure canopied under five heads of the hooded snake. The walls of the vestibule and passage passing round the sanctuary are covered with compartments holding high reliefs of Buddha seated on a lotus, the stem of which is grasped by two figures wearing wigs and tiaras, canopied by snakes.

The second is a Vihara cave, squaring 50 feet either way, exclusive of side cells and sanctuary. It consists of an ante-verandah, a hall with cells at each corner, side recesses, vestibule, and sanctuary. The hall is 12 feet high, the roof supported by 12 pillars and 4 pilasters, the shafts rising in a rectangular manner for a fourth of their height, and then breaking into polygonal shapes, encircled with richly-decorated bands and fillets, surmounted by a capricious capital. The architrave resting on the pillars is enriched with sculpture, generally representing Buddha seated with females, surrounded by a profusion of well-sculptured foliage. Medallions, ornamented with lions, elephants, and nondescript animals, serve to support the whole entablature. As the pillars are arranged in pairs, and no two resemble each other, there is great variety of design. The frieze resting on the architrave fronting the entrance is covered with a series of sculptured figures in demi-relief, divided into thirteen compartments, evidently referring to Buddhist subjects, the sculpture cleverly executed. The subject of one of the groups is not easily reconciled with the mild tenets of Buddhism,—the empalement of a man. Two other compartments represent a battle, in which bows and arrows, swords and oblong shields, are used. The vestibule to the sanctuary is supported by two pillars and two pilasters, very rich in their decorations, and a richly-cut moulding skirts the sides and tops of the entrance, arranged in embattled lines. The pillars and pilasters are covered with sculpture, from the base to the summit of the capital, the shafts breaking from squares into eight, sixteen, and thirty-two sides, braced round with broad bands, on which are figures in demi-relief, or narrow fillets of bead-work, bells, drapery, leaves, &c. A richer effect is produced by the capital being divided into thirty-two sides, the ends of which turn over at the bell of the capital. The flying bracket is represented by a female standing on a cornucopia, holding a child by the hand. The sanctuary contains a seated colossal figure of Buddha, his position similar to that of the figure in the other cave. Gigantic chaoi-walas stand on either side, with flying figures above, and ranged along the sides are groups of kneeling figures. They nearly all wear tiaras and richly-ornamented dresses; the hair is elaborately arranged in flowing curls; the countenances denote a Mongol-Tartar origin.

The dimensions of the third, a Chaitya cave (which is much injured), are insignificant in comparison with those of a similar kind at Carli and Ellora, being but 26 feet wide and 30 feet high. The arrangement appears like that of the large caves.

The fourth cave is but 12 feet long by 9 broad, a passage 3 feet wide isolating the sanctuary from the walls. Within it, seated on a bench, is a gigantic idol, measuring as seated 8 feet. The features resemble those already described, but the attitude is different, the legs being crossed, and the right hand resting in the palm of the left upon the lap. The figure is black, and ornaments appear on the person. Mr. Bradley ascribes to this figure a Jain origin, from its position and colour, and from the distinguishing emblem cut upon the plinth, which is the discriminating sign of Nemi, the twenty-second Tirthankar.

A second series of excavations is situated about a mile to the east, in the same hill side, and consists of four caves. They resemble in character the others. In the second, Lutchmee is represented on the entablature, seated between two elephants. Her introduction into a Buddhist temple is not unusual at Ellora.

The last cave he visited was of large dimensions, consisting of outer verandah, hall, vestibule, sanctuary, and side crypts. The breadth of the hall is 46 feet, with lateral cells extending to 7 feet on either side. All is left in the rough, as if abruptly broken off, there being nothing approaching to a finished state but the front of the verandah.

TO THE EDITOR.

Sir,—M. Lassen, it is said, is engaged in preparing a grammar of the Zend. A Sanskrit scholar, he agrees, I presume, with Sir Wm. Jones, where the last expresses his surprise at the number of Zend words found in Sanskrit, and that some of its inflections are formed by the rules of the Vyacaran. By applying such materials to the work, there appears no doubt of its proceeding successfully.

This has led me to examine a tongue, which, from its assumed grammatical structure and regimen, exhibiting an intimate connection with another, would seem capable of being similarly employed; for in the two languages to which I refer, the nouns have no gender, the substantives have only one case, and adjectives are indeclinable. It will be anticipated that I speak of the Asmanî Zaban of the Desatir, and the Persian. My postulate is, a Zend grammar may be formed on the rules of the Vyacaran; a grammar of the Asmanî Zaban may, in like manner, be framed by application to it of the rules of Persian grammar; not that I suppose any one would inflict upon himself a task so preposterous.

I here introduce extracts from the Desatir, pp. 222, 228; and 224, and English translations, omitting, for sake of brevity, the Persian version, which Persian readers can readily supply:—

“Fa Sâm-i-Mazdâm, hi farjishwar Hartâband pal arjum Simkandash haikâr hawad o fir hurmîn Sarsad wakhshwar bayad u kirtâs-i-tamkâ lâspar nidâh furnûnad.—Hi Simkandash farpûd-i-Nashab Mazdâm arjumkâ fa fardîshwarî wa jâshwarî fartâkht zandim-i-fûzâr Abâd kâ yo fûzûrdarim-i-farjishwarân âd fa pûttâr shâlishwarî farochiz kum Amar haz harmûd-i-tam pam harsânâm-i-Hîrâs tazârâh rasûdâh yarûsh wun wa hîshâm kâ arsâd wardân wahar la haz arjum purnam.”

“In the name of Mezdâm! O Zirtusht! my prophet! After these shall Simkandesh (Alexander) appear, and afterwards the First Sâsân, the prophet, shall come and make thy book known by a translation.”

* * * * *

"O Simkandesh, son of Nishal (Darab)! Mezdam hath exalted thee to royalty and empire. Do thou, of thy exalted wisdom, bestow splendour on the religion of the Great Abad, who is the greatest of prophets. If thy army inflict any suffering on the good people of Hiras (Iran, or Persia), make atonement, and satisfy them; else shall I ask an account of thee."

These extracts are from the 13th book, "The Prophet Zirtusht," and the 14th, "Instructions for Iskander," of the Desatir. The first-named production evinces the presence of cultivated intellect, though fancifully exercised; and, as regards all that is said of Zoroaster, it is remote, "longo intervallo," from the rampant nonsense of the Vendidad.

Now what I propose to establish from a view and consideration of these facts is, that if a grammar of an acknowledged and notoriously fictitious language, the Asmani Zaban, can be formed by the application to it of the rules of a true tongue, the Persian, then the framing of a Zend grammar upon the Vyacaran affords no proof of the authenticity of the Zend.

In your last number, I read, "Professor Westergaard has laid before the Bombay Asiatic Society proofs that the Pehlivi is actually no language of antiquity, but merely modern Persian in a disguised form."

All the world knows what Sir William Jones, Richardson, and Vans Kennedy, more particularly the last, thought of Pehlivi, as a genuine language. The question has, also, been examined by a writer who, with becoming deference, subscribes to the opinions of these eminent Orientalists, and published his impressions on it, some years ago.—See art. xxiv. vol. iv. of the Journal Royal Asiatic Society, p. 345.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON,

TUESDAY, February 17, 1852.

BRITISH India enjoys internal quiet, but its Government is embroiled in border hostilities. Fatigued with the monotony of repose, say its critics, it quarrels with the miserable tribes on the further side of the Indus, and with the semi-barbarous Burmese, in the hope of gorging its appetite for territory with the barren hills of Afghanistan and the jungly delta of the Irrawaddy. It is assumed that our Indian authorities can, if they please, avoid these little wars. The questions are, therefore, first, the justifiableness, and, secondly, the policy, of this border warfare.

No one can imagine that our Indian Government has, or believes it has, anything to gain, in the sordid sense of the term, by subduing the Momunds and their congeners, or seizing upon the province of Dacca. When to the original cost of such acquisitions is added the expense of maintaining them,—leaving out of the calculation the hazards attending the advancement of our frontiers,—the mercantile profit of the transactions will resemble that of a trader who borrows at ten per cent. a capital which returns only three per cent. But the augmentation of territorial possessions, apart from the prospect of any positive gain, it may be said, stimulates all mankind, from the Irish cottier to the great autocrat of Russia.

That the latter impulse did once actuate our Indian rulers, cannot be denied. There was a time, too, when territorial accretion was really a source, direct or indirect, of revenue, as well as of political strength. But this period of aggressive policy has long passed away. We believe that, were their choice perfectly free, additional territory would be rather declined than coveted by our Indian authorities. What, then, is the reason of the continual expansion of our Eastern empire? This inquiry will furnish us with an answer to the first question.

When a civilized power is surrounded with barbarous tribes, or with nations in a greatly inferior degree of civilization and knowledge, hostilities are almost the necessary result of their contiguity. The most inoffensive and abstemious conduct on the part of the former will not preclude causes of difference, and there is not only no international code to which the parties can appeal, but where one of them consists of wild, untutored men, their rules of action have nothing in common. This theory, which Hobbes would resolve into a condition of our nature, has been amply illustrated in Africa and America, as well as in Asia. The Caffre wars are readily explicable by this theory.

After our appetite for territory in India was or ought to have been satiated, we were forced into contention successively with our neighbours, Tippoo Sultan, the Mahrattas, the Nepalese, the Burmese, and the Sikhs, not through any encroachments on our part, but by acts on theirs repugnant to the ordinary maxims of justice, as well as the law of nations. No candid person, familiar with Indian politics, would pretend that in those cases hostilities were not justifiable on our side, or that they could have been averted by any other form of arbitrament. They were prompted by the jealousy or hatred of the native powers, whose object was, not to obtain redress for any alleged wrong, but to destroy us, or expel us from the country. The failure of their efforts justly entailed punishment, and the only effectual chastisement, which could operate as a warning and restraint, was the forfeiture of territory by them. In Europe, where wars are, ostensibly at least, waged for different reasons,—to resent a wrong or vindicate a right,—the humiliation and cost of a failure are often alone a sufficient penalty, whilst other powers have an interest in preventing as much as possible the weakening of one belligerent and the aggrandizement of the other. None of these circumstances exist in India, where forbearance on the side of the victor, instead of being respected as generosity, would be despised as weakness and fear: if the conquered party incurred no penalty, he would be thereby incited to renew, at the earliest opportunity, aggression by which he might gain something and could lose nothing.

These considerations must convince a dispassionate critic of our Indian policy, that, although our wars with the native powers may not always have been just, to eschew war altogether would be impracticable, and the more our empire widens, and brings us into juxtaposition with ruder nations, the less will collisions be avoidable, the very expansion of our power instilling jealousy and alarm.

In discussing the other question, namely, the policy of the present hostilities,—which is not consequent upon their necessity, that is, their justifiableness,—we must inquire into the circumstances of each of the cases, which will be found to differ.

The wisdom of retaining the conquests made by the Sikhs on the right bank of the Indus is an essential part of this question. Our humble opinion is, that it would have been far wiser policy to reject these out-lying possessions, which are no integral portion of the Punjab, and to be content with the ample territory bounded by the great river. If the Indus is not a secure frontier in that quarter, where shall we find one? If, however, it be politic to keep Peshawur and its dependencies, then all the evils of contact with wild neighbours, which we have before enumerated, are the necessary incidents; and it follows that collisions with the hill tribes, which will multiply as we advance, cannot be avoided, and that measures of coercion are just and prudent. We must conquer, or be conquered; we must either retire from the scene, or we must advance. To be stationary is impossible.

Our quarrel with the Burmese stands upon a different footing, and its justice and policy are more apparent. It is not exactly of a frontier character, though the rulers of that semi-barbarous nation are possessed with the true spirit of border jealousy and hatred of Europeans. Our countrymen have been oppressed and maltreated, whilst peacefully engaged in legal trade at the port of a nominally friendly power. A refusal of redress affords not merely a legitimate plea for hostilities, but the Indian Government is peremptorily bound to resort to them, if required for the protection of the Queen's subjects.

The advices brought by the present mail lead us to hope that his golden-footed majesty will comply with all our demands for redress, and that, therefore, there will be no war, and no "annexation."

SOME time ago, we expressed a curiosity to ascertain whence the Caffres obtained their copious and unfailing supply of arms and ammunition. It now appears, from a conversation between Lords Malmesbury and Grey, in the House of Lords, on the 6th February, that the supplies came from this country! Lord Malmesbury said, "he had seen in the despatches from the Cape of Good Hope, recently laid on the table, a statement which he considered would prove very revolting to the country, that a large quantity of gunpowder had been recently exported from this country to the Cape colony, and there sold to our enemies in Caffreland." Lord Grey admitted that "large quantities of gunpowder had been exported to the Cape," and that he had been informed, in November last, by the Customs authorities, that "several shipments of arms and ammunition to the Cape were going on." The law, he said, gave the Government here no power to prohibit such shipments, and if it did, the parties could easily evade it, by exporting the articles to France, and thence re-exporting them to Africa. He added, that measures had been taken in the colony to prevent the transmission of arms and ammunition coastwise; but not until too late,—only last November. "He was surprised that this trade should have been carried on so long without any attempt of the authorities to interfere with it,"—he might have added, without the colonists themselves being ashamed.—"The commodore on the station had informed him that, within the last few months, several hundred tons of gunpowder had been sent to places along the coast for the use of our enemies."

So that our officers and soldiers have been slaughtered in Caffraria by guns and powder manufactured in England, and sent to the Cape and thence to the coast for the express purpose of being sold to the Caffres! Why slumbers the virtuous indignation of Messrs. Hume, Cobden, and Bright, at this authentic revelation of a transaction of infinitely deeper dye than the killing of the Sarebas and Sakarran Dyaks, whether pirates or not? What must the Caffres themselves think of us? They cannot be ignorant that the implements wherewith they are enabled to kill Englishmen so effectually are supplied to them by Englishmen. Is it any longer wonderful that our missionaries should encounter so much difficulty in their efforts to convert the Caffres, when these savages find that Christians are capable of doing with a serene conscience acts which, we believe, a Caffre would revolt at?

It would appear that a strenuous attempt will be made, at the approaching renewal of the Charter Act, to obtain for India a Government more directly responsible to Parliament. In the debate upon Mr. Anstey's motion, last session, Mr. Bright dwelt upon what he considered to be the practical irresponsibility of its existing complex management. More recently, a Manchester paper has called upon the manufacturing and commercial community of the kingdom to co-operate with Lancashire in securing for India "a Government directly responsible to Parliament, and subject to the wholesome exercise of public opinion in this country." The last number of the Calcutta Review, we observe, echoes this complaint of the irresponsibility of "a discordant, non-organized aggregation of distinct and independent bodies,"—the India Board, the India House, and the India Stock proprietors,—which "baffles and eludes investigation, and renders responsibility less than nominal." Let us examine what is meant by this allegation of irresponsibility.

The supervision and control of Indian affairs at home are, it is well known, vested in a Board of Commissioners, consisting of ministers of the Crown, all of whom have seats in Parliament. The President of that Board, in whom its active functions are concentrated, has avowed that all important political measures relating to India emanate exclusively from him. The Court of Directors of the East-India Company send orders and instructions to the Indian Government, but they act under the immediate surveillance of the Board. They, indeed, appoint governors, subject to the approval of the Crown, and they may recall them without the Crown's sanction; in other respects, they have but little purely independent action. Whenever the attention of Parliament is directed to Indian topics,—whether it be the treatment of a native prince, the cultivation of cotton, or Indian railways,—the President of the Board of Control, or some member of it, stands forward, as the functionary who has official cognizance of the matter in question, to explain or justify the conduct of the Indian authorities, at home or abroad. It cannot, therefore, be said, that the Government of India is not "directly responsible to Parliament," in the ordinary sense of the expression.

It must, however, be confessed that, the agency of the Board being chiefly controlling and superintending, not, except in measures of political moment, initiative, there does appear to be a division of responsibility between it and the Court of Directors, the latter being charged with the immediate supervision of all the details of the administration. But we do not see that much practical inconvenience can arise from this cause, which could only be removed by transferring to the Board, or to some other branch of the executive, a larger share of the administrative functions, destroying, in fact, the present character of the Court, and making it a mere appendage of the paramount body. We suspect that this is the object secretly aimed at by some at least of those who complain of irresponsibility.

Passing over the objections to such a measure on the score of justice,—the Company, or proprietors of East-India Stock, having still an interest in the government of India, the revenue of which is chargeable with their dividends,—it would involve two most important changes, neither of which would, we think, be readily approved by the country or adopted by Parliament.

In the first place, an entire new department of Government must be created, with an establishment like that of a chief Secretary of State, only much larger. In the first instance, the Company's home officers might be transferred in gross to the service of the State; but, in the sequel, a considerable amount of patronage and influence would be acquired by the ministers of the Crown, and we much doubt whether the Government could keep up a supply of such well-trained officers as at present fill the several departments of the India House.

But, secondly, the scheme supposes a new distribution of the whole Indian patronage, which, if taken, as it must be, from a Court of Directors degraded into a mere ministerial body, must be transferred somewhere, and it is difficult to imagine where it can be lodged out of the reach, direct or indirect, of the executive. The work we have referred to, the Calcutta Review,—which expatiates upon the monopoly of the Indian patronage by "twenty-four self-elected gentlemen," and complains that, under the existing system, "the Government of India is in the hands of a few families, all more or less connected by intermarriages, and all having their roots in the Court of Directors,"—deprecates the entire removal of this patronage from their hands, and especially its transfer to parties that would disseminate it differently, "with whom the acquisition of Parliamentary influence and support being the rule, all else must be subordinated to that primordial exigency."

There is, however, one attribute of the Court of Directors which is by express provision of law withdrawn from the jurisdiction of the controlling Board, and in respect to which Parliament has no immediate or direct power of interference, namely, the absolute right of recalling Indian governors, even the governor-general, without the obligation of assigning any reason for their recall, and although it should be in direct opposition to the wish of the Crown and its ministers. Here is, undoubtedly, not only a failure of responsibility,—for the Court of Directors are answerable for such an act to nobody,—but an anomaly of a remarkable kind. If the assent of the Crown is essential to the appointment of a governor-general,—who represents the Sovereign in British India, a territory now indubitably belonging to the Crown of England,—its sanction would seem to be indispensable to the recall of that high officer. In the absence of the latter check, it is easy to conceive the possibility of evils that would be irremediable. By virtue of the irresponsible power of recall, the Court might at any time nullify the indirect appointment of Indian governors which the Crown possesses, by means of its veto. It may be that a governor-general might very justifiably disapprove of acts of internal regulation insisted upon by the Court, or be desirous of introducing measures repugnant to its wishes,—the power of peremptory recall would restrain him from fulfilling his own honest convictions, and perhaps those of the Crown's ministers, unless he submitted to a serious personal sacrifice, and thereby, perhaps, deeply prejudiced the public interests. The obvious remedy is either to require the concurrent voice of the Crown (which has an absolute power to vacate appointments) and the Court in the recall of Indian governors, or to make such governors irremovable quandiu se bene gesserint.

It is true,—and this argument was strongly pressed in the last Charter discussions,—it seems hard to impose upon the Court of Directors duties of an administrative character which can be carried into effect only by the instrumentality of the governor-general of India, who may superciliously disregard their instructions, or act in open defiance of them. This case, it may now be urged, is no imaginary one, for a governor-general has, in spite of its power of recall, snapped his fingers in the Court's face, though he paid the penalty for so doing. But it may be a question whether this invidious power of arbitrarily recalling a functionary of high rank, virtually appointed by the Crown, reposed in the hands of a body like the Court of Directors, is not less likely to check than to engender a refractory spirit in that functionary. By requiring the concurrence of both the Board and the Court, in his removal as well as in his appointment, there would be no ground for suspecting the action of private jealousy or resentment. Parliament would then have a party before it responsible for this strong measure, and if it were deemed necessary to throw a further protection round the governor-general of India, that would be afforded by requiring the consent of Parliament to an address to the Crown for his recall.

With this change, the responsibility of the Indian Government to Parliament would be as effectual as could be desired for all practical purposes, without weakening any further the present most efficient instrument for carrying on that Government, and without arming the ministers of the Crown with a vast additional amount of that influence which already, perhaps, exceeds its due constitutional limits.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—Availing myself of your consideration, in again permitting me a place in your columns, I will say a few words in reference to your article upon the subjects in discussion in my letter, which appeared in your issue of January 16th.

The circumstance, that Mr. Shakespear and Dr. Forbes have in their writings lost sight of the existence of the whole of the Madras territories, as a part of India, does not invalidate the fact, that, in that portion of India at least (however insignificant it may appear to them), Hindostani is not only not the most prevalent colloquial dialect, but is not the colloquial dialect at all, of a country with a population of 15,000,000. I could name regiments of the Madras army, the sepoys of which, upon enlistment, have to learn Hindostani, as that language has never penetrated to that part of the country from which such regiments are recruited. It is the wise policy of our Government to insist upon one uniform language for the army,—namely, the Hindostani,—and it is on this account that all officers in the army (Madras, of course, included) are required to become acquainted with this language; and it is not a little owing to this circumstance that the Hindostani language continues to be at all spoken in the Madras territories: for it is not an uncommon thing to meet with Mussulmans much less acquainted with their native tongue, Hindostani, than with the languages of the country. Of course, I do not refer to educated men of that class.

I will now, if you please, consider your suggestion regarding the more extensive employment of natives of India in the public service; and I think the best way of enlightening the public upon the question, as to whether an extension of the native staff of employes is needed, is to give a clear account of the manner in which a district is governed, enumerating and explaining all the different offices, and the functions of the officers who hold them. Of course, my remarks will only apply to the districts of the Madras territories; but I feel sure that, as such, they will still give a better general knowledge of the subject than is commonly possessed.

1st. The Madras presidency is divided into twenty-two districts, called zillahs, generally named after their chief towns, as the Salem zillah, Coimbatore zillah, Trichinopoly zillah, &c.

2nd. Each zillah, or district, is divided into talooks, varying in number and size: there are generally about fourteen talooks in a district.

3rd. The magistrate (who is also collector of the revenue of the district) has magisterial superintendence of the whole district.

4th. He has with him the following European assistance, which is never found too great: a subordinate, or joint magistrate, and two or three assistants, the highest in rank of whom is called head assistant magistrate, and the others, assistant magistrates; making, at most, five Europeans on the magisterial staff of a district.

5th. The magistrate usually resides at the chief town of the district, with one or two assistants; the joint magistrate at another large town, and the head assistant where the circumstances of the district render it most convenient that he should be placed.

6th. The joint magistrate's authority is very much the same as the magistrate's; all correspondence with Government or the district courts must, however, go through the magistrate, and his authority is, though the same in kind, less in extent of country, as the magistrate's authority and general supervision extend over the whole district, and are not superseded by the authority of the joint magistrate in that part of the district which the latter officer has under him.

7th. The assistants to the zillah magistrates have a certain extent of country assigned to each of them by the magistrate, within which, under the supervision of the magistrate, and subject to his orders, they exercise the powers prescribed by the Regulations and Acts of the Government.

8th. It is the duty of the magistrates to apprehend murderers, robbers, thieves, house-breakers, and disturbers of the peace, and persons charged before them with crimes and misdemeanors, and to proceed with them as prescribed by the Regulations and Acts; so also of the joint and assistant magistrates.

9th. Certain cases, as therein prescribed, they can dispose of finally; others are required to be committed for trial by the Courts of the districts.

10th. These Courts are, the Zillah Court and the subordinate Criminal Court; the judges of each, called the judge and the subordinate judge, exercising civil and criminal powers, under the limitations prescribed by the Regulations and Acts.

11th. Commitments to one or other of these Courts are regulated by the rules laid down in the Regulations and Acts already referred to.

12th. Thus the civilians in a district number about seven. From the magistrate's decision in police cases, an appeal lies to the Criminal Court. The magistrates and judges are responsible to a court of supervision at the presidency, called the Court of Sudder and Foujdaree Adawlut, of civil and criminal justice, to which appeals lie from the Zillah Courts. In their capacity of collectors of the revenue, the magistrates are responsible to a Board at the presidency, called the Board of Revenue, to whom from decisions of the magistrate in revenue cases an appeal lies.

Now for the native subordinates. Each talook is presided over by a native tahsildar, or head of police and revenue in that talook, under the orders of the magistrate, and exercising certain appealable and certain final powers, as prescribed by the Regulations viz. (see page 88 of Index of Campbell's Regulations). Tahsildars, or native collectors of districts, to be ex-officio heads of the police of their districts. Their subordinate revenue servants to perform police as well as revenue duties; to assist the village police; to dispose of their police force (called peons) as may be required; to arrest persons accused or suspected of heinous offences; written evidence to be taken in such cases in their presence; may receive confessions of prisoners; must reduce them to writing, and have them attested by not less than two persons; must forward their proceedings, with prisoner and witnesses, &c., within forty-eight hours, if possible, to the Criminal Court; in bailable cases, to proceed by summons, holding the accused to bail for appearance before the magistrate; may punish by six hours in the stocks, by imprisonment of not more than ten days, with labour, and by fine of not more than three rupees; cannot take cognizance of certain trivial offences, unless made within three months from the date of the offence; to forward reports to the magistrate immediately, except of certain unimportant circumstances, of which a monthly report is sent in. They have also to communicate information to each other, to pursue offenders by means of their police staff, to hold inquests to search for 'stolen' property, &c. &c. They are not required to record evidence in cases in which they are competent finally to decide. The officers subordinate to the tahsildar have power to investigate cases, but not to punish, and they forward their proceedings to him. They are liable to punishment for abuse of authority, by the magistrate and the criminal judge.

Thus, in a zillah, there are as many tahsildars as there are talooks; and subordinate to them in each talook there are other officers of police, to assist them when their other occupations—namely, their revenue duties—interfere with their performance of their police functions. Also, each village has two officers; one of whom undertakes the revenue, and the other the police affairs of the village. They are differently named in different parts of the country; in some parts the village police officer is called village moonsiff, in others patel. The most general name for the revenue officer is karnam: he has charge of the revenue accounts of the village. Besides these, there are other petty village officers connected with the police and revenue, as the village watchmen, &c. The tahsildars have at their disposal a large number of peons, whom they dispose about the talook as may be required for police purposes.

The judicial subordinates are the Hindoo and Mussulman law officers of the Courts, called sudder ameens, for the decision principally of civil cases, original and appealed. An appeal lies to them from other subordinate civil law officers, called district moonsiffs, of whom there are three or four in a district; and from the decision of the sudder ameens an appeal lies, under Regulation restriction, to the zillah judge. The sudder ameens are also criminal judges; but the district moonsiffs have not cognizance of criminal cases.

There remain two officers of importance yet to notice, viz. the collector's head sheristadar, and naib sheristadar. They are his chief advisers in all matters connected with the assessment of the district and changes advisable to be brought about. Their salaries are high, and the office is very much coveted on account of the position which the responsibility of it gives them. The office of head sheristadar and that of sudder ameen may be considered on a par in point of status.

Other officers that may be noticed are the several postmasters of the district, which vary in number according to the requirements of the district. The transmission of the mails is performed by runners, of whom there are two to every five miles,—one for the "out," and one for the "returning" post. The general superintendence of the postmasters usually falls to the lot of one of the assistant magistrates, who has that office, in addition to his other duties, delegated to him by the magistrate.

Besides the offices already enumerated, there are at the presidency various valuable offices held by natives in the Sudder Adawlut Court, or Supreme Company's Court; in the Board of Revenue, &c.

Now, after this exposition, it must be evident that, unless natives were substituted for some of the present European staff, there is no room for any further employment of natives. It is well known, and nobody will gainsay the assertion, as the truth of it has been often verified to our cost, that natives are not, as a body, honest enough to be employed in an independent office; such an office, I mean, as that of collector, or judge, in which, from being under no immediate surveillance, their avarice or ambition might tempt them to aggrandize themselves, and cheat the public. Besides, it is evident that, if a native were found to fill such an office with honesty and ability, he would place his coadjutors, the European officers, in ridiculous contrast with himself in point of language, for a foreign accent, however well cultivated such foreigner's acquaintance with the language may be (and this, as I have shown, can seldom in India be very remarkable), has always something ridiculous in it, which it requires the real substantial advantages of justice to compensate for, in the eyes of the natives. Persons may overrule this objection by saying, "Oh, so just because the civilians would look ridiculous, the poor natives are not to be placed in any offices to rank with said civilians!" No, certainly not; it would not be an act of policy for us to weaken, in even the slightest degree, the respect in which our Government, as an English Government, is at present held. When we are ready to give up India to the Indians, then let us introduce native magistrates to offices now held by Europeans, but not before. This may seem unfair; but we must remember that our holding India is in the same sense unfair also.

In my next letter I propose to consider what are the real evils of our Indian Government, and how they may be diminished.

I am, Sir, yours obediently,

Feb. 2.

A CIVILIAN.

RECALL OF SIR HARRY SMITH.

The despatch from Earl Grey to Governor Sir H. G. Smith, dated January 14th, recalling that officer, assigns the following grounds:—

"Sir,—I have received and laid before the Queen your despatches of the 5th and 19th of November, reporting the results of the operations of the war since the date of your despatches by the previous mail. I learn from these despatches that another month of this distressing warfare has passed away, and though the force at your disposal had been increased to a very considerable amount, no advantage of any real importance has been gained over the enemy, while the loss of her Majesty's troops has been exceedingly heavy, that very distinguished officer, Lieut.-col. Fordyce, being included among those who have fallen.

"I have said that no real advantage has been gained, because, while you state that positions of extraordinary strength have been stormed, and it is clear that the most determined courage has been shown by her Majesty's troops, these successes (if they can be called so) have been entirely barren of useful results; and it appears from the reports of Major-gen. Somerset, and particularly from his despatch dated the 9th November, that the ground thus hardly won could not be retained, and that the position which was carried at the price of such heavy loss to the 74th regiment, on the 6th of November, was only held until the major-general 'withdrew the troops in the afternoon,' when it would seem that there was no obstacle to its being reoccupied by the enemy, and that in fact it was so.

"For several months your despatches have been of a similar character. You have described to me operations which I have constantly been assured had been attended with success, and had inflicted heavy loss upon the enemy, while there could be no doubt that the troops had fought with their accustomed gallantry; but at the same time I am quite unable to discover that any ground had really been gained, while it was obvious that the enemy, far from being discouraged by their supposed defeats, were from month to month increasing in boldness and determination; and the list of casualties but too clearly proved that the loss they had inflicted was as least as certain, and bore no small proportion to that which they were believed to have sustained.

"It was impossible that I should continue to receive intelligence of this description by many successive mails without being led to entertain very serious doubts whether the war had been conducted with the energy and the judgment which were necessary to bring it to an early and successful issue; but, distressing as was the anxiety which these doubts occasioned, I have not hitherto allowed them to induce me to deprive you of that support which I know it is of the utmost importance to the public service that those in high military commands should be able to rely on not having lightly withdrawn from them by the advisers of the Crown, when, in situations of difficulty and danger, success does not at once attend their exertions.

"But the information I have now received has converted what was before only a very serious doubt into conviction; and it is my painful duty to inform you that, having consulted my colleagues on the subject, they have concurred with me in coming to the conclusion that, upon a careful review of the events of the war and those which preceded its breaking out, there is evidence, which it is impossible longer to resist, that you have failed in showing that foresight, energy, and judgment, which your difficult position required, and that therefore we should not be justified in shrinking from tendering to the Queen our humble advice that the government of the Cape of Good Hope and the conduct of the war should be placed in other hands. It has accordingly been my duty to submit to her Majesty my advice that Major-gen. Cathcart should be appointed to relieve you, of which her Majesty has been pleased to approve, and that officer will very shortly proceed to the Cape for that purpose."

The noble earl, after expressing his pain and reluctance at making such a communication to an officer who had so greatly distinguished himself on former occasions and deservedly attained a high military reputation, points out the errors he had committed, in the premature reduction of the British force in the colony; his omitting, through ignorance of the true character of the war, to apply for additional force from home; the neglect of precautions to obstruct the supply of ammunition to the enemy; the not dealing promptly and more severely with the first instances of treachery amongst the Hottentots, and the allowing the administration of the Orange River territory to remain too long in the hands of an officer in his (Sir Harry's) opinion unequal to the task, by which and other mistakes in the management of the Dutch inhabitants of the frontier districts, he had failed to conciliate that important class. The despatch concludes:—

"It has been with much reluctance that I have entered into this review of the errors which you seem to me to have committed, but I have thought it due to your position and to your high reputation to show that her Majesty's servants have not determined to advise the Queen to supersede you in the midst of the war without sufficient cause for doing so; and for this reason, painful as it has been to me to write to you in such a tone of censure, I have been compelled to point out the errors into which you have been betrayed. It is, however, some satisfaction to me to be able to add, that I have no doubt it has been your judgment only which has been in fault, and that, to the best of your ability, you have endeavoured to acquit yourself of duties of no ordinary difficulty; nor do I doubt that in more regular warfare against a civilized enemy, and if your military operations had been less complicated by political difficulties, you would have achieved the same success by which you had formerly been so much distinguished."

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

The Sessions of Parliament opened on the 3rd February.
HOUSE OF LORDS, FEB. 5.

The Caffre War.—The Duke of Wellington took occasion to express his sense of the services of General Sir Harry Smith. "Sir Harry Smith," his grace observed, "is an officer who, from the high reputation he has already obtained in the service, does not require any commendation from me; but, having filled a high command in several important military operations, and having been recalled by her Majesty's Government, it is but just to him to say that I, who am his commanding officer, though at a great distance, entirely approve of all his operations—of all the orders he has given to the troops, and of all the arrangements he made for their success. I approve entirely of the conduct of the troops in all their operations. I am fully sensible of the difficulties under which they laboured, and of the gallantry with which they overcame all those difficulties, and of the great success which attended their exertions. My firm belief is, that everything has been done by the commanding general, by the forces, and by his officers, in order to carry into execution the instructions of her Majesty's Government. I am proud to say that I have observed no serious error in the conduct of these late operations. Certainly, my gallant friend, Sir Harry Smith, has committed some errors, as others have done before him. These operations by the Caffres are carried on by the occupation of extensive regions, which, in some places, are called jungle, in others bush; but which, in reality, are thickest wood—the thickest that can be found anywhere. The Caffres having established themselves in these fastnesses with the plunder on which they exist, their assailants suffer great losses. The Caffres move away with great activity and celerity, sometimes saving, sometimes losing their plunder; but they always evacuate their fastnesses, which our troops do not, cannot, occupy. They would be useless to them. The enemy is attacked again, and the same operation is renewed time after time. Under the three last Governors, some of these fastnesses have been attacked no less than three or four times over. On every occasion this is accompanied with great loss to the assailants. There is, however, a remedy. When a fastness is stormed, it should be totally destroyed. The only mode of subduing an enemy of this description is by opening roads into his fastnesses for the movement of regular troops with the utmost rapidity. I have recommended to the noble earl opposite that that course should be adopted, and I believe he has ordered it to be adopted. The only fault I find with Sir Harry Smith is, that he has not adopted it. I gave instructions to him to adopt it in future. That course will occasion great labour, the employment of much time, and great expenditure. The Secretary-at-War has, I believe, also ordered that these regions should be laid open. The war at the Cape has come to this point, that, unless such a measure is adopted, there can be no peace—certainly no enjoyment of the social comforts of civilized life. The whole of the native population has revolted, and we cannot expect that their depredations will not be carried on. If the chiefs of the Caffres, some of them at the head of 10,000 or 20,000 men, establish themselves in fastnesses not accessible to the smallest body of her Majesty's troops, then this measure must be adopted, cost what time, labour, and expense it may; for that expense will give you peace, and enable you to enjoy the comforts of civilized life. That expense will not be one-tenth part of the expense of one campaign; and, if this work is not done effectually, there will be no peace—no cessation of the hostilities of armed bodies in that part of the world. I thought it but fair to state this my opinion of Sir Harry Smith, and also to declare in what point, in my opinion, all has not been done which ought to have been done to secure to the population the only justifiable object of all war—peace."

THE PRESIDENT OF THE BOARD OF CONTROL.—Whitchall, Feb. 5. Her Majesty has been pleased to appoint the Right Hon. Fox Maule to be Her Commissioner for the Affairs of India.

MR. GEORGE DALHOUSIE RAMSAY is appointed private secretary to the President of the Board of Control.

AMERICAN EXPEDITION AGAINST JAPAN.—A telegraphic communication from Washington to the New York Herald, dated Jan. 27, says:—"It is understood that the Mediterranean and East-India squadrons will be strengthened. Commodore Perry will probably be detached, with a strong fleet, including several steamers, to Japan, to punish certain outrages, if necessary, and to teach the Japanese to respect the American flag."

MR. LAYARD, who was a long time attached to the embassy at Constantinople, but who is better known by his discoveries at Nineveh, has been appointed Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.—Globe.

THE NINEVEH ANTIQUITIES.—The brigantine Apprentice has arrived from Bussorah with the remainder of Mr. Layard's collection of antiquities from Nineveh, among which there is one piece of sculpture far exceeding in size any brought home upon a former occasion; it weighs 15 tons.

EAST-INDIAN RAILWAY.—The report of the directors, to be submitted to the proprietors on the 19th inst., states that the works between Howrah and Pundooah have been progressing satisfactorily; and when the last advices left Calcutta it was anticipated that the earthworks on that portion of the line, 41 miles, would be completed by the end of the year 1851. Contracts for the line between Pundooah and the Ranungee Collieries, about 79 miles, have been let, with the sanction of the Government of India, and the works commenced. It has been decided that the line to the north-west provinces of India shall proceed via Rajmahal, and the Hon. East-India Company has been pleased to intrust to this company, under arrangements with the Government of India, the making of the surveys between Pundooah and that point. These surveys are now in course of prosecution. The Board of Directors continue to receive every accommodation from the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, in the transport of their servants to India, and are met with considerable liberality in the cost of their passages. The capital account shows there had been received in England to the 31st of December last 835,575*l.*, and 80,800*l.* in India to the 31st of October—total, 866,376*l.* The total payments in England amounted to 105,965*l.*, and 55,618*l.* in India, together 161,583*l.*, leaving a balance in hand of 704,792*l.* The total expenditure includes 26,969*l.* paid as interest to the proprietors.

THE BORNEO BISHOPRIC.—It is highly satisfactory to find that this object is meeting with most liberal support in the University. The subscriptions are likely to realize a considerable fund.—Oxford Herald.

THE Plantagenet has been engaged for the freight of stores to Calcutta.

BOOKS.

A Dictionary, English and Sanskrit. By MONIER WILLIAMS, M.A., Professor at the East-India College, Haileybury. London. Wm. H. Allen and Co.

SINCE the days of Sir William Jones, the attention of the learned in this country has been gradually directed to the language and literature of the ancient Hindus. Until then, the Sanskrit, though closely allied to the polished dialects of ancient Greece and Rome, had remained from a very remote age a sealed book to all but a very small number of the Brahmin caste. Jones, Colebrooke, Carey, and Wilkins, by their successive labours, disclosed the hidden stores of a language "more perfect than the Greek, more copious than the Latin, and more exquisitely refined than either." But though these great pioneers had thus cleared the path, like the ascent to the temple of Virtue it continued for some time rugged and uninviting: it is only within the last quarter of a century that the study of Sanskrit became comparatively easy to the students of Europe. In Germany and Denmark, the labours of Bopp, Lassen, and Westergaard, have made this study follow close upon that of the Greek and Latin. In England, Wilson, Johnson, and Williams, have kept pace with foreign scholars. Professor Wilson, by the publication of his excellent Dictionary, Sanskrit and English (of which we expect soon a third edition), placed the means of acquiring the language within the reach of all; and his Grammar, and numerous other works, have contributed to disseminate in Europe the knowledge of the ancient language and literature of India. Professor Johnson has, for nearly thirty years, done good service in the same cause; and lastly, Professor Williams, a Boden Sanskrit scholar, has proved himself worthy of his great masters by what he has even now accomplished, at so early a period of his life. His Sanskrit Grammar, published some years ago, somewhat upon the plan of the best Greek grammars, is admirably adapted for beginners, and those who have not access to a teacher. He has also published a correct text of a Sanskrit play, for the use of students at the East-India College. His present work will increase his reputation as a Sanskrit scholar.

In this volume, of 860 pages, we have an accurate and copious version into Sanskrit of all the English words contained in the latest and best edition of Dr. Johnson's Dictionary, "omitting only those expressions which seemed obsolete or obsolescent, or of which no classical equivalent could be found or suggested." Of course, idiomatic phrases and allusions abound in English which it is extremely difficult, if not impossible, to express in any other living tongue, far less in Sanskrit, a language so long dead; but a minute explanation of our idiomatic expressions is not required in such a work. We do not expect to see the Dunciad or the Pickwick Papers in a Sanskrit garb; but we venture to say that the Paradise Lost and the Essay on Man would lose none of their excellence if properly translated into the language and metre of the Bhāgavad Gītā.

The utility of such a work as Professor Williams's Dictionary is well described by the author in his preface. "It is not," he observes, "too much to allege, that the great development of the study of Sanskrit, during late years, has caused the absence of a Reverse Dictionary to be recognized as a want by many very different and very important members of the community, both at home and abroad; by students and civilians, by scholars and philologists, by chaplains and missionaries; by all those zealous men who have devoted themselves to the social, religious, and intellectual improvement of the natives of our Indian empire."

On the best means of diffusing knowledge among the natives of India, there have been, and may still be, three parties:—1st, those who advocate the use of the ancient and classical tongues, viz. Arabic for the Muslims and Sanskrit for the Hindus; 2nd, those who see in the English language the only infallible means of enlightening the whole empire; lastly, those who advocate the use of the vernacular languages, which we believe to be by far the most effective system. In India Proper, all the languages in use, with very trifling exceptions, are of Sanskrit derivation. They all contain, more or less pure, most of the Sanskrit roots; hence compound words from the latter tongue, expressing scientific terms, such as geography, polygon, quadrangle, will be as intelligible to the natives as the words earthquake and whirlwind are to us. This capacity of composition is the grand characteristic of the great Indo-European family of languages, from the Ganges to the Ultima Thule. It is most fully developed in the Sanskrit, the Greek, and the German; but it is more or less conspicuous in all; and probably to this is owing the progressive advancement of the race in civilization, and all that tends to embellish life, when favourably situated.

With regard to the modern languages of India Proper, more particularly the Marāṭhī, the Bengālī, and the Hindi, Sanskrit terms may be introduced without limit; nay, new terms may be coined, whenever occasion occurs, which will be perfectly understood by the people at large. For instance, Mr. Williams might have furnished them a term for "railway," by translating the German eisenbahn into Lohapatha, or Kushipatha.

To those, then, who are employed in the cause of education in Northern India, this Dictionary will prove an invaluable help. In the south, too, it will be equally useful, only with this disadvantage, that the Sanskrit terms introduced into Telugu, Tamil, and Canarese, will always appear as "hard" words; still, even in these languages, the introduction of Sanskrit terms is, after all, the only plan left for their improvement.

Our readers may form some idea of the labour incurred by Mr. Williams, when we state that there existed no vestige of any previous work of the kind. We will conclude with a quotation in his own line:—"Siddhiḥ sādhye satām astu."

CURIOUS ANECDOTE OF AN ELEPHANT.—Mrs. Mault, widow of a London missionary, was requested by the minister of the Rajah of Travancore daily to see one of these animals fed, the attendant not being deemed trustworthy. One day she noticed that the keeper had abstracted a portion of the elephant's rice. The man stoutly denied the fact; when the elephant, as if understanding the discussion, and anxious to settle it, caught hold of the fellow's waist-cloth with his trunk, pulled it off, and revealed the stolen rice by pouring it on the ground!

MR. GORDON CUMMING'S ADVENTURES.

FIVE YEARS' LION HUNTING IN SOUTH AFRICA; with ADVENTURES amongst the WILD BEASTS and FORESTS of the FAR INTERIOR. By R. GORDON CUMMING, Esq., of Altyre. With numerous Illustrations of the Chase.

"After testing, where such test was applicable, every fact recorded by Mr. Cumming regarding the habits and actions of the living animals by what is known of their anatomical structure, we have found his statements, with one unimportant exception, to stand that test; and his very ignorance of the organization, which would suggest to the physiologist the habits and actions portrayed in the book, gives the best testimony to the accuracy of the hunter's sketches."—Quarterly Review.

"We feel bound to say that we give entire credit to the truthfulness of the book, which is assuredly one of extraordinary interest, after its kind."—Quarterly Review.

"The style is so natural and fresh from the scene, the scene itself in the far interior of Africa so new, and the hazards attending the chase of the formidable beasts of those wilds so great, that it is difficult to lay the volumes down until the issue of each adventure, as they rapidly follow one another, has been ascertained. In fact, the narrative has the charm of a vivid romance, and the professed novelist may study with envy the native spring of its sinewy style."—Quarterly Review.

PHYSICIAN.—George Burrows, M.D., F.R.S., 18, Cavendish Square.

ACTUARY.—David Jones, Esq.

The principle adopted by the Universal Life Assurance Society, of an annual valuation of assets and liabilities, and a division of three-fourths of the profits among the assured, is admitted to offer great advantages, especially to those parties who may wish to appropriate their proportion of profit to the reduction of future premiums.

The following Table will show the result of the last division of profits, as declared on the 14th of May, 1851, to all persons who had on that day paid six annual premiums, being a reduction of 45 per cent. on the current annual premium. This will be found a most liberal reduction, if the original premiums be compared with those of other offices adopting a similar plan of division of profits:—

Age when Policy was issued.	Date of Policy.	Sum assured.	Original Premium.	Reduced Ann. Premium for current Year.
30	On or before	£1,000	£19 6 8	£10 12 8
30	14th of May,	1,000	24 8 4	13 8 7
40	1846.	1,000	31 10 0	17 6 6
60		1,000	66 11 8	36 12 5

*. The attention of Gentlemen connected with India is particularly requested to the Regulations of this Society; as, on comparison with other offices, its terms will be found peculiarly advantageous, especially as regards the liberal plan adopted on the return of Indian Assurers to reside permanently in this country; and the Indian Rates have been calculated from extensive data and Tables exclusively in the possession of this Society, by which the true risk of life during residence in India has been most accurately ascertained.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.—Under the provisions of an Act of Parliament, this Company now offers to future insurers FOUR-FIFTHS of the PROFITS, with QUINQUENNIAL DIVISION, or a LOW RATE of PREMIUM without participation of profits.

The divisions of profits will be declared in June, 1855, when all participating policies which shall have subsisted at least one year at Christmas, 1854, will be allowed to share in the profits.

At the several past divisions of profits made by this Company, the reversionary bonuses added to the policies from one-half the profits, amounted, on an average of the different ages, to about one per cent. per annum on the sum insured, and the total bonuses added at the four septennial divisions exceeded 770,000*l*.

FOREIGN RISKS.—The extra premiums required for the East and West Indies, the British Colonies, and the northern parts of the United States of America, have been materially reduced.

INVALID LIVES.—Persons who are not in such sound health as would enable them to insure their lives at the tabular premiums, may have their lives insured at extra premiums.

LOANS granted on Life Policies to the extent of their values, provided such policies shall have been effected a sufficient time to have attained in each case a value not under 50*l*.

ASSIGNMENTS OF POLICIES.—Written notices of, received and registered.

HINDUSTANI WORKS BY JOHN SHAKESPEAR, Esq.

I. NEW EDITION, with GREAT ADDITIONS.

This Day is published, the 4th Edition, in 1 vol. 4to. price £5. 5s. in boards, SHAKESPEAR'S HINDUSTANI and ENGLISH DICTIONARY, GREATLY ENLARGED: to which is added, a DICTIONARY, ENGLISH and HINDUSTANI, ENTIRELY NEW.

* To the First Part of this Dictionary, the author has, by laborious study of Hindustani works, both printed and manuscript, made the most extensive additions. In the Hindustani and English Part, the Hindustani words are printed in their proper characters, together with the pronunciation in Roman letters. The Derivatives, which are traced from the Sanskrit, Arabic, Hebrew, Persian, and Greek, are given respectively in the character peculiar to each of those languages.

The Second Part, English and Hindustani, is ENTIRELY NEW. It comprises the most common English words, and also numerous usual phrases, with the fittest corresponding translations into Hindustani.

Review in "Times," Jan. 3.—"Much attention has been paid to the collecting of scientific terms, especially botanical ones, as well as to the correct rendering them into the technology of Europe." * * * "The Hindustani and English Part of it now contains upwards of 53,000 words and phrases explained, being 7,000 more than in the last edition, and 11,000 more than in any other Dictionary of the like description now extant." * * * "In India, as well as in Europe, the character of this work has long been fully established, and the present edition will greatly enhance its reputation."

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AN EXTRAORDINARY

REMEDY FOR LIVER COMPLAINTS.—Extract of a letter from Mr. Robert James, of Tredegar, dated December 18th, 1851. To Professor Holloway. Sir,—With gratitude I write to inform you of the wonderful cure your Pills have effected on my daughter, who had been suffering from enlargement of the liver, palpitation of the heart, dropsy, and a troublesome cough. Her case was given up by the medical attendants as hopeless. At this alarming crisis I was induced to try your Pills, and, after taking them, it was astonishing to see how rapidly she regained her health. She is now perfectly recovered, and as well as a parent could desire.

Sold by all Druggists, and at Professor Holloway's establishment, 244, Strand, London; and by all European and Native vendors of medicine throughout the whole of the East Indies.

EASTERN CHRONOLOGY.

The Christian year 1852 corresponds with the Indian Bengalee year 1259, and Samvat year 1909.

Mahomedan year of the Hegira 1268, which began 27th October, 1851, and will end 14th October, 1852.

Parsee year of Yezdegerd 1221, which began 27th September, 1851, and will end 26th September, 1852.

Chinese year 4488 (or 49th of the 75th cycle), which began 20th February 1852.

Siamese and Burmese civil year 1214, which began 2nd April, 1851, and their religious year 2394, which began 31st May, 1851.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE expectation, very reasonably founded upon the pacific professions of the court of Ava, that hostilities would be avoided at Rangoon, has not been realized. Perfidy is the cardinal rule of policy not only in the Burmese but in all Hindu courts, which, in this respect, violate the direct injunction of the great Indian lawgiver. Manu, in his instructions for the guidance of a king in the conduct of war, says:—"Let him act on all occasions without guile, never with insincerity." The usurper, who retains the throne of Burmah by the terror which his cruelty inspires, is very likely to push matters to extremity, although some Indian politicians still calculate that war may be averted.

The particulars of the affair of Rangoon are very fully detailed in another page. The Englishman states that the commodore was taking away the king's ship (the reason for which has not been made public, but it is supposed to be as a security for the property of British subjects unavoidably left at Rangoon), and that the fire of the Burmese was opened to oppose this act of hostility. "They have been taught," it is added, "a severe lesson, which may perhaps impress them with a correct notion of the power to which they are opposed, and induce an amicable adjustment of differences; but the immediate effect is undoubtedly that of provoking aggression, and the Commissioner at Moulmein, being apprehensive of an attack, sent up an earnest request for a reinforcement."

The intelligence from Rangoon brought by the Hermes reached Calcutta on Sunday, the 17th January; but, although this was the period which had been all along fixed for the Governor-General's return to Calcutta, his lordship was 800 miles off. This was a very great misfortune, as it may cause the protraction of hostilities and increase the expense of the war. Sir John Littler called an extraordinary meeting of council, when it was determined at once to send a reinforcement to Moulmein without waiting for instructions from the Governor-General's camp. Accordingly, an order for the artillery to prepare for foreign service reached Dum Dum, eight miles from Calcutta, on Sunday night, and by daybreak the next morning a company, fully equipped, under the orders of Major Reid, was encamped on the glacis of Fort William. Five companies of H.M.'s Royal Irish, cantoned in Fort William, completed to 400 rank and file, were at the same time ordered to hold themselves in readiness to embark, and by Monday evening, the 18th, the whole of the artillery and the five companies were on board the steamers, and by Tuesday morning on their way to Moulmein. The commodore followed in the Hermes on the 22nd. The Fire Queen awaited the arrival of the Governor-General, who was expected at Calcutta in two or three days, having left his camp by carriage dawn on hearing of the turn affairs had taken at Rangoon.

The Morning Chronicle informs us that the officer commanding the Sylhet light infantry had received instructions to look after the Eastern frontier, and to stand prepared to march to Munnipore. But nothing is said of the ill-defended province of Arracan, which lies most contiguous to Amerapore, the residence of the Burmese court, being in a direct line only 200 miles distant from it, and is likely therefore to be the first point of attack. A large Burmese force, crossing the Aeng pass, would spread dismay through the whole of the eastern province of Bengal.

In the long list of Burmese oppressions submitted by the British inhabitants of Rangoon to the commodore, are the following:—A fine of Rs. 150 inflicted on the nacodah of a British barque for saluting H.M.'s ship Fox as she passed in the harbour; an order proclaimed by beat of gong, that any native or foreigner who should go down to the wharfs to see the Fox should be summarily decapitated; the case of a Hindoo who was tortured to death for entertaining the Rev. Mr. Kincaid.

The Delhi Gazette says, "It is with great satisfaction that we announce the actual commencement of hostilities with Burmah, and we shall be much disappointed if the province of Pegu does not now fall into our hands." The Bombay Times, which likewise considers that the conduct of the Burmese government "justifies a war of annexation," assumes that the naval means at the disposal of the Supreme Government are not sufficient to prosecute hostilities, and that it would be necessary to wait for a reinforcement of steamers from England, so that the campaign must be deferred until October. We apprehend, however, that this is by no means requisite, and that an expedition of sufficient strength in the naval arm can easily be collected, at least for the capture of Rangoon, and even the province of Pegu. If annexation upon a grand scale, and an expedition into the interior, be meditated, a very large naval force will be required to command the various rivers and their tributaries. The Burmese troops, if stanch, may offer a stout resistance; but we are tempted to speculate upon the great probability of a revolution in the empire as soon as a strong British force effects a landing at Rangoon.

We have inserted in a succeeding column a short sketch of that city, and its means of defence.

The expedition assembled on the Indus, for coercing the Ameer of Khyrpore, Ali Moorad,—for there is now no doubt of its object,—was advancing towards its destination; but it was not deemed at all probable that it would experience any opposition. The ameer is believed to be anxious to arrange matters at once, for which purpose he had encamped on the banks of the Indus, within earshot of the Roree force. Mr. Frere, commissioner of Scinde, arrived at Sukkur on the 17th January. On the 19th he granted Ali Moorad an interview, and at once intimated to him that, if he did not accede to all the terms proposed by the Bombay Government, the chances were very much against his ever having another opportunity of doing so. Ali Moorad was very humble, saying, "I shall do as you bid me."

The war with the Momunds on the north-west frontier is not yet ended. The fort of Dubb, garrisoned by three companies of the 71st N.I. and fifty sowars of the 15th irregular cavalry, under Capt. Hicks of the 15th irregulars, is said to be in anything but a favourable condition for the purpose intended; and a cordon is formed round it by the Momunds, who keep a sharp look-out to fire at any head appearing above the walls. On the 3rd of January, a body of the Momunds pressing hard upon a picket of the 2nd irregular cavalry, on the Punj-pao range of hills, in front of Sir Colin Campbell's camp, Lieut. W. T. Hughes, second in command of that regiment, was sent with the relief picket to support them. On his gaining the ridge, a party of 150 of the enemy fell back on to the higher range, but as Lieut. Hughes advanced, he detected another batch of fifty to his left. With this party he immediately closed, and cutting off their retreat from their companions, sabred nineteen and brought one prisoner into camp, having had one horseman killed, and three wounded. It is said to have been a smart, dashing affair, the Momunds having stood like brave men. Another body made a dash at a number of camels returning to Peshawur from camp with stores, and carried them all off. On a subsequent day (the 14th), a melancholy catastrophe occurred near the fort of Michnee. Lieutenant Boulnois, of the engineers (the officer who had the constructing of the fort), rode out on a shooting excursion, it is said, with two other officers. When they had got a short distance, near the hills, some Momunds rose from ambush and fired into them. Lieutenant Boulnois received three bullets through the heart, and fell; the rest escaped. Another account, which relates the occurrence differently, will be found in another column. Previous to this outrage, it was currently reported at Peshawur that the field-force was to return at once to cantonments, as Colonel Mackeson, the new commissioner at Peshawur, had succeeded in making amicable arrangements with the Momunds. An affair which happened on the 6th may have had some share in causing it. Rahmut Khan, Orakzye, had collected some of the Michnee maliks near Dubb, for the purpose of persuading them to come in: after talking some time with him, they were returning to the hills, when they were charged by some of our irregulars, who cut up seven or eight of their number. This was very unfortunate, because the men came to treat with an agent sent by the British Government, and will not in future trust themselves in our hands. No blame attaches to the irregulars, who believed they were merely a set of marauders come down to plunder.

The Commander-in-Chief had reached Peshawur, where he made but a short stay, and was on his way back to the provinces. The reason assigned for his early return is the alarm and excitement caused by his proximity among the hill tribes in the neighbourhood, with whom negotiations were at that time pending.

From Cabul we learn that Rahamdil Khan has been persuaded to return to Candahar with his brother's envoy. The son of Sirdar Akram Khan, Shere Jung Khan, has been sent from Cabul to Khoilm with 400 horse.

From Herat the intelligence is of some importance, as it shows that the Persians are again meddling with the affairs of Afghanistan. Abba Khan, who had formerly been Shah Kamran's wuseer, had two sons. After their father's death, Yar Mohammed Khan constituted himself prime minister, and obliged them to fly to Meshed; when he died, his son corresponded with the Barukzyes, and on this account the Alikasyes, a large and powerful Dooranee tribe, dwelling in the city and territory of Herat, summoned Abba Khan's sons from Meshed. They came, and all the Alikasyes joined them, and Yar Mohammed's son is at present besieged in the Urg or citadel of Herat. He has asked the Doot for assistance, which has been promised.

The Punjab was tranquil.

The kingdom of Oude continues in a very disturbed state. The near approach of the Governor-General to the capital, and the ignorance which prevailed respecting his views, infused great alarm into the minister and his adherents. When it was known that his lordship had refused to visit the king, though earnestly invited, the alarm increased. The resident, Colonel Sleeman, had an interview with Lord Dalhousie, the result of which had so far only transpired as to show that the Resident's measures had been approved of, and that his policy (whatever it be) was directed to be carried out. A letter from Lucknow says:—

"A little after the Resident had left Lucknow to meet his lordship, the minister called in Aga Saheb, the chuckildar of Sultampur, to consult with him, with that known intriguer Vusse Ally, and with one who indeed has been a mover in more than one intrigue against the Resident, under whose displeasure he now is. They came to the conclusion to write to Moseffer Hossein Khan, a moonshee in the Company's service, and to give him means to bribe, to the amount of two or three lakhs, any European gentleman who would use his influence with Sir Henry Elliot to get the present representative of the Governor-General 'removed,' and another appointed, as they had everything to fear from the present Resident, and everything to hope from his successor. They then went to Moseffer's brother, Razza Hossein Khan's house, and held a secret council for three hours. A letter was consequently sent to the moonshee, who was at the time in the Governor-General's camp, to await his arrival at Puttyghur. I do not know how Col. Sleeman discovered this plot, but, with his usual penetration, he was not long without being acquainted with it."

The Hyderabad correspondent of the Englishman says, that the Nizam has contributed a large rough diamond, weighing seven tolahs, towards the payment of his debt to the Company. The jewel is said to weigh 400 carats, or one-fourth more than the Koh-i-Noor, and is the largest specimen, with one exception, in the world. It is uncut, and from its shape not adapted to being set as a brilliant. The writer, with amusing naïveté, hopes the Government will be induced to receive it at "its full value by jeweller's computation," that is to say, at its nominal value.

It appears that the houses of Mahanund Ram, Poorunmul, and Shudut Juseeram, had received a shock from their bills having been dishonoured. Several houses of less note are said to be similarly situated.

The weather has been remarkably cool and delightful throughout the upper provinces, and in the hills snow had fallen in abundance.

ACCOUNT OF RANGOON.

The maritime capital of the Burmese empire was built in 1753 by Alompra, the founder of the monarchy, who called it Rangoon, "the City of Victory," or "Victory Achieved," with reference to his conquest of Pegu. It stands on the left bank of that branch of the Irrawaddy which joins the Pegu river, about twenty miles from the sea.

When the British took the place in 1824, it was built in the form of a parallelogram, extending along the river's bank, the houses, with the exception of some public buildings, being of wood and bamboo, raised on piles, and thatched. The streets ran at right angles, and were paved with bricks placed on their edges. The city has since been entirely destroyed by fire, on the 28th December, 1830, when upwards of 2,000 houses, including the Custom-house and the residences of the principal merchants, were reduced to ashes. It has probably been rebuilt of the same materials, since the climate causes the rapid decay of brick and even stone edifices. The population was between 8,000 and 9,000.

The country around Rangoon is jungly; the jungles, however, are not continuous; they are mostly on the banks of the river and its branches, or on the elevated ground above the level of the plains, which are under water in the rainy season, at other times cultivated with rice. Hence fevers are very prevalent.

Rangoon, when attacked by the British forces under Sir A. Campbell, was surrounded by a stockade of strong teak timbers, 16 feet high, placed vertically, close together, other timbers being disposed lengthways, with inclined supports inside. There were no other works, except at the gates, which were defended by small towers of brick or wood, mounted with cannon.

On the 11th May, 1824, the expedition appeared before the city, which was expected to offer a strong resistance,—and an effective opposition might have been made;—but a few broadsides having been fired by the Liffey, and three detachments of troops having been landed,—one above the city, one below, and one in the centre,—in twenty minutes the British flag was flying in Rangoon, our troops not having fired a single musket: the governor and nearly the whole population had fled into the jungles, not more than 100 persons being found in the town. It remained in our possession until December, 1826, after the treaty of Yandaboo, which ceded a portion of the Burmese territory, stipulated the payment of a large sum of money by the Burmese, the reception of a British resident at Ava, and freedom of commerce at Rangoon.

The Burmese are an athletic and active race, and by no means deficient in spirit. They would make excellent soldiers if properly disciplined and properly led. They rely, however, in their military operations, chiefly upon their stockades, in constructing which they are very expert. They surround the enemy with circular lines of these formidable defences, which vary from a kind of breastwork to fortifications 15 and 16 feet high, which our shot frequently could not breach. Lieutenant Maw has given the following exact description of the mode of constructing a Burmese stockade:—

"When a bamboo stockade was to be erected, the space intended to be enclosed was marked out, and a small trench dug, in which bamboos, eight to ten inches in diameter, and nine or ten feet high, were placed vertically, and close together. The small trench was then filled up, and the bamboo work strengthened by lashing others that were split, and placed lengthways to those that were vertical. Outside of this row more bamboos, as stout as could be got, were placed upright in a similar manner, excepting that, instead of a continued close line, about three were placed together, a space, which would have admitted three more, left, and again three others placed, and so proceeding along, or round the works. The vacant spaces in the higher row, thus forming port-holes above the lower row, through which the garrison could fire, standing under cover of the higher bamboos. On the top of the higher bamboos, some that were slightly split were placed lengthways over the vertical ends, and the whole additionally secured by lashings and inclined supports from the inside. When the bamboo work was finished, or rather, perhaps, whilst it was going on, for the Burmans were not people who lost time on such occasions, a broad deep trench was dug a few feet inside of the wall, and the earth thrown up, so as to form an embankment against the wall, generally in the shape of two high steps or small terraces; the upper part of this embankment was usually five or six feet high, and it formed not only effective shelter against artillery, but was the platform on which the jingals and great guns were mounted, and on which the musqueteers or matchlock-men stood, to fire as the British troops advanced. Barracks, built of the smaller parts of bamboos, and thatched with their leaves, were built round the stockade inside the trench, so that the men lived at their posts. A pagoda was frequently enclosed, and the Burman engineers generally took care to have a jungle in the rear of their positions, so as to cover a retreat, which was easily effected by means of the embankment on the inside, although it was not so easy for the British forces to get in from the outside. Heavy pieces of timber—trunks of trees—were frequently suspended from the top of the works, in order to be cut away upon assailants in attempts to storm: rows of posts and rails, and abattis, were placed outside."

The province of Dalla, lying between Rangoon and Bassein, is an alluvial plain, through which the mouths of the Irrawaddy discharge themselves into the sea, and is intersected by numerous nullas, or creeks. This province is considered the most fruitful in the Burmese empire, and is the granary whence the capital and upper provinces draw their chief supplies of grain.

The throne of Burmah was usurped in 1847 by a Woonghye, named Mounghwa, who assassinated the reigning king, the son of Tharawaddy; the latter had deposed his elder brother in 1838, and was in turn deposed by his own son, on the plea of his being insane. The true heir to the throne, Tsa Kia Min, was put to death by Tharawaddy in 1837, in order to make way for his succession to the throne. He was a youth of remarkable talents, and the people, who loved him, believe that he is still alive. More than one rebellion has taken place in which a pretender to the throne has assumed his name. The reigning prince is described as an imbecile sensualist, controlled by low women in his zenana, and surrounded by men steeped in crime.

BENGAL.

WAR WITH BURMAH.

The second war with the Burmese has commenced. They have fired the first shot; they have thrown down the gauntlet, and we must take it up and pursue the conflict till it ends in their complete submission. The pacific disposition manifested by the court, on the receipt of the Governor-General's despatch, was intended only to deceive. There is now the clearest testimony that, from the first moment the cabinet of Ava were informed of our demands of redress, they determined on no account to comply with them, but to try conclusions with us in the field. When Lord Dalhousie's letter was read to the king, he dashed it down on the floor, and in a fury ordered the barbarian ships of war to be driven out of the river.

The king's reply to the Governor-General was delivered on the 1st of January. It professed an anxious desire to comply with the demands which had been made and to maintain the relations of peace. The governor of Prome was despatched to Rangoon, as it was given out, to compose all differences and strengthen the bonds of amity. On the 4th, the governor arrived in regal pomp, with an immense armament of barges and war boats, decorated with elaborate carving and gilding. He was accompanied by a retinue of more than 3,000 men. He had levied the severest exactions on all the towns as he passed, and had in his train ten boats laden with powder. The ex-governor of Rangoon paid his respects to the viceroy on his arrival, and was repeatedly closeted with him. It was at first supposed that he would be subjected to a trial, at least an investigation, in the presence of the viceroy, and a great number of the foreigners had drawn up statements of their grievances. But on the 5th it was ascertained that he was in high favour with his excellency, and on the 6th he departed in triumph to Ava, with a large retinue, and all the plunder he had accumulated, in fifty boats.

The viceroy had now been forty-eight hours in Rangoon without taking the slightest notice of the commodore, or so much as announcing his arrival. His acts, however, manifested from the very first a strong feeling of hostility. Mr. Birrell, a merchant, had erected a flagstaff on his own premises near the river side, which he was instantly ordered to dismantle. He said that it was planted in consequence of an understanding with the commodore, to establish a communication between the Europeans on shore and the ships of war, and that he could not take it down without the commodore's consent. Commodore Lambert, unwilling to give the Burmese any cause of offence, directed it to be removed. An order was at the same time issued by the viceroy, prohibiting all intercourse with the ships, in consequence of which all the coolies, carpenters, and workmen fled. The commodore now sent Mr. Edwards, of the subordinate staff, to inquire the cause of the viceroy's silence, and to ascertain when it would suit his convenience to receive a public communication. The viceroy's bearing was friendly, and, in allusion to the receipt of the letter, he said he should be ready to receive the commodore at any time he wished to come; but the answer was delivered in a tone of derision, which created merriment among the officers around him. The following morning Mr. Edwards was again sent to announce that a deputation would wait on him at noon, with the letter. The viceroy distinctly informed Mr. Edwards that he would receive no deputation at all. At noon, Capt. Fishbourn, of H.M.'s steamer Hermes, and some other officers, with Capt. Latter, proceeded to Government House. At some little distance from the gate which opens into the large compound, efforts were made by the Burmese officers to induce them to remain in the streets, but they pushed into the compound, where they dismounted, but were prevented from going upstairs till the viceroy's permission had been obtained. After waiting four or five minutes, Capt. Latter was informed that his excellency was asleep, and no one could venture to speak to him. Capt. Latter urged the necessity of their being permitted to go into the public hall to wait the viceroy's leisure, but this was refused, and every remonstrance proved unavailing. All this time the viceroy was wide awake, and a telegraphic communication was carried on between the stairs and the chamber he occupied. Finding it impossible to obtain an interview with the viceroy, the members of the deputation mounted their ponies and returned to the vessel.

Between three and four in the afternoon, a message was sent from the flag-ship, requesting British merchants, and all who claimed British protection, to proceed on board the vessels without delay, to receive a communication. There the commodore stated to them what he had done to maintain pacific relations, and how signally he had failed; that the British Government and flag had been grossly insulted by the Burmese authorities, and that the insult was manifestly intentional. He therefore gave them two hours to leave the town, and promised them all the protection and assistance in his power. Mr. Edwards had also been sent into the town to warn all foreigners to quit it. There were more than twenty-five vessels in the river, and a boat was sent to each to direct that all refugees should be received on board, and that the vessels should then weigh anchor and drop down below the town. The Prosperine steamer ran close into the main wharf, and eight or ten of the boats from the frigate and steamers came to the shore to protect and receive the fugitives. Meanwhile, the streets were filled with armed Burmese, and officers were moving to and fro on horseback, threatening all who gave assistance to the foreigners, in consequence of which not a coolie could be procured. All classes of foreigners—Moguls, Mussulmans, Armenians, Portuguese, and English—were seen crowding down to the river with boxes, bundles, and whatever they could carry, but they were obliged generally to abandon all the property they possessed. Mr. Kincaid, the American missionary, left his library, consisting of more than 1,000 volumes, the collection of twenty years, behind him to be destroyed, too happy to find his wife and children safe under the British flag. Many ventured on shore again before night to procure a few articles, but not a few were detained. It was ascertained that all the foreigners who could be found were sent to prison, and it is feared that more than 60 individuals are thus in the hands of a merciless foe. On the 8th all the vessels were safely anchored on the Pegu side, and the steamers towed many out to sea. The Prosperine conveyed more than 200 refugees to Moulmein. Burmese officers came repeatedly to the flag ship to offer excuses for the rudeness of the viceroy, but none of them were accredited. The commodore insisted that the viceroy should himself apologise for the insult offered to the British flag and, engaged in that case to return and forget the past. On the 9th the old governor of Dalla came on board, and entreated the commodore to give him time to see the viceroy, and persuade him to apologise. Out of regard to his venerable age and uniform courtesy, the commodore gave him till the evening to try his good offices. At 8 in the evening, however, two messengers arrived with a written document from the viceroy, stating that if the commodore attempted to pass the two stockades which had been erected down the river he would be fired upon. It was now apparent that the plan of sending unauthorised officers to propitiate the commodore was merely a ruse, to gain time. During the night of the 7th, and the following day, numerous war-boats, with from 50 to 80 armed men in each, were sent down to be ready to attack the ships, as well as some 25 guns. On the 9th, about noon, five large war boats, crowded with men, came down the Pegu river, and others proceeded from Rangoon, to rendezvous at the stockades, at which 5,000 troops were said to be congregated. On the 10th, the Hermes steamer towed the frigate down, and she anchored about 400 yards from the stockade. All the merchantmen also passed down. About 9 in the morning the steamer was seen rounding the point, with the Burmese prize vessel in tow. As she passed the Fox, first a single gun, and then another, and then others in rapid succession, were fired upon the two vessels, and volleys of musketry were opened on them. Instantly, the frigate opened a terrific fire on the stockade and the war-boats which had ventured out into the river. The Hermes then came up, and poured in her shot along the whole line of the defence. After a few minutes of perfect silence, the stockade again fired on the vessels, to which the Fox and the Phlegethon replied with such vigour as to create wide gaps in the works. The Hermes then passed down, and a fire from the masked battery was opened on her, but a few rounds soon silenced it. The battery on the opposite bank of the river now opened its fire, but the Hermes came up, and with her shot and shell spread ruin and dismay throughout the whole line. It was more than two hours before the firing ceased. When the vessels left the spot, not a living Burmese was to be seen. The number of killed on the part of the enemy was reported at 300, and possibly double that number wounded. It was a terrible lesson, but is not likely to be useful to those who are at the head of affairs. The sacrifice of life is to them nothing; they will remember only that the English vessels of war have left the river, and it will require little effort to persuade their low minds or the king that they have been chased away by the irresistible fire of the Burmese batteries. Their arrogance will thus be increased, and all hope of an accommodation diminished. The commodore has declared all the coast and the ports of Burmah in a state of blockade. After this engagement with the stockades he came round to Calcutta in the Hermes to report progress and receive further instructions.—Friend of India, Jan. 22.

The H. C.'s steamer Proserpine arrived at her moorings from Rangoon this day, bringing away with her nearly the whole of the British subjects from that port. It appears that the new governor refused to meet the commodore on several occasions, in order to settle affairs amicably, and finding every disposition in the Burmese to show fight, the commodore determined on blockading the port and holding it so until he receives further instructions from the Governor-General. Her Majesty's vessels and the Hon. Co.'s steamers have moved from their position off Rangoon to the mouth of the river, and the port of Rangoon, in fact the ports of the Burmese empire are under a regular blockade. The Proserpine was sent here for coals, to enable her to proceed to Calcutta with the commodore's despatches. 12,000 men are said to be ready at Rangoon to do battle with us.—Moulmein Times Extraordinary, Jan. 10.

The force of Moulmein embarked last evening at Calcutta, and is as follows. Five Companies, Nos. 2, 3, 7, Grenadiers, and Light, H. M.'s 18th Royal Irish, Lieut-Col. T. S. Reynolds commanding, with the following officers: Capts. Campbell, Bruce, Wood, Gillespie, and Cormick; Lieuts. Swinburn, Elliot, Ward, and Stephenson; Ensigns Canavan, Eteson, and Smith; Adjutant Doran; Quarter-master Carney, and Assistant-surgeons Dwyer and Chalmers. The five companies are completed to 400 rank and file. A company of artillery also goes down, consisting of eighty gunners, with the following officers attached; Major Reid commanding; Lieuts. Voyle, Dublin and Anderson. The 18th all go in the Tenasserim, and the artillery in the Proserpine, with an enormous quantity of ammunition, gun carriages, &c. Last evening the steamers dropped down clear of the shipping, and are now on their way to Moulmein. All the public military establishments here, such as the Commissariat, Arsenal, &c. were in full work yesterday, as not a moment was lost, and there was not even time to hold committees on the stores, so short and sharp were the embarkation conditions and orders. It is said that the rest of H. M.'s 18th Royal Irish will follow shortly to Moulmein, and that a wing of the 80th, from Dinapore, has been ordered down to replace them. The eastern frontier is also being looked to, and instructions have been sent up to the officer commanding the Sylhet light infantry to look to matters in that direction, and prepare himself for a march towards Manipore.—Hurkaru, Jan. 20.

THE REVEREND KRISHNA MOHUN BANERJEE has been appointed third professor at Bishop's College, Calcutta.

GANG-MURDER.—Some three or four years have elapsed since Capt. Larkins discovered, in the Lodeana and Umbala districts, the existence of a nest of Thugs, or, more properly speaking, of murderers, whose proceedings resembled those of the Thugs without their singular organization, whose depredations and murders were traced across the Sutlej into the Julundur Doab. That officer and his successor were properly appointed assistants to the General Superintendent of the measures for the suppression of Thuggee and Dakoitee, and both effected much good by bringing several criminals of that description to punishment on undeniable evidence. Suspicions have since arisen that the system existed in other districts west of the Sutlej, but nothing definite was known, though the suspicion began to obtain strong confirmation, until within the last few days, when a system, as atrocious as was carried on in the very worst days of Thuggee in Hindostan, was laid bare to the authorities in a series of confessions that will, it is to be hoped, lead to the apprehension of the perpetrators, and the breaking-up of the gangs. Goojranwala, Eminabad, and Sealkote, are ascertained to have been their head-quarters, and no less than forty-six murders have been deposed to and investigated.—Lahore Chron., Jan. 3.

A YOUNG BENGALI BRAHMAN, about twenty-two years of age, whose real name is Chandra Kanta Chakrabarti, but who changes it as often as it suits his purpose, is wandering about the country imposing on missionaries, with skillfully got-up accounts of his conversion to Christianity, and the loss and suffering to which he has been subjected in renouncing the religion of his fathers. He is well educated, and speaks and writes the English language with considerable correctness. He possesses an extensive knowledge of the Gospel, and counterfeits a religious character so well, as to render it exceedingly difficult to believe that he is other than a true Christian.—Cal. Christ. Observer, Jan.

FEMALE INFANTICIDE.—On the 5th, the quiet little station of Mynpoorie was thrown into a state of unusual bustle and excitement. All sorts of Oriental processions,—elephants, camels, horses, and raths,—were to be seen converging on the large plain. Hundreds of honest, sturdy-looking pedestrian Rajpoots, each with his tulwar under his arm, were trudging along through the dust which their wealthier chiefs kicked up. All had attended the invitation of Mr. Tyler, the commissioner, to a grand and solemn meeting convened by him, ostensibly for the purpose of lowering marriage expenses, but in reality with the object of putting down female infanticide, which the marriage expenses promote. A long row of tents was pitched for the accommodation of the Rajpoot delegates, open only on one side, facing which was a tent for the accommodation of the commissioner and other gentlemen attending the meeting. When the question was proposed to them, where they would please to take their places, each rajah said the first place was his due. There came a worse nodus. A man had been invited by mistake, who claimed to sit amongst the rajahs,—one Poke Pal Singh, of Awa, in the Muttra district. Poke Pal is a Jadon. His tribe is considered rather dashed with mongrel blood, and he came to represent, not a real rajah, but, as the other chiefs said, "a Company's rajah." The chiefs dispersed in little knots, politely declining the invitation of the native deputy collector to take their places. It was determined, however, to appeal to the politeness of the Thakoor, and very soon all were seated in good humour round the assembly-tents. Then came the commissioner, Mr. Tyler, the judge of Mynpoorie; Mr. Thompson, the magistrate, and other gentlemen. In their presence, a set of resolutions, which had been previously adopted in the Mynpoorie district, were proposed to the assembly. For three or four hours the commissioner and his party were engaged in explaining and witnessing the signing of these resolutions. The scene was a very gay and rather an impressive one. Most of the chiefs had splendid robes, either of cloth of gold, or brocade; their attendants clustered round with arms, silversticks, chowries, &c. Few objections were made, and on all sides terms of approbation were heard. One old gentleman rushed up, and said, "It is all very well our signing this; but will the Company let us off our payments at ferries when we go across the water to fetch our brides home?" When the meeting broke up, some three or four hundred names had been affixed to the resolutions, and every chief had thus solemnly pledged his word to assist in the humane object.—Agra Messenger, Dec. 13.

THE BREVET has not given satisfaction. In connection with the brevet comes the complaint, as respects the Indian army, of the invidious exclusion of Company's officers from the highest command. This system, so long persisted in, is, not without reason, we suppose, ascribed to the Duke. His Grace has certainly not been just towards the Company's officers, nor at any time evinced readiness to recognize their merits. — Hurkaru, Jan. 2.

OPPOSITION COACHES.—The success of the Inland Transit Company has provoked competition, and a new line of opposition coaches took the road between Allahabad and Meerut in January.

BURIAL OF DISSIDENTS.—We learn from the Christian Advocate that the vestry of St. John's has rescinded an order of the bishop against dead Dissidents being carried through the main gate of the burial-ground.

PIRACY.—The Singapore papers are full of accounts of acts of daring piracy on the coast of Borneo. These acts afford the strongest answer to the absurd charges of cruelty brought against Rajah Brooke for the suppression of a cruel trade. — Hurkaru.

SALE OF ARMS TO THE BURMESE.—Among the various reports which reach us from Rangoon, there is one upon which all classes would appear to be agreed, which is, that Captain May Flower Crisp, member of the Peace Society, and legislator of the Cocos, has been selling muskets to the Burmese. As soon as he heard of our differences with them, he freighted a schooner with muskets and ammunition, and sold them to the governor of Rangoon. The governor took the muskets, but refused to pay for them, on which Captain May Flower Crisp is reported to have positively applied for redress to the commodore, and the Burmese governor offered Rs. 1,000 for his head. — Friend of India, Jan. 8.

SUTTEE.—The following most extraordinary obituary notice appears in the Englishman of Jan. 16:—"On the 2nd January, Maharajah Goornarrin Dew, Rajah of Patchet, aged 50 years. On the same date, perished by suttee, Maha Dey, the ranees of the above." The same journal states that the rajah had been insane for the last 25 years!

OPIMUM.—The amount realized by the Calcutta opium-sale of the 12th January was £283,300!

COOLIES.—The Hurkaru reports, that twenty coolies from Trinidad had arrived in Calcutta on board the Etiza Stewart from Greenock, healthy and contented, and that some of them are determined to return to Trinidad as soon as possible.

MAHARAJAH DHULKEEF SINGH, on his late visit to the Governor-General, was allowed to come and depart without a salute. This is the first innovation on the practice of treating the great pensioners of the Company as princes.

THE JOTEK PERSAUD CASE.—We have not been favoured with a copy of Sir Robert Barlow's report; but we are given to understand that he has exculpated Gubbins, and has come down, somewhat heavily, on Denison. — Mofussilite, Jan. 20.

NEW PUNJAB DISTRICT.—A note from the new road to Wuzerabad, says that Sir Henry Lawrence was halting at Goojranwallah, and making arrangements for the establishment of the new district about to be formed, and to which Major Clarke, deputy-commissioner of Shaikhoopora, and Mr. Berkeley, now extra-assistant at Sealkote, will be transferred. — Lahore Chronicle, Jan. 14.

CIVIL SERVICE CHANGES.—We learn from private sources that Mr. J. Stanley Clarke, of the civil service, having accepted the bonus of Rs. 5,000, leaves Azimgurh almost immediately. Mr. Tulloh, and Messrs. W. H. and T. P. Woodcock, have also accepted the bonus. It is rumoured that Mr. J. Muir goes to Mirzapore as judge, and Mr. Unwin to Mynpoorie, and that Mr. Shank, magistrate and collector of Benares, succeeds Mr. Clarke at Azimgurh. We give this merely as a rumour. The appointment of Mr. John Thornton to the Sudder Board, and that of Mr. Harrington to the Sudder Nizamut, are confirmed. Mr. Christian from Lahore, is to succeed Mr. Muir, as secretary to the Sudder Board at Agra. — Delhi Gaz. Jan. 17.

TEA IN THE PUNJAB.—The Lahore Chronicle informs us, that the cultivation of the tea-plant in the highlands of the Punjab is likely to be successful, even beyond the hopes of its projectors. Thousands of plants sown in 1849 have attained a height of four and five feet, and there seems no reason why tea should not ultimately become an important article of trade in the Punjab, as well as in Kumaon.

CASHMERE.—A distinguished political officer is about to proceed on a deputation from Lahore to Cashmere, to inquire into numerous complaints that have originated in the alleged misconduct of some of those British officers who have been permitted to visit that province, and to arrange with the maharaja some measures to obviate a recurrence of such complaints as have been brought to the knowledge of the board of administration. — Mofussilite, Jan. 9.

LIEUT. BOULNOIS, Engineers, superintending the erection of the fort of Dubb, accompanied by three other officers, proceeded to examine a tower at the foot of the hills, and when they had gone as far as prudence dictated, and beyond which Capt. Hicks, commanding in Dubb, had prohibited their going, the other three turned back, Mr. Boulnois going on until he saw some men in front, when he turned his horse to return. They fired a volley, hit him in the breast, he fell, and they came down and cut him to pieces, stripped off his clothes, left them on the ground, and carried off the body, which has since been recovered and buried in Dubb. — Agra Messenger, Jan. 24. — Lieut. Arthur Boulnois, with two other officers, went out shooting, and had not proceeded far when the appearance of some Affghans induced his companions to halt. Lieut. Boulnois would not heed their remonstrances, and had not gone far when he was pierced by two bullets. The savages no sooner saw him fall than they rushed on him, knife in hand, and soon put an end to his existence. His body was only recovered and brought intocamp on the 14th. — Lahore Chron. Jan. 21.

A RICH ZEMINDAR, who had for six months evaded all the efforts of the Burdwan and Hooghly police to arrest him, was at last captured by Baboo Gooroo Churn Doss (late of the Hooghly College, and now a darogah in the 24 Pergunnahs). The baboo refused a bribe of Rs. 10,000. Government to mark its approbation presented the baboo with a present of Rs. 300.

THE YOUNG MAHARAJAH OF INDOR is sent on a trip to Hyderabad in the Deccan, incognito, whilst Moonshee Omeid Sing is his representative, and reigns in his stead! — Delhi Gaz. Jan. 24.

THE KHANWA CANAL.—Water has commenced flowing into the Khanwa Canal, which had been dry for some time, and the engineers are doing their best to increase the quantity, though sand is somewhat difficult to deal with. The Khanwa is an old channel in the Baree Doab, which, when in full operation, will water a considerable tract of land from below Kusoor to the vicinity of Futehpoor Gagaira. — Lahore Chron. Jan. 10.

PUNJAB COMMANDS.—Another, and we presume a final, arrangement of the Punjab military commands has taken place, consequent, it is believed, on instructions from home. The Lahore division is in future to extend to the left bank of the Indus, and the Peshawur is constituted a distinct field-force, Brigadier Sir Colin Campbell of course to command. The temporary charge of the new Lahore division has devolved on Brigadier Breton, commanding at Rawul Pindee, the senior officer present, waiting the arrival of Brigadier-General Rich. — Lahore Chron. Jan. 24.

LOODIANA.—We believe it has been determined to do away with Loodiana as a station. — Delhi Gaz.

ON DITS.—Mr. J. P. Gubbins, civil and sessions judge, vacates his appointment, prior to applying for permission to resign the service.—It is likely Mr. Simon Fraser, judge of Bareilly, will be appointed commissioner of the Meerut division.—Capt. E. I. Robinson, of the 7th Cavalry, superintendent of the Buttee territories, is about to retire from the service, and will be succeeded by Capt. R. Robertson, of the 70th N.I., at present commanding the Palace Guards at Delhi.—Capt. Nicholl, of the 50th N.I., will in all probability succeed Capt. Robertson at Delhi.—Brevet-Major Adam, senior captain of the 44th, has accepted a bonus of Rs. 10,000 to retire, and has sent in his resignation to army head quarters.—Lieut. F. H. Kennedy, of the 8th regt. N.I., is about to retire to the Invalids.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDER.

CAPT. HERCULES SKINNER.

Camp, Allahabad, Jan. 19, 1852.—The following paragraph of a military despatch from the Hon. Court of Directors to the Government of India, dated 3rd December, 1851, is published for the information of the army:—

"As a mark of our respect for the memory of the late Lieut.-Col. Skinner, c.b., we have much pleasure in giving you our authority to confer upon his son, Captain Hercules Skinner, an unattached commission as captain in the army of your presidency, from the date of your receipt of this letter, with permission to grant him such employment in our irregular corps, as you may find to be consistent with his own merits and services and the claims of other officers."

ANOTHER MOPLAH OUTBREAK.

The following letter, published in the Calcutta Englishman, gives the particulars of the outbreak in Malabar (the fifth within the last eight or nine years), referred to in our last issue:—

"It appears that on the 5th January, seventeen Moplahs, having formed themselves into a body, and armed with different kinds of weapons, proceeded to the residence of a wealthy Nambrooy (a native in caste next to that of a Brahmin), in a village twenty miles from Cannanore, and murdered twelve of its inmates; this done, they took possession of the jewels and money, and set fire to the house, as well as to three others in the immediate neighbourhood. The reason assigned is, that the Nambrooy, on whose land the Moplahs built a mosque, practised impositions on them, by exacting extortionate sums of money on account of ground rent, and threatened to have the mosque razed in case of a refusal. The insurgents had increased to 200. In compliance with the requisition of the chief civil officer of the district, a field detachment from Cannanore, consisting of 100 rank and file of H.M.'s 94th regt. under Captain W. H. Sykes, Lieuts. D. H. Blair, J. Buchanan, and P. Primrose, and Ens. Tod, and 150 sepoys of the 16th M.N.I. in charge of Brev. maj. C. W. Hodson, Lieuts. Ewart and Boulcott, and Ens. Beresford, the whole under the command of the senior officer, marched off to the scene of tumult. The party was ordered to meet on their way the collector of Malabar, Mr. Conolly (who has proceeded from Tellicherry, accompanied by a body-guard of 50 sepoys, and hundreds of armed peons), and to commence operations agreeably to his instructions. As a precautionary measure, a native officer's party, from the 16th regt. N.I., from Cannanore, was ordered to be located at the Cherikul Talook Catchery, for the protection of the treasury. Various rumours respecting the movements of the insurgents are flying about, some assert that they are nearing Tellicherry, others that they purpose going up to Caway, a talook about 17 miles north of Cannanore, with the view to sack the Catchery cash chest, and burn the village. In fact, the inhabitants of several districts adjacent to the seat of disturbance are in the greatest terror; most of them have fled to seek refuge at Cannanore. It is stated that the Moplahs threatened to visit also the residence of another wealthy native of the place, who sent off immediately the female portion of his household towards Cannanore, and engaged about 300 of his agriculturists to protect his property. Since writing the above, I have heard that the Moplahs are committing great depredations at Mottanoor, close to Chavacherry, and that one of the mail-runners was shot at by them; but fortunately the ball struck the umbrella he held aloft."

We learn that the Moplah insurrection has been put down this time by a valiant Nair at Chavacherry, who armed his dependents and slaughtered the whole gang of fifteen, when they came to do a similar office for himself. The detachment of the 94th is said to have marched back to Cannanore on finding that the work of destruction was over.—Athenæum, Jan. 15.

Extract of a letter, dated Cannanore, 14th January.—"Poor Calliatt Ananden Nair, the wealthy native who killed the fifteen Moplahs the other day, is himself now no more. The insurgents, who deserted Chavacherry, on the approach of our troops, came back, and the first thing they did was the slaughter of Ananden on the 12th. The Moplahs are now, it is said, carrying on their outrages with the most perfect impunity,—viz. maltreating any whom they know are dependents on the Nair chiefs, &c. The inhabitants of that district are in the greatest alarm in consequence, and most of them have left the place for Cherikul for safety. Along with Ananden, another Nair we hear was also killed."

The following order was issued by Brigadier W. H. Elliott, K.H., on the occasion of the return from field duty of the detachment of H.M.'s 94th, and the 16th regiment N.I.

"The detachment of H.M.'s 94th and 16th regiment N.I. having, this morning, returned to cantonment, Brigadier Elliott has pleasure in expressing his own, as well as the sentiments of Mr. Conolly, the magistrate, of the conduct of the officers and soldiers employed on field duty. Mr. Conolly has expressed to the brigadier his sense of obligation to Major Hodson for his efficient and ready co-operation with him in his endeavours to capture the Moplahs, and the brigadier requests that Major Hodson and all employed upon that duty will accept of his best thanks for the zeal they exhibited in aiding and supporting the civil authority in putting down the enemies of the public peace and good order, and of which the brigadier will not fail to make a favourable report to head-quarters."—Advertiser, January 19.

We have communications from Malabar up to the 16th inst., and are sorry to say they contain information of a highly unsatisfactory nature. A correspondent, writing on the 14th, tells us that Calliatt Ananden (the Nair who with his friends resisted and slew the fifteen Moplahs) and one of his followers have been slain by some of these infatuated people. The 15th, the military authorities at Cannanore received a request from Mr. Frere, the magistrate at Tellicherry, that a company of H.M.'s 94th regt. might be sent him without delay; a rumour being prevalent that the Moplahs intended assembling in force, to attack that station and liberate one of their friends, who was lately arrested on the charge of being implicated in the late outbreak, and who is said to be a man of considerable wealth and influence amongst them.—Bangalore Herald, Jan. 20.

FURLOUGH SCHEME.—A correspondent has sent us the following outline of a scheme for assisting officers to profit by the expected revision of the Furlough Regulations; and as it is altogether novel, and by no means devoid of feasibility in principle, although there would be difficulty about its details, we have pleasure in drawing attention to it, as requested, by allowing it this prominent place in our columns:—"Now," says he, "that our Furlough Regulations are attracting attention in Europe, and there being no doubt that a relaxation of them must take place shortly, we beg to suggest to the Indian armies of the three presidencies a plan which would enable both poor and rich in the service to avail themselves of a more frequent furlough to Europe than they could do, even if permitted, under existing circumstances. At present, the army are accused of listening supinely, and not aiding in the stir made at home, about the revision of the Furlough Rules; but why do officers not exert themselves to help on the movement? Because they are well aware that, should the concession be offered at once, they are mostly unable to meet the expense of a voyage to England and back, and painful must it be to such to know that for them the coveted boon would possess little value. The scheme we propose, however, if well supported by the army, and agreed to by the Peninsular and Oriental Company, would remove the difficulty of the former body, and tend to their mutual benefit. Our proposition is this:—Let all officers now in the service pay a monthly subscription, say of 5 rupees (10s.), as long as they continue in it, and let those who may hereafter enter be solicited to do likewise. For the sum of these subscriptions, let the P. and O. Company consent to grant free passages to Europe and out again as often as subscribers may be able to obtain furloughs from the Government, either regular or on private affairs. Married men to pay 8 rupees per mensem, to entitle their families to the benefit of the scheme. The table-charges on board ship should be the only item uncovered by the subscriptions. Officers proceeding to Europe overland on sick certificate, and having their passage paid by Government, would of course give the Steam Company the benefit of the allowance. So much for the sketch of our plan. It remains to be seen whether it will find acceptance with the army of this presidency, and whether enough will come forward and volunteer subscriptions to make it worth while for a committee to be formed, for the purpose of arranging the details, and negotiating with the P. and O. Company. It must be borne in mind that a very large sum of money would be collected, even by a small contribution from all ranks, the civil service included. There are about 6,600 who could subscribe, and they might raise £40,000 per annum, exclusive of the Government allowance on sick certificate. To those now in the service, both young and old, the benefits would be very great. Even the elder hands, who have had their furloughs, must not forget that a second furlough is probably necessary to them; and, to make the scheme more popular, we would propose that subscribing officers retiring from the service should have their passage home free of additional charge. There are various other points connected with the subject, but into these we shall not enter for the present"—Madras Spectator, Jan. 1. [We have received a letter recommending of this scheme, in which the writer observes:—"It might be thought that the P. and O. Company would be losers by this plan; but, judging by a voyage I have made in their steamers, I am confident it would be greatly to their advantage, both as to profit and giving the greatest check to an opposition steam company taking the same road. There were 120 passengers on board ship, and not more than 10 of these were returning from furlough; the 110 were officers returning from sick certificate, Queen's officers, and merchants, who would always pay full passage-money to the company. To induce cadets to subscribe, I would propose they were offered £50 passages on first coming to India. If the Court of Directors were to recommend this to their army, it would soon succeed, and it would be to the Court's interest to advance a plan which would greatly add to their officers' knowledge by a return to Europe now and then, besides being a saving to the State, by having more officers on half-pay in time of peace."—Ed. I. M.]

NAVIGATION OF THE GODAVERY.—The Athenæum states that Col. Cotton has gone far towards determining the possibility of navigating the Godavery. This officer, a few months ago, constructed a small steamer, which draws only sixteen inches water, and attains a speed of five miles an hour. In this little vessel, Col. Cotton steamed one hundred and fifty miles up the river, and was only stopped by a rapid, which a stronger vessel would have overcome without difficulty. He then landed and proceeded another eighteen miles on foot, and returned, satisfied that for 168 miles there is no impediment to the navigation of the Godavery.

THE RATE OF EXCHANGE between Hyderabad and Madras is so high, that the five lakhs of rupees advanced by the Sahookars, upon the security of the Nizam's jewels, was paid in hoondies for three lakhs and fifty-nine thousand, equal to an exchange of thirty-nine per cent.

MURDER OF LIEUT. JOHNSTONE.—A letter, dated Jaulnah, the 26th January, states that the process of discovering the perpetrator of the murder of Lieut. Johnstone is apparently drawing to a conclusion. The old trooper, who was taken up on suspicion, was still in close confinement. "The judge advocate general was down here lately to make inquiries into the case, and ascertain whether the evidence was sufficient to bring the prisoner to trial. He was engaged twenty days with this business, and then returned to his station. Everything relating to the business, however, remains a secret. It will scarcely be credited that the suspected murderer's own wife was the chief witness against him, and even went so far as to point out the spot where the pistol was buried by which he committed the deed! The prisoner, however, convinced the Court that this story was got up by his wife and a man with whom she had been living on an improper intimacy. They thought this contrivance would get him out of their way, as well as enrich them with the reward offered for the apprehension and conviction of the murderer!"

CIVIL FUND.—Messrs. T. L. Blane, G. L. Prendergast, T. Pycroft, G. T. Beauchamp, and W. H. Bayley have been elected trustees for the affairs of the Civil Fund for the present year.

THE NIZAM'S CONTINGENT.—There is reason to believe that one of the results of the court-martial now going forward on the risaldar of the 5th Nizam's cavalry will be an inquiry on the part of the Madras government into the constitution and management of the contingent. The evidence on the trial discloses the habitual exercise, on the part of certain officers, of a lawless despotism, which is perhaps shamed by the acts of the Hyderabad government. Property and condition meet with no respect, so that it is a cause of astonishment that murders and revolts are not of frequent occurrence. What will the public think, when it hears that Capt. Charles Yates, a local commandant of cavalry, has, during the period he has been in command, confiscated of his own motion, and by a mere stroke of his pen, more than a hundred assamies? The value of each assamy is at the lowest computation Rs. 1,000; we might be within the mark if we said Rs. 1,500; but taking the smallest sum, we have a lakh of rupees' worth of private property confiscated, without any interference on the part of superior authority or public outcry.—Athenæum, Jan. 20.

MOORTOOZA KHAN.—The grand jury have found a true bill against Moortooza Khan, for the concealment of property at the time of his insolvency. For two or three years past, Moortooza Khan has been almost hermetically sealed; the official assignee believed he was in possession of property, which would be made available for the benefit of his creditors, if the Court could get hold of it. After many escapes and evasions, the dashing Mahomedan was obliged to succumb to the power of the law. His house in Triplicane was broken open, and a considerable amount of property found, some of which, it is said, was purchased by him prior to his appearance in the Insolvent Court. Criminal proceedings being instituted against him, curiosity was not a little sharpened by the discovery of an iron box filled with letters and papers of various kinds, which in the days of his prosperity Moortooza Khan had received from the "heads of society in Madras." Here were materials for local scandal. However, none but the creditors cared to improve the opportunity, and these, by means of negotiation with the nabob, succeeded in inducing his highness to agree to liquidate the whole amount of Moortooza Khan's debts by instalments of half a lakh annually. When this arrangement had been concluded, the matter appeared to be settled. The property, including the correspondence, was handed over to his agents, and the creditors looked forward to receiving their first payment in the course of the present week, when it transpired that the chief magistrate was determined not to let the law be made a mere pretext for enforcing civil claims. He caused two bills of indictment to be preferred to the grand jury; one of them has been found a "true bill," and Moortooza Khan will have to take his trial in due course.—Ibid.

CHOLERA.—The U. S. Gazette reports, that the ravages of cholera around St. Thomé have been terrific, and that the poorer classes of the natives have adopted the practice of taking their relatives when at the point of death to the district dispensaries, and there leaving Government to bury them.

THE RAILWAY.

Immediately on crossing Sion Causeway into the Island of Salsette, the works are seen. A cutting is progressing at this spot, through some hilly ground composed of hard clay, to the depth at the highest part of some twenty-five feet. During the drive to Tannah, the railway embankment is frequently visible at some distance from the road,—running through the low, level ground that borders the sea. No rails appear to have been permanently laid down, as yet, in Salsette. Near Tannah, a viaduct is in progress across the narrow arm of the sea that divides Salsette from the continent; and it is so far advanced that it will be ready for the centres in a fortnight or thereabouts. Shortly after crossing this arm of the sea, we come again upon the railway embankment, running through two or three miles of level ground until it reaches a spur of a long, curiously-peaked hill, distant some three miles from Tannah. A tunnel has just been commenced on each side of the spur. Here crossing the hill, we come upon a continuation of the embankment, beside which blacksmiths' and carpenters' sheds have been erected,—as also an hospital; and brickmaking, and the ordinary navy labour, were busily going on. Here for the first time in India, I saw natives handling the spade,—which, however, they do not seem to manage with particular facility. One English navigator is equal to three of our labourers. The latter, however, are doubtless a more easily managed set. About a mile on rises the higher hill of Dunterra, through which a tunnel is being constructed; 44 yards have been bored from the face of the hill to the place where the brickwork inside commences. These 44 yards, however, do not count as a part of the tunnel; for it is intended that the whole of the superincumbent mass shall be cleared away, and then it will assume the appearance of a cutting. The tunnel really commences at the brickwork, 44 yards distant from the entrance of the hole in the hill; and from this brickwork, the tunnel, which is of course to be arched, will extend to the other side of the hill, 120 yards in length. Of this distance about 38 yards have already been excavated. The height of the tunnel, from the rails below to the centre or highest part of the arch above, will be 25 feet. The labourers work at the excavation by the light of lamps, slowly detaching with their pickaxes pieces of the rock imbedded in hard clay, of which the hill appears to be composed. Gunpowder in small charges is also used for blasting. The tunnel has been now two months in progress; and will take more than a year for its completion. It seems to astonish the natives in those parts not a little. They call it Bogda. No railway operations have been commenced beyond the hill of Dunterra; indeed, the contract for the part of the work from thence to Callian has not been let as yet. — Telegraph, Jan. 27.

The LONDON MAIL of Dec. 24, arrived at Bombay on Jan. 24, per Sesostri. The Haddington, with the subsequent mail of Jan. 24, put back to Suez, after being three hours at sea, with the main shaft of her engine damaged.

NEW SHIPS.—Orders have been received from home for the building of another large steamer here, of the same size and power as the one now under construction, intended solely for the packet service. Their spars are to be much shorter than those of the Moozuffur, Adjahs, and Feroze, and they are to be more snugly rigged, so as to offer less resistance to a head-wind than either of the three vessels just named; in fact, steam alone is to be depended on as the great moving power, sails being a secondary consideration. A brig of war of 500 tons is also to be laid down to replace the Euphrates, withdrawn from the line service for surveying duties. This vessel will be similar to the Jumna and Nerbudda.—Bom. Times, Feb. 2.

THE FIELD FORCE.—Extract of a letter from Hyderabad, dated 16th Jan.—“Our camp has been quite enlivened by the arrival of the field force. The 1st troop horse artillery arrived here on the 7th, and were brought across the river in the steamer Meenoo; so were the 1st grenadiers and company of sappers and miners. The Satellite and Indus brought up the head-quarters of H. M.'s 64th regiment in the evening, and the Nepier came on the 8th, with the brigadier general and a whole host of staff and officials. After a short interview with the commissioner, the general left on the 8th, taking with him the superintending engineer, Major H. B. Turner, who arrived here a few days before to inspect the arsenals, &c., and leaving us Major Fraser, the commissary of Kurrachee, to carry on the commissariat duties here during the present influx of troops and Capt. Vincent's absence in Bombay. The Rooft field force have taken ground within half a mile of the Indus: Capt. Sibley, H. M.'s 64th, has been appointed brigade major. The wing of H. M.'s 64th foot, formerly at this station, joined the field force on the 8th. Not a word yet of our onward move.”

THE COMMERCIAL BANK OF INDIA has declared a dividend for the past six months of Rs. 17½ per share, this being at the rate of seven per cent. per annum. The net profits of the half year amount to Rs. 1,80,528, of which Rs. 10,058 have been carried to credit of undivided profits and reserve fund.

THE HORSE DAWK between Kurrachee and Kotree was commenced on the 20th, by the enterprising Waghorn of Scinde (Mr. Hewitt), with apparent success. Letters from Kurrachee now reach Hyderabad Fort in twenty hours: the Bombay mail also reaches a day sooner, by the time of transit saved between Tatta and Kotree.—Bombay Times, Feb. 2.

REFORMS AMONGST THE PARSEES.—The Bombay Guardian reports that a society has been formed among the Parsees, embracing many of the most respectable members of that community, and several priests, who have seriously set themselves to the task of reforming certain abuses which have crept into their religious practices. The new movement has, it is said, excited extreme alarm among some of the more bigoted Parsees, but the younger members of the community are likely to assist in its development.

MR. CONSTABLE.—The Bombay papers are full of discussions on the career and character of Mr. A. G. Constable, a son of Sir Walter Scott's publisher, who has recently absconded with between Rs. 10,000 and Rs. 15,000. Mr. Constable, after having run through considerable property, inherited from his mother, and having twice enlisted in the Fusiliers, was offered the superintendence of Messrs. Steuart, Ritchie, and Co.'s establishment at Dhurrungum, where he remained for two years. Certain circumstances aroused the suspicions of the firm, and one of the partners proceeded to that place to inspect his accounts, when the defalcation was immediately discovered. Meanwhile Mr. Constable made his escape by the Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer. A warrant had been issued for his apprehension.

A FRENCH BRIG SEIZED BY COOLIES.—By a letter from Aden, dated the 24th of January, it appears that, a few days previously, a French brig laden with sugar left that port, having on board 150 Coolies, to be conveyed to Bourbon (Réunion). The vessel had not got far on her voyage when the Coolies murdered the captain and officers, ran the ship ashore, and escaped. The Zetsoia, the last new steamer launched by the East-India Company, which had just come into Aden, was preparing to go in pursuit of the murderers, and to secure the brig.

THE BISHOP OF BOMBAY administered the rite of confirmation to eighteen candidates in the cathedral, on Wednesday last. His lordship was assisted by the Archdeacon, the Rev. F. Spring, garrison chaplain, and the Rev. G. Candy, minister of Trinity Chapel. Of the eighteen candidates presented to the bishop, fifteen were by Mr. Candy, and three by the garrison chaplain. One of the candidates was an Hungarian, another a German, and three were converts from Romanism; one was a midshipman in the Indian navy, one a cornet of cavalry, another an ensign of infantry, and the remainder Europeans and Eurasians. Before confirming the candidates, his lordship delivered a very appropriate address, which seemed to make a deep impression upon the minds of those present.

CHINA.

THE REBELLION.—A Chinese correspondent writes:—"T'ien-teh has adopted the dress of the dynasty Ming; it is plain and full. His usual equipage consists of a carriage, painted yellow; and when he makes an excursion he has in attendance forty-eight banner-men, and numerous bands of musicians,—drums, gongs, &c. Then follow a body-guard of 1,000 men and their officers, with numerous civil attendants; afterwards come the runners and police: altogether, as many as 2,500. There have been several processions of this kind lately through Wing-hou, Moo-hin, Loi-ping, Sou-yun, Loi-pao, &c."

The officers of the imperialist army are perfectly panic-stricken; they do nothing; and desertions from their ranks are of daily occurrence. The bad conduct of the imperialist soldiery, too, is driving the inhabitants to join the rebel standard, and T'ien-teh's forces are increasing in numbers daily; indeed, at the present moment, from careful calculations that have been made, they do not number less than 300,000.—Friend of China.—The Chinese Repository, speaking of T'ien-teh, says:—"Persons apparently well informed say that he is fair in his dealings, restrains his soldiers from rapine, and levies no more than the legal demands of the usual rulers. He has coined money, instituted literary examination, and appointed his six boards."

THE HORSBURGH LIGHT-HOUSE.—The light-house was designed in 1848, and [the plans] sent home for submission to the Court of Directors. It was after careful consideration of the effects of the waves during the north-east monsoon that I advised the Government that it should be entirely constructed of granite externally. I found that brick pillars wasted rapidly under the effects of the spray. The estimate for the building amounted to Drs. 15,928.04 Spanish, and the lantern machinery and apparatus to £1,500 sterling; the work was sanctioned under the impression of the Hon. Court that it would cost double the amount. Orders came out in December, 1849, to commence operations, but these were necessarily delayed until the monsoon changed in March. A party landed on the 31st of the month, but were got off again with great difficulty, as the monsoon came down again, and drove the gunboat in attendance to Pt. Romania. A permanent landing was not effected till the 11th of April, when I landed with 46 men and commenced operations. The works were put a stop to on the 21st October, by a heavy swell coming in from N.E., and we did not land again till April following, for the purpose of building. I came close to the rock several times during the N.E. monsoon, but was never able to land till the beginning of March.

Pedra Branca is a rock 150 feet long and 100 broad at H.W. Sp. Tides, rugged in aspect, and intersected by fissures. The highest point is 24 feet above H.W. Sp. Tides, and the light-house is built on the only stable rock that belongs to the group; all the rest are mere boulders, being intersected by fissures underneath. The rock on which the light-house stands could only afford room for a house of 22 feet in diameter; the base at the level of the first entire course is consequently confined to that dimension. The walls of the first entire course are 7 feet thick, and at the fifty ninth course 2½; the interior of the walls are bricks, being faced with squared granite in one foot courses, alternating 12 and 14 inches in breadth, every third stone being a header reaching through entire thickness of the wall. The house contains rooms 11 feet diameter for the light-keepers, three in number; one visitors' room, one store-room for provisions, one store room for light-room articles, and one vault for water; each room is vaulted with bricks set in cement. Rings of iron, 2 inches square, are set in the walls at the level of each vault. The light-room on the top of the building is entirely constructed of granite. The doors and windows are of marble; all exposed metals are either of brass or copper.

The light is 95 feet above H.W. Sp. Tides. It is produced by a combination of reflectors and refractors, the invention of Mr. Thomas Stevenson, of Edinburgh. There are three planes of reflectors, and three in each group; each group attain their brightest state once every minute, and are seen as a star of the first magnitude, when they sink under the horizon, as seen from a ship's deck at the distance of fifteen nautical miles. From the mast-head the light might be seen twenty-two miles. The glass frames are triangular, by which great lightness is gained, and are of cast-iron. The dome is of copper. The machinery is contained in a cast-iron case, and the wheel-work is of gun-metal.

Though the light only proceeds from three reflectors, yet, by the new combination of refractors, they are equal to the power of five of the common kind. The lantern, apparatus, and lighting-conductor, were designed by Mr. Alan Stevenson, the engineer to the Northern Light-house Board; well known as the engineer of the Skerryvore Light-house, situated on the west coast of Scotland, in a position of more difficult access than either the Eddystone or Bell Rock.

The Horsburgh Light-house is ten English miles from the nearest point of land, which is Pt. Romania, and forty English miles from Singapore, where provisions alone can be procured, a barren coast intervening. The stone work was completed in June, 1851, and the light ready to show on the 20th September, twenty-two days after the lantern and apparatus was landed on the rock. Thus the work, from commencing to finishing, took only eighteen months.

There were forty, fifty, and even sixty men employed at the rock during the working season, most of whom were Chinese. The other natives were Malays, Klings, and Bengalese, and one or two Javanese, Boyans, &c., and natives of other parts of the archipelago. As there were three classes of Chinese,—viz. Canton, Aya, and Kay,—there were no less than eleven languages spoken; most could speak no Malay, so that they had to be directed by signs. It is not surprising that we found great difficulty at first in inducing men to engage to come: when brought out to the rock, they used to rush to the boats, and cling to the seats till driven back by main force. One of the two gun-boats mutinied, and the commander and whole crew refused to remain, principally owing to the risks which they said they ran. This was at a time we were dependant on them for water, and then had only three days supply, when there were forty men on the rock. They were, of course, all discharged, and the gun-boats' crews have behaved exceedingly well ever since.

The cost will be within Drs. 1,000 Spanish of the original estimates. The accounts are not yet made up, but the cost of the building stands nearly Ds. 16,500 Spanish, and the lantern apparatus, &c., £1,370 sterling; additions to the original designs were sanctioned to the amount of about Drs. 1,000 Spanish. I believe this will be satisfactory to the Government, as a much higher outlay was anticipated.

CIRCULARS.—The following letters have been circulated amongst the members of the civil service, from the Colonial Secretary's Office. No. 1, dated 10th Dec. 1851:—"Sir,—The Governor having received a despatch from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State, declining to confirm a civil servant in the appointment to which his Excellency had recommended him, on the ground that he had not passed an examination in the native language, I am directed by his Excellency to communicate this decision of the Secretary of State to the civil servants of this colony, in order that they may be aware of the importance attached by her Majesty's Government to the possession by them of a knowledge of the native languages. His Excellency trusts that this circumstance will induce all those who have not yet passed the required examination, to qualify themselves for it without delay, as their advancement in the public service so materially depends upon the acquirement by them of a knowledge of the language of the district in which they are to be employed."

No. 2, dated 13th Dec. 1851:—"Sir,—The Secretary of State having had under his consideration the fact of one civil servant having given a pecuniary consideration to another to induce him to retire from the service, in the hope of being himself appointed to the office that would become vacant by such retirement, I am directed to acquaint you that the Governor has received the instructions of Earl Grey to communicate to the civil servants of this colony his Lordship's entire disapproval of such an arrangement, which his Excellency trusts will never again be made by any of the members of the service."

STRANGE PERVERSION.—We have seen a letter from Madura, which records a perversion that casts those of the Puseyites to Romanism quite into the shade. A burgher, aged about thirty, brother of a very respectable clerk in one of the public offices here, has not only turned Buddhist, but has been at once installed a Buddhist priest. He had mounted the yellow robes, and was carried in grand procession from one temple to another, hundreds of priests, with music and banners, attending. The Singhalese priests, to make the most of their convert, gave out that he had been an English Protestant clergyman.—Col. Obs., Jan. 15.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

The intelligence from Cape Town is only twelve days later than our last advices, namely, to the 12th January.

A Government notice, dated at King William's Town, January 2nd, announces that despatches had been received from Major-Gen. Somerset and Lieut.-Col. Eyre, reporting that upwards of 13,000 head of cattle had been captured, exclusive of 700 drowned at the confluence of the Tsomo and the Kei. Both commanders were in direct communication on the 23rd December, and were about to descend the Lower Bashee, to which large herds of cattle had been driven, while Faku, it was expected, would make a forward movement. The Fingoes had rallied round the British troops. The continued rain had been much against the troops, who were, however, in high spirits and health.

The same notice states the death, by the hands of the enemy, of Major Wilmot, Royal Artillery, commanding at Fort Peddie, who was shot on New Year's-day, while leading his men in an attack upon the enemy in the jungle of the Fish River, where it is said Sandilli has now taken shelter.

The Friend of the Sovereignty of the 22nd of December says that the Basuto tribes are restless and unsettled, through attacks made on them by reputed allies of the Government, the Plattberg Bastards and Barologs. Previous to these attacks, the people of Moshesh were disposed to abstain from violence. Since then, the farmers along the boundaries have suffered from the Basutos. Two companies of the 45th, under Captain Pariah, and a detachment of artillery under Lieutenant Singer, have been stationed for the protection of the chief Maroo and the Barolong tribe; and Lieut. Bourke and 25 of the Cape corps have marched to Winburg to enable the district farmers to return to their homes.

A PHILOSOPHER PUZZLED.—It is related of Confucius, that, upon his visiting Kwang-tung, a man named Heang-toh said to him, "As you are a saint, you must know how many stars there are in heaven." Confucius replied, "Inquire about things on earth, and I will answer you." "Tell me, then," returned the querist, "how many houses there are in the world?" "This cannot be answered," replied the philosopher, a little discomposed. "Then," said the other, "how many hairs are in your eyebrows?" Confucius turned away in silence.

A burra khana is a pleasant enough thing in its way, if not overdone with pièces de résistance and vases of real flowers. Iced champagne—just one glass, iced loll—as much as gentlemanlike discretion dictates, one tumbler of Bass, a soup, an entremet, some blanc mange, an olive or two and a dozen raisins, an intelligent barrister for your vis à vis, an assistant collector on your left, and a very nice woman on your right, who is not too érigante, the punkah going like fun, a pleasant and active host, and not too many servants in the room,—all this kills two or three hours pleasantly in India.—Madras Athenæum.

LITERATURE AND SCIENCE.

In a paper read before the Royal Asiatic Society, and printed in its last Journal, Professor Wilson has offered illustrations of the sacrifice of human beings, as an element of the ancient religion of India.

He adverts in the first place to a curious legend, narrated in the Rāmāyana, of a certain Sunahsephas, who was sold by his father for a hundred thousand cows to the king of Ayodhya, to supply the place of a sacrificial animal or victim intended for a sacrifice, stolen by Indra,—a transaction which is the subject of certain hymns in the Rig-veda. In each it is doubtful whether the victim was actually sacrificed. There is, however, no question of the purport of the legend, as it is found in the Āitareya Brāhmaṇa, which is considered to be the Brāhmaṇa portion of the Rig-veda. There the actual sacrifice of a human victim is fully established, at least, at the period of the compilation of the Brāhmaṇa; but how far that expresses the practice of the Veda period, Mr. Wilson observes, may admit of question.

It is the received opinion of Hindu writers, that the Brāhmaṇas are an integral part of the Veda. But notwithstanding the concurrence of authorities with the prevalent opinion of the Hindus, it requires, he says, but a cursory inspection of such a work as the Āitareya Brāhmaṇa to deny the accuracy of the attribution. "This Brāhmaṇa is not an integral part of the Rig-veda, and never could have been so. It is a work of a totally different era, and a totally different system," as Mr. Wilson proves from its character and contents. He winds up his inquiry thus:—

"Having come to the conclusion, then, that the Brāhmaṇas are not an integral part of the primitive Veda or Hindu system, but admitting that they may be considered as an essential part of the Veda of the Brahmins, or as a scriptural authority for the Brahmanical forms of worship, and for their social institutions when fully developed, we have next to consider the period to which they may belong, and how far they may be regarded as authentic representations of an ancient (though not the most ancient) religious and social system in India. This, as usual with all Hindu chronology, is a difficult question: certainty is unobtainable, but we may come to probable conclusions within reasonable limits from internal evidence. The Brāhmaṇas are posterior to the discontinuance of exclusively oral teaching; they could not cite miscellaneous and unconnected texts to the extent to which they cite them, unless those texts had been accessible in a written shape. They are subsequent, therefore, to the use of writing, to which the hymns, or Mantras, were in great part, if not wholly, anterior. They are prior, in all probability, to the heroic poems, the Rāmāyana and Mahābhārata, as we have no allusions to the demigods and heroes whom they celebrate: no allusion to Krishna and Rāma, although the latter name occurs as that of a Brahman, the son or a descendant of Bhrigu, which has nothing to do with Rāma, the son of King Daśaratha, any more than the name of Krishna, which occurs in the Saṁhitā as the name of an Asura, implies any illusion to the Krishna of the Mahābhārata. There is no reference to any controversial opposition to the doctrines or rites of Brahmanical Hinduism, although differences of opinion as to the purport of the performance of some ceremonies are adverted to, and so far, therefore, we have no reference to Buddhism. Again, the Āitareya Brāhmaṇa is prior to the Sūtras, or rules for conducting religious rites, ascribed to Asvālayana Baudhāyana, and others, who are undoubtedly authors of a remote period. It is, perhaps, not far from the period of the oldest passages in the laws of Manu, in some of which we find allusions to the narratives of the Brāhmaṇa, as in the case of Sunahsephas, and also of a prince named Pajavana, who is not named in later works. In the etymology, also, of the term jāyā, 'a wife,' as one in whom a man is born again in the person of a son, we have the very same words.* The Brāhmaṇa may be the earlier of the two, but not by any very great interval. Finally, the style, although more modern than that of the Veda, is ancient and obscure, and contains many words and phrases of Vaidik antiquity. Upon the whole, as a mere matter of conjecture, subject to reconsideration, I should be disposed to place the Āitareya Brāhmaṇa about six or seven centuries before the Christian era.

"So far, therefore, it may be received as authority to a qualified extent for the primitive practices of the Hindus, and for including amongst them the sacrifice, on particular occasions, of human victims. Not that the practice ever prevailed to the extent to which it spread through most of the ancient nations, or partook in general of the same character. These, it has been asserted, were entirely of an expiatory nature, performed under an impression of fear, and intended to deprecate the anger of the gods. Such were the sacrifices of the Druids, the Scythians, and the Phœnicians; and such were the Thargelia of the Athenians, when a man and woman were annually put to death in order to expiate the sins of the public, and redeem them from any national calamity. They were not, however, restricted to this course, but were not unfrequently vindictive, as when prisoners taken in war were sacrificed, like the three hundred citizens of Perugia, whom Augustus offered in one day to his deified uncle (Divo Julio); or as the Grecian navigators, whom the barbarians of Tauris sacrificed to Artemis whenever cast upon their shores. They had their origin, also, in notions of divination, as was the case in the worship of Mithra, when auguries were taken from the entrails of human victims; and they seem in some instances to have been suggested by a purely sanguinary spirit, as was the case with the perpetually recurring sacrifices to Baal and Moloch in the Phœnician colonies, and especially in Carthage.* No intimation of any such purposes are traceable in the indistinct allusions to human sacrifices in the Veda. Their object seems to have been the propitiation of some divinity, by devoting to him that which was most precious to the sacrificer. This feeling seems also to have been very widely diffused throughout the East in the most ancient times, as was the practice of the individual of pledging himself to the act by a solemn promise or vow. We might infer that the practice was not unknown to the patriarchal era, from the conduct of Abraham when commanded to offer up his son; for although he would not, under any circumstances, have hesitated to obey the divine command, yet he might, consistently with his obedience, have expressed some surprise at the injunction, had the purport of it been wholly unfamiliar. At a later date in the Jewish history, we have a similar sort of sacrifice under a solemn previous engagement in the vow of Jephthah; and it is worthy of remark, that one of the causes assigned by the Greek writers to the detention of the fleet at Aulis, and consequent sacrifice of Iphigenia, was Agamemnon's violation of the vow which he had made to offer to Diana the most lovely thing which the year in which his daughter was born should produce: Iphigenia was that thing, and the sacrifice was insisted on in satisfaction of the vow. The offering of children to Moloch, subsequently borrowed by the Jews from their idolatrous neighbours, originated probably in a similar feeling, which it is evident exercised a very extensive influence over the nations of Western Asia in remote antiquity, and, as appears from the story of Sunahsephas, was not confined to that quarter, but had reached the opposite limits of Asia at a period at least prior by ten or twelve centuries to the Christian era.

"Further, we find a like community of ideas in the institution of vicarious sacrifices. In the story of Sunahsephas, one human victim is substituted for another, whilst in the parallel cases of antiquity the substitutes were animals. It is not unlikely that this was also a primitive notion of the Hindus, and at any rate it had become so by the time of the Brāhmaṇas; for Sunahsephas is made to say, 'They will put me to death as if I were not a man,'—that is, according to Śkyana's commentary, founded upon a text of the Veda which he cites, but which is not easily verified, when the assistants had circumambulated the person bound to the stake, they set him free without any detriment, and substituted an animal (a goat) in his place. Hence Mr. Colebrooke concluded that the Puruṣa-medha, or sacrifice of a man, was never anything but typical; and the ceremony, as enjoined in the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa of the Yajur, on which his opinion was founded, is evidently of that character. In this, one hundred and eighty-five men, of various specified tribes, characters, and professions, are bound to eleven yūpas, or posts, and after recitation of a hymn celebrating the allegorical immolation of Nārāyaṇa, they are liberated unhurt, and oblations of butter are offered on the sacrificial fire. Hence Mr. Colebrooke concludes that human sacrifices were not authorized by the Veda itself, but were either then abrogated and an emblematical ceremony substituted in their place, or they were introduced in later times by the authors of such works as the Kāthika Purāṇa, for instance, in which minute directions are given for the offering of a human victim to Kālī, whom it is said his blood satisfies for a thousand years.

"That human offerings to the dark forms of Śiva and Durgā were sometimes perpetrated in later times, we know from various original sources, particularly from that very effective scene in the drama of Mādhava and Mālati, in which Aghoraghaṇṭha is represented as about to sacrifice Mālati to Chāmandā, when she is rescued by her lover. No such divinities, however, neither Śiva nor Durgā, much less any of their terrific forms, are even named, so far as we know, in the Vedas, and therefore these works could not be authority for their sanguinary worship. That the practice is enjoined on particular occasions by the Tantras and some of the Purānas connected with this branch of the Hindu faith, is, no doubt, true; but these are works of a much later date, within the limits mostly of the Mohammedan government within the period of which the works were compiled, and under which their injunctions could not safely have been carried into operation; and they never amounted, perhaps, to more than the expression of the feeling inspired by the character of the divinities worshipped, although they may have been occasionally attempted to be realized by some fierce and fanatical enthusiasts. These practices, therefore, are of a very different character from those which there is reason to believe might have actually taken place, though rarely and under special circumstances, under the authority of the Veda, and which originated in a common feeling and faith diffused throughout the most civilized nations of the world,—the nations of the East,—in the remotest periods of antiquity."

* Manu, b. ix. v. 8.

* See Bryant's Chapter on Anthropothusa and Teknothusa, vol. vi. p. 394.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON,

TUESDAY, March 9, 1852.

WHEN, about six weeks back, we speculated upon a change of ministers, owing to the inability of those in office to steer their vessel through the shoals and quicksands which beset the voyage, we did not take into account another contingency, namely, that they might (in the very words of a contemporary) wilfully run the ship aground and jump ashore. Yet this is what they seem to have done. They seized an occasion to resign, without being forced to that extreme measure, for a little activity on the part of their whippers-in would have rescued them from the hazard of being left in a minority upon the Militia Bill; and, after all, so slight a difference between them and a small majority of the House of Commons, as that upon which the division was taken on the 20th February, ought not to have been made a test of confidence. Between a local militia, not to be strictly local, and a non-local militia, the distinction is rather fine.

It is very evident that it was a feat of political strategy. The late ministers had to present and defend measures, the fate of which would have betrayed their weakness,—the Reform Bill, the Chancery Bill, the Cape policy, to say nothing of the Income-tax; and they thought it better to allow themselves to be beaten early in the fray, and to pick out a soft place to fall upon, than to lose the fight, and be severely punished into the bargain. The personal animosity of their late colleague gave them an opportunity, damaging to himself, of which they took advantage, and they have bequeathed as many anxieties and difficulties to their successors as they could.

So we have at length a Protectionist Ministry! The list of the new ministers is an unusual one. There are the names of gentlemen very respectable in private life, and as lawyers, country magistrates, and members of Parliament; but most of them have never been in office before, and can know nothing of state-business. This deficiency is, indeed, remediable, and might be objected to every minister at one time; unfortunately, however, the only security we have for the competency of so many of these gentlemen to fill the posts to which they are nominated, in the entire absence of any experience of them in official situations, is to be found in the credit they possess for qualities which do not always adapt men for public employment. Two or three tyros, intrusted even with high functions, could have been tolerated; but when nearly all, including their leader in the Commons,—their Chancellor of the Exchequer,—are raw, and when the policy to which they are pledged is that of reversing the whole course of our legislation for years past, the prospect is anything but encouraging to the country. As to selection and adaptation for particular duties, no attempt of this kind seems to have been made. If a given number of names had been cast into a hat, and put in the list as they came to hand, the appropriation of offices to individuals could not have been materially different. Even the colonies, which demand at all times, and especially now, skill, experience, and knowledge of their various interests and exigencies, have been consigned to the care of a Worcester-shire baronet, chairman for the last twenty years of the Quarter Sessions. It is something, undoubtedly, to have got rid of Earl Grey, whose knowledge and experience in colonial matters, directed by a weak judgment and a bad temper, were more pernicious than sheer inexperience; but we cannot derive consolation, as some do, from the fact, that Sir John Pakington is not only ignorant of the duties of his office, but conscious of his ignorance. A secretary of state, in such a predicament, must be helpless in the hands of his subordinates, and colonial affairs will, for some time to come, be administered (to use a mongrel term) bureaucratically. In short, with the exception of Lords Derby and St. Leonards,—the latter only a law functionary,—the new ministers may be said to have their business to learn; and this fact was alleged by the present Premier last year as the sole obstacle, and an insuperable one, to his forming an administration.

The specific line of policy to which they have unquestionably committed themselves, limits the resources of their chief to the narrowest bounds of the old Tory and Protectionist party, beyond which he cannot seek for coadjutors. To talk, as some do, of the new men as "infusions of fresh blood" into the party, is to misrepresent the fact; they merely contribute the requisite amount of fluid to the circulation, which is of the same quality as heretofore. Had a coalition been practicable with the Peel party, there are names which would have inspired the public with confidence in the moderation as well as the ability of the new Cabinet. Their owners, no doubt, reserve themselves for another list, which must shortly appear; for, from the moment the present Ministry was known, it has been doomed by the general tenour of public opinion to an ephemeral existence.

In saying this, we are not ambitious of being reckoned worshippers of the Whigs, or amongst those who would refuse the new ministers a trial, merely because they never have been tried. Knowing what are the fundamental principles of their policy, and believing that to the majority of the nation those principles are offensive, we conclude that their tenure of office must be short-lived, and fluctuations in the government are always injurious to the commercial interests of the country. Already we find that the course of improvement in our chief manufacturing marts has received a check from this cause. "The intelligence that her Majesty's ministers have resigned," says a letter from Manchester, "has destroyed the little confidence that was beginning to make itself felt." And again: "The ministerial crisis has entirely checked further improvement."

In his skilful, specious, and plausible speech in the House of Lords, the Earl of Derby professed a desire and an intention to allow the main questions of policy upon which the present and the preceding Cabinets are at issue to remain in abeyance during the session, until a formal appeal should be made to the country. But if his own partisans are ready to assent to this temporizing expedient, it is very evident that his opponents are not; for in the other house, on that very night, notices were given of two motions that will force divisions upon those vital questions.

In another respect this uncertainty as to the party and the persons who are to administer the government is greatly to be lamented. On the 27th February, the late ministers were to have moved in both Houses of Parliament for the appointment of committees upon Indian affairs, and would have nominated the members; those motions, of course, dropped to the ground, and different courses of proceeding, perhaps different ulterior views, may be adopted by their successors. Before any steps can be taken by the new ministers, it is possible that they may be displaced in turn, and this great work be deferred until it run the risk of being slubbered over.

THE present Caffre war will be a rather remarkable event in English history. That 5,000 or 6,000 naked and imperfectly-armed savages should be able for many months to maintain upon pretty equal terms a war against a populous British colony, baffling a strong force of our regular troops, is a fact at once extraordinary and mortifying to our national vanity. But this is not all. The Caffres have been supplied with arms and ammunition by British traders, who, for base lucre, have not scrupled to furnish those bloodthirsty tribes with the means of destroying our soldiers and colonists. But we have not yet done with the curious incidents of this war.

Sir Harry Smith, the officer who has hitherto had the conduct of the Caffre campaign, has been recalled, and it is quite astounding to contrast the terms in which his proceedings have been characterized by the late Secretary of State for the Colonies, and by the Commander-in-Chief of Her Majesty's forces, the Duke of Wellington. According to Earl Grey, Sir Harry has committed a series of the grossest errors, betraying a lack of "foresight, energy, and judgment." These are the terms employed in the despatch recalling Sir H. Smith, whose "errors," attributed to want of judgment, are therein recapitulated and severely commented upon. In the very teeth of this despatch, and in the face of the noble earl himself, the Duke of Wellington, in the House of Lords, declared that, as the commanding officer of Sir H. Smith, he "entirely approved of all his operations, of all the orders he gave, and all the arrangements he made;" that everything had been done by him that should have been done, with one single exception; he ought, says the noble duke, to have destroyed the fastnesses of the Caffres as soon as they were taken. But when his Grace acknowledged that this course "would occasion great labour, require much time, and cause great expenditure," it may reasonably be doubted whether this omission, in the absence of express instructions, was not a mark of prudence on the part of the ex-governor. Leaving out of view the expense, to destroy kloofs and ravines, and make roads through primitive forests and over rugged mountains, would have been very formidable undertakings, requiring a much larger force than Sir H. Smith had at his disposal. With the exception of this error,—not, as the duke expressly says, a serious one,—all the operations, all the orders, all the arrangements of Sir Harry, met with the entire approval of his supreme commander.

What are we to think of this conflict of decisions? The question is a purely professional one,—has Sir H. Smith conducted the war, taking into account the means and resources at his command, properly or not? The Duke of Wellington, the highest military authority, affirms that he has; Earl Grey, who is not a soldier, and is therefore not competent to determine military questions, pronounces that the war has been most improperly conducted; that Sir Harry has "failed in showing that foresight, energy, and judgment, which his position required." The weight of authority is against the Earl, and in favour of Sir H. Smith, who has nevertheless been recalled, as the Duke of Wellington must think, unjustly.

All this is, as we before observed, very remarkable,—if it were not too serious a matter, we should say very comical. In former times, when expeditions and campaigns were mismanaged through the fault of the controlling authorities at home, it was usual to divert public indignation from the really guilty parties towards an innocent chief agent, who was made the scape-goat. But "we have changed all this," so that no solution of the difficulty can be found in such an hypothesis.

Meanwhile, the facts, that this contest, still going on, has already cost much blood, ruined the border settlers, and taken more than a million sterling from the imperial treasury, are indisputable; and they seem to imply mal-administration somewhere. If Sir Harry Smith be not to blame, who is?

An article, which appeared in our last issue, extracted from a Madras paper, indicates the growth of a new evil,—as the writer considers it,—tending in its consequences to drive European traders out of the Indian markets, and if not to restore the territory of India to the Hindus, to give them back all the advantages they care to enjoy, leaving to us the barren distinction of being the nominal lords of the country, and the care and cost of defending it.

This very alarming announcement is founded upon the alleged successful competition which native merchants are now carrying on with the European,—a competition which, the writer says, "extends to almost every department of industrial effort, from preaching to portrait-painting." A host of commission-agents, it appears, is springing up at Madras, whose obsequiousness and natural qualifications for their functions cast those of the European into the deepest shade. The small personal expenditure of the native trader, the low amount of the profit with which he is content, the insignificant rate of the wages he pays, will enable him, it is added, as producer or seller, when able to supply an existing demand, to drive the European and the East-Indian out of the field. It is even hinted that, if the European community in India can get more for their money by dealing with natives than with their own countrymen, they will probably,—we should say certainly,—become customers to the former.

Now where is the evil in this? The writer we quote seems hard put to it to find a reason for lamenting, as he does, "the change which is stealing over the mercantile and trading classes;" but he at length discovers one in "the degradation of commercial morals to the standard of native habits," which must follow the lowering of prices to the level of native means of living. According to him, the foul practices of using false weights and adulterating commodities, which in England are confined (?) to the petty and disreputable dealers, are common to every class of Asiatic traders, the highest thinking it "a delusion to prefer any kind of reputation to that of possessing the largest amount of riches."

We must protest against this sweeping and summary mode in which the interests of the people of India are too often dealt with, and their claims dismissed. Their low moral standard is constantly pleaded as an insuperable bar to their employment in offices of trust and profit, nay, in any occupation which would elevate them above a condition of mere dependence. "It is well known," said one of our correspondents, very recently, "that natives are not, as a body, honest enough to be employed in an independent office." Is the thrusting them into the background the way to correct this deficiency? Does it not tend to perpetuate it? Would it not be better, under proper safeguards, to trust the natives, and, by patronizing and rewarding integrity, convince them of its value? We employ them as soldiers, to fight our battles, and we find them eminently trustworthy in that capacity; why should they not be equally so in civil employment? What class of men has ever been or would ever be, honest, if proclaimed to be, and treated as, rogues? Time must be allowed for accomplishing the change, and many proofs may, perhaps, occur, in the mean time, of the tenacity with which corrupt principles and evil habits cling to humanity. But mere dogmatical teaching will never recover a people from such a taint: they must be trusted before they will become practically honest.

In the case before us, however, it is a subtle degree of injustice to allege this trait in the Hindu character as a reason for bemoaning as an evil the success of native mercantile competition. Surely, if Hindu sellers are prone to roguery, the maxim, caveat emptor, which native buyers understand well enough, should be a sufficient protection to the European; and if Indian merchants can, in their own markets, undersell the British, why should they not enjoy the fruit of their economy or skill, and obtain thereby some compensation for the injury we have inflicted upon their manufacturers? We thought it not wrong, though upon equitable free-trade principles it was a grievous wrong, to extinguish their cotton fabrics, by imposing a heavy duty upon the importation of those commodities into this country, whilst British calicoes and muslins were admitted into India duty-free. Is it proposed, in like manner, to protect European traders by laying a tax upon native merchants and artisans, and, in the merry vein of Mr. Canning, to "Clap on their bottoms a twenty per cent.?"

If this were done, it would only sharpen the ingenuity of the native trader, and render his knavery more successful, by imparting to it a higher degree of refinement.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—For the last few weeks I have been a patient reader of the strictures of "M. G.," and of your able editorials, commenting on the unfair remarks of your correspondent, "A Civilian," from whose letters it is refreshing to turn to that of Dr. Forbes. His sentiments I admire, and his good sense every one must approve, excepting one point at the close of his admirable letter. Then comes another correspondent, under the signature of "An Old Mull." I will consider their allegations singly, and appeal to the public and the head of our Indian empire to look into the matter, and to judge between the true and the false.

The first part of the "Civilian's" letter has already been answered by Dr. Forbes. The following remarks on his letter are by an English officer of rank, who has devoted to the service of the Hon. East-India Company upwards of thirty-two years of his valuable life, both in war and peace; who has endeared himself to the natives of India by his strict justice and impartiality, and whose opinions and decisions are, up to this hour, held in reverence and esteem. He writes to me, in a private note:—"I have read the remarks of the Editor on the 'Civilian's' letter with more interest than the letter itself, whose author assumes too much, in stating that the Hindoostanee is not the general language of the country, and that a familiar knowledge of it is not, therefore, indispensable in the education of those who are sent to India."

The "Civilian" is wrong in saying that "a native has every access to the society of Europeans in India." Mr. Editor, it is a well known fact, that the majority of English look down upon natives as a conquered race, and, I am sorry to add, entertain a strong antipathy to them. To give you an instance; two Bengalee youths, educated in England, and who got the degree of "M.D.," on their return to India, were appointed sub-assistant surgeons in a station, independent of an English assistant surgeon. Besides their being looked down upon by some Englishmen, the editors of Indian papers did not scruple to remark (as nearly as I can recall the expressions), that "Government, in showing a disposition to advance these Hindoo doctors, has exhibited an unpardonable indifference to the feelings of Europeans. We wish the ruling powers, while fanning the flames of native ambition, had given a little consideration to what is due to the white race. How ridiculous it will look to see shawled shoulders and turbaned heads mingling with English men and English women!" Now you may conceive, Mr. Editor, what were the feelings that prompted such a contemptuous sneer.

I recollect another instance. A highly respectable native gentleman of Calcutta (if I mistake not, descended from a royal family) was invited to a public ball. One of the papers of that presidency observed:—"We have no antipathy to the natives; but, at the ball given last night, a — was following the Governor-General, showing his lordship a book of poetry which he had written, and reading some flowing passages from it: his lordship was obliged to get rid of him. Under such circumstances, natives ought to be excluded from invitations altogether." Such are the feelings towards those even who are entitled by birthright and education to associate with the highest society; what chance, then, has a native in India who cannot even afford to put on a suitable dress? But, I am happy to say, such are not the feelings of the English as a people, especially those who are gentlemen, towards men of any tribe or colour; they are more liberal, and to strangers always kind. At Calcutta, Bombay, Benares, Agra, &c., there are natives of the poorer classes who have acquired English in a high degree. I admit, they had the advantage of having been taught English by regular professors, learned Englishmen, who had been sent out for that especial purpose. This shows how little the "Civilian" is acquainted with the subject he presumes to discuss.

In former days, when the kings of Delhi ruled India, there was no necessity for interpreters for any part of that vast empire. I have not been at Madras, but I have seen several Madras regiments, and found not any difficulty whatsoever in conversing with Madras men. Of course, I found some slight difference of accent and terms, which did not appear foreign to us; in fact, such a thought never struck me. I know their language is Telooogo, which I heard them speak amongst themselves; but, at the same time, they speak Hindoostanee fluently. Many of the Moosulmans in Madras can read, write, and speak Persian; we indeed travel from one end of India to the other without requiring an interpreter. The Madras officers pass a like examination for interpreter as those of Bengal, and this clearly proves that the statement of the "Civilian" is not founded on fact. I travelled through Sindh, the Panjab, Bombay, and of course the Central Provinces of India, where lies my home; but never experienced any difficulty in making myself understood.

From Calcutta to Cabool, if you can speak Persian and Oordoo, you will not be at a loss. About Peshawur and Kohat the inhabitants speak Pushto and some barbarous dialects. This difficulty is easily surmounted by conveying your ideas in the Persian or Oordoo; occasionally the aid of some sensible person may probably be required to make yourself intelligible to some stupid villagers; but if the "Civilian" persists in saying that "Hindoostanee is not a universal dialect," I am prepared to admit that some hundreds of languages are spoken in India; but, of all these, the Oordoo is the commonest. It is impossible to acquire all those languages, even in a hundred years. What remedy does he suggest? Does he think the best plan would be not to learn any Indian language at all?

The "Civilian" says:—"It is too much the habit of the people in England to believe all the nonsense of grievance-mongers, without inquiring for themselves." Now, Mr. Editor, this is another mistaken idea of your correspondent. I came not in search of redress, and the subject of the acquirement of Oriental languages I took up simply for the welfare of the rulers of the country, whose provisions are, in the main, good, and whose intentions are, I believe, both just and generous. Still, the deficiency I complained of thwarts, in a great measure, the objects they have in view. It is surely desirable that the language should be efficiently acquired, and that we should not rest satisfied with a mere smattering. The deficiency of the present system is of little importance to me, personally; but woe be to those unfortunates who are suffering from the effects of it! The "Civilian" admits, "It is possibly the case, that no civil or military servant of the Company can acquire the language so perfectly as not to make the most egregious mistakes in idiom and orthography, in speaking and writing." But why should this evil be any longer allowed to disgrace the service? It is the fault of the Government in not enforcing, by a strict examination, the study of the Hindoostanee by their civil, military, and medical servants. They should, at least, require them to read and pass a visd voce examination, which would be of great use to them on their arrival in India, and an incalculable benefit to the service. Instead of this, they exact an examination in French, in lieu of Hindoostanee. No sooner are they embarked, than the smattering of French vanishes from their minds; scarcely an opportunity of speaking it occurs.

There is another means of obviating the necessity of acquiring the various languages spoken in India. At Haileybury and Addiscombe, the students should be apprized to which part of the presidency they are destined; let them then learn the language of that part of the country. For instance, those for Bengal ought to learn Persian, Oordoo, and Hindee; those for Bombay, Oordoo, Goojratee, and Marhattee; those for Madras, Oordoo, Telooogo, and Tamul. If the student attain but one current language of India in perfection, he will experience little difficulty in learning other languages, if necessary; as one Indian language is the key to another.

With regard to the last paragraph of Dr. Forbes's letter, I must take the liberty of differing from him. "I will venture to say," he observes, "that no native of India ever did or ever will know English, unless he be brought here when very young." There are some hundreds of Bengalees, Parsees, &c., in Agra, Bombay, Benares, Delhi, &c., who read, write, and speak English as well as, if not better than, many of those who think themselves well-educated Englishmen. Lately, a poetical work in English was published at Calcutta by a Bengalee youth, which might vie in style, thought, language, and metre, with many compositions issued in this country. I could quote many testimonies to the familiarity of natives of India with the English language; therefore, I cannot coincide with the remarks made by Dr. Forbes.

The letter of your correspondent, "An Old Mull," requires to be received with caution, when he doubts my assertion, by saying, "Now his means of observation have either been very limited, or he is injuring his cause by trying to prove too much. I can point out to him the names of many Englishmen in the three presidencies of India, whose attainments in the native languages would no doubt surprise him, &c."

There is no occasion to specify names, but let the "Old Mull" produce any one whom he considers as perfect in Hindoostanee (and of such he seems to have no lack); let him bring his scholar to the test, and prove himself master of the Oriental languages: that is, let him read a page of any Persian or Oordoo book, prose or verse, that may happen to be placed before him; let him explain with accuracy the different sentences, and render them into English; then let him translate a page from an English book into these languages, without committing errors in orthography, syntax, or idiom; let him read any ordinary letter, urzee, &c., in these languages, and then write a letter in the same languages on a given subject, and I will then acknowledge that I have been guilty of a misrepresentation.

The phrase "Moosulmanee bdt" is low; I never heard any respectable person use the expression. The coolies and chum-mars, perhaps, would use such a term, and would mean such to designate the Arabic and Persian languages, as when India was first conquered by the Moghuls they spoke Persian, Arabic, Pushto, &c., while the ignorant classes denominated it the speech of Moosulmans.

The language called Oordoo has been introduced; Oordoo means "camp." It is a "camp language," as every dialect of India is mixed with it, and it was introduced on account of its being universally understood throughout the great empire of Hindoostan.

Your correspondent must have had very stupid umlahs, who were very deficient in orthography and construction, if compelled to write roobakarees and depositions in Hindoostanee. I do not doubt such having been the case, as I have witnessed similar deficiency, but not amongst well-educated Moosulmans and Hindoos.

This is a subject worthy of inquiry. The language spoken in Hindoostan is Oordoo, and Hindee, not Persian. Well-educated natives can compose and write Persian, but it is not used in speaking; any person who has received any education at all will not be deficient in his own tongue. Had the Englishman been a man of education, he would not have selected or employed such asses in his cutchery, now that the Oordoo language is becoming so polished and current, that respectable persons often write their letters in Hindoostanee, and in the Persian character, and the like is in all Government offices since Persian has been abolished. "Old Mull" has filled up his letter with remarks which are quite irrelevant to the subject. He may have interpreted to the sepoy so as to make himself understood; but let me ask him, will he be able to read the proceedings of a case in Hindoostanee or Persian without the aid of a moonshee, —write a Persian or Oordoo letter himself as he would English? The serious results of Europeans' inability to read and write the vernacular language, in war and peace, are numerous, and the injury Government has sustained is incalculable. It is thus that many political and important secrets transpire; the MS. must pass through the hands of persons unworthy of trust, and who divulge the contents, whereby plans are defeated. With regard to the "Civilian's" translation, "Old Mull" had better refer to Dr. Forbes, or any native gentleman, and get his opinion. What will he say when I instance another anecdote of a more serious nature than any hitherto quoted? A gentleman in civil employ had gone through the proceedings of a case, and when he came to pronounce the sentence, ordered the serishtadar to decide it in favour of "Hurchund" (a word he had heard used in the proceedings), which in Persian means "notwithstanding." The serishtadar was puzzled; and it was not till after a tedious explanation that the party could be convinced that there was no one of the name of "Hurchund" connected with the case, and that hurchund was that part of speech commonly known as a particle, or conjunction. Some years ago, a lieutenant of the Bengal army did not understand the report of the orderly at night, who told him that the lines were on fire, nor was he aware of it until the noise and uproar attracted him thither, and, being late at his post, he got into a scrape. There are such instances daily, which never reach our ears.

What I aim at and advocate is, that no civil or military servant, or assistant-surgeon, be allowed to go to India until he passes an examination in English.

I am

Your most obedient servant,

A MAHOMEDAN MOONSHEE.

February, 1852.

PUNJAB BOOTY.

In return to an address of the House of Commons, there has been printed, by order of the House (17th February), a memorial of the Court of Directors of the East-India Company to the Lords of the Treasury, dated 9th July, 1851, setting forth, that by a Charter of George II., his Majesty granted to the Company, their successors and assigns, all booty and plunder which should be taken or seized from any of the enemies of the Company or of his Majesty's enemies, in the East Indies, by any ships or forces of the Company employed by them or on their behalf; provided that the same should be taken or seized during war or hostilities, begun or carried on in order to right and recompense the Company upon the goods, estates, or people of those parts, from whom they should have just and well-grounded cause to fear any injury, loss, or damage, or who should in a hostile manner invade or attempt to weaken or destroy the set-lements of the Company, or to injure his Majesty's subjects or others trading or residing within the settlements, or in any manner under his Majesty's protection; and further provided that the booty or plunder should be taken in wars, hostilities, or expeditions begun, carried on, and completed by the forces raised and paid by the Company alone, or by the ships employed at their sole expense, saving his Majesty's royal prerogative to distribute the said plunder or booty in such manner and proportions as his Majesty should think fit, in all cases where any of the forces by land or sea of his Majesty, his heirs and successors, should be appointed to act in conjunction with the ships or forces of the Company.

That a rebellion against the government of the Punjab having broken out at Moulton in April, 1848, headed by the Dewan Moolraj, and the Sikh Sirdars having declared their inability to coerce the rebels, a force composed of troops of her Majesty and of the East-India Company was employed for this purpose; that on the 2nd January, 1849, the fortified city of Moulton was taken by storm by these troops, and the fort of Moulton, after a practical breach made therein, surrendered to them; and that on the 8th February, 1849, the fort of Chinoute also surrendered to them, and booty was taken in the fortified city and forts, consisting of jewels and other property, the sale proceeds of which have been realized, amounting to Rs. 12,43,511. 3a. 11p.; that, in addition, certain ordnance and ordnance stores were taken in the fort of Moulton, the value of which is Rs. 66,412. 10a. 8p. (making together Rs. 13,09,923. 14a. 7p.), and that the whole of this property comes within the description recognized as prize.

That having taken into consideration the services performed by the forces serving in the Punjab, including those engaged at the capture of Moulton, and the delay which would arise before a distribution could take place of any booty which her Majesty might be graciously pleased to grant, the Court of Directors resolved, on the 18th July, 1849, that the officers and soldiers of those forces should at the earliest possible period receive a pecuniary reward of not less amount than six months' batta; they therefore instructed the Government of India forthwith to pay to the commander-in-chief, the generals, and other officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates, who served in the Punjab during the campaign, a donation equal to six months' full batta, on the understanding that if, thereafter, any booty shall be made over to them, there shall be deducted from any share of such prize-money, payable to any individual, a sum equivalent to the batta paid to him under those instructions, unless such share should be of less value than that sum; in the latter case, all that was to be repaid to the Company's treasury was to be the amount of the prize-money.

That upon former occasions in India, in which her Majesty's forces and those of the Company have been engaged conjointly in military operations, her Majesty has been pleased graciously to grant the booty and plunder taken by those forces to the Company, as to one moiety thereof, for their own use towards their expenses, and as to the other moiety, in trust to be, by the Company or by those whom they should appoint, divided amongst the commanders, officers, and men belonging to the forces employed in such military operations.

The memorialists, therefore, pray that their Lordships will be pleased to advise her Majesty to grant to the Company all such booty and plunder as were found in, or taken in the operations against, Moulton and Clinoute, as to one half of the value, for the proper use of the Company towards their expenses in the operations, and as to the other half, for the use of the commanders, officers, and men belonging to the forces employed in the operations, after deducting the amount which they have severally received as donation of batta; and also to advise her Majesty to give such directions as to the appropriation and distribution of the said plunder and booty amongst the forces as her Majesty shall see fit.

(By a Royal grant, dated the 26th September, 1851, her Majesty was pleased to grant to the East-India Company the booty and plunder taken in the city of Moulton and at the fort of Moulton and Clinoute, in trust, as to one half part thereof for the proper use of the Company, towards their expenses in the said operations, and as to the other half, for the use of the commander-in-chief, the generals and other officers, non-commissioned officers and privates, who served in the Punjab during the war, after deducting the amount which they have severally received as donation of batta, to be distributed to, and amongst them, according to the usage of the army in India; and by an order of the Court of Directors, dated 22nd October, conveying their resolution to present to the troops which served in the Punjab during the war, the moiety of the booty which her Majesty has been graciously pleased to place at their disposal, the Indian Government was directed to take the necessary measures for distributing the amount of this booty agreeably to the terms of the grant, after deducting from the share accruing to each officer and soldier the amount of the donation of batta which he has received.)

STEAM COMMUNICATION WITH INDIA, CHINA, AND AUSTRALIA.

The Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company have received official intimation of the acceptance on the part of the Lords of the Admiralty of their proposals for establishing additional and greatly accelerated steam communication between this country, the Mediterranean, Egypt, India, and China, embracing likewise a continuation of the mail service from Singapore to various ports in Australia.

The tenders made by the company comprised offers for performing the whole of the mail service required to be established by the Government. The main points of the scheme, which has now received the sanction of the Admiralty, are as follows:—

The service is arranged in five distinct lines:—

First Line.—From England to Alexandria and back, monthly, calling at Gibraltar and Malta—branch from Marseilles to Malta.

Second Line.—From England to Alexandria and back, monthly, calling at Gibraltar and Malta—branch from Marseilles to Malta.

Third Line.—From Suez to Calcutta and Hong-Kong and back, monthly, calling at Aden and Point-de-Galle, whence a steamer is to proceed by Madras to Calcutta, and another by Penang to Singapore and Hong-Kong.

Fourth line.—From Suez to Calcutta and Hong-Kong and back, monthly, calling at Aden and Point-de-Galle, whence a steamer is to proceed by Madras to Calcutta, and another by Penang to Singapore and Hong-Kong.

Fifth Line.—From Singapore to Sydney and back, every alternate month, calling both ways at Batavia, Swan River, or King George's Sound, Adelaide, and Port Phillip.

The practical result of these new arrangements is, that, in place of the single monthly line of steamers at present engaged in maintaining the steam-communication commencing at Southampton and terminating at Hong-Kong, a double line of packets will be established, running to and from Southampton semi-monthly. A perfect and unbroken chain of bi-monthly mail-packets, to and from Egypt, India, and China, will thus be established immediately the new contract shall come into operation. Besides this, the semi-monthly mail-packet service between Malta and Marseilles, at present performed by steamers belonging to the Royal navy, will be accomplished by the contractors, and the English naval packets may, in consequence, be withdrawn from that station.

The conveyance of the mails between Aden and Bombay is not included in the contract, as the East-India Company are still indisposed to surrender that portion of the communication which has hitherto been carried out by steamers belonging to the Indian navy.

The price tendered by the Peninsular and Oriental Company for performing the whole of the services included in the five lines referred to is 199,600l. per annum. Some other tenders were sent in to the Admiralty, and among them one from the Eastern Steam Navigation Company, who, however, proposed for only one main line of packets, thus tendering for but one half of the scheme. The Peninsular and Oriental Company, by offering to perform the whole service for a certain amount, that sum being far lower in proportion than the tenders of other contractors, and in addition presenting the advantage of possessing ships ready built, and having foreign coaling-stations, and all their arrangements both at home and abroad in a high state of efficiency, were enabled to beat all their opponents out of the field, particularly those who could only offer to construct and equip ships for the service after their tenders had been accepted.

The duration of the contract is to be for eight years from the expiration of the old one, which terminates in 1853.

The Times adds:—"We understand that the Peninsular and Oriental Company have it in contemplation to establish a branch packet-service to Bombay (irrespective of the mails) in connection with their line, touching at Aden."

We understand that, in anticipation of an extension or renewal of their contract with the Admiralty for the East-India and China mail service, the directors of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company have made a conditional purchase of the magnificent new iron steam frigate now fitting out in the Thames, and built under the supervision of the company for his highness the Pasha of Egypt. This steamer is of 2,500 tons burden and of 800 horse power, and it is confidently expected she will prove to be one of the fastest steamers in the world. It appears that the Pasha of Egypt volunteered to place this ship at the disposal of the Peninsular and Oriental Company in case an additional vessel should be required for the mail service, with the understanding that another ship should be constructed by the company to replace her. The new monster steam ship Himalaya, building for the company, is rapidly progressing, and will be ready for sea towards the close of this year. The Himalaya is intended for the Southampton and Alexandria station, and it is expected she will perform the voyage between these ports, a distance of 3,100 miles, in a little over eight days. The passage has hitherto occupied from 12½ to 16 days. The Himalaya is of iron, and will be 3,500 tons burden and 1,200 horse power. The company's steam ship Indus has been sent to London to be lengthened, and to have new engines of 650 horse power applied to her, in place of those of 450 horse power already belonging to that steamer. These improvements will make the Indus one of the fastest steamers afloat. The new steam ships Chusan and Madras (screw), belonging to the company, are expected here shortly, prior to being sent to India to take up their stations upon the East-India lines of steam communication maintained by the company.—Times.

EAST-INDIAN RAILWAY.

The half-yearly meeting of this company was held on the 19th February, at the offices, Old Broad-street; Mr. H. A. Aglionby, M.P., in the chair.

The secretary read the report, an abstract of which appeared in the last Mail.

The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said it was so explicit that it did not require any comment from him. He believed the most satisfactory thing was, that he had nothing to say. The most perfect harmony existed between the board and the Government authorities. Everything was going as well as they could wish, prosperously and satisfactorily.

Mr. Hadow said it would be satisfactory to some of the shareholders to know when the last call would be made.

The Chairman said he could not say whether it would be in the course of two months or six months, but, according to their contract with the East-India Company, the last call must be paid during the present year. The calls hitherto made were paid up promptly; of course, the East-India Company did not want a large balance at their bankers' to pay interest upon, neither would it be to the interest of the shareholders that they should, as the amount of the interest they would thus receive on their calls would have to be cleared off before the shareholders would be entitled to receive a higher dividend than 5 per cent. from the profits of the railway when in operation.

Mr. Franklin submitted a new form for their statement of accounts, which he said would make the state of their affairs more intelligible than that submitted by the board.

The Chairman said, the suggestion should receive their best attention. In answer to a question, he stated that the amount paid on the forfeited shares was 12,000*l.*, and that they were in the hands of the company, and at the disposal of the directors.

Resolutions were then unanimously passed, adopting the report, re-electing Messrs. R. W. Crawford, J. D. De Vitre, and J. P. Larkins, the retiring directors, and also Capt. C. Farquhar, R. N., the retiring auditor.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS, FEB. 16.

Affairs of India.—The Earl of Ellenborough, in putting a question to her Majesty's Ministers, as to when they intended to move in that House for a Committee on the affairs of India, took occasion to express his earnest hope that the information, which he concluded would be laid before Parliament, would comprise all the papers necessary to throw light on his recall from the government of India some years ago. Whatever might be the reasons which induced the late Sir R. Peel and others to decline laying before Parliament the papers for which on his return he most earnestly pressed, those reasons could not exist at present. Eight years had now elapsed since his recall, and those papers came now within the legitimate dominions of history. The matters to which they referred had in no respect any character of secrecy. It was to be hoped that, after the lapse of so long a time, they could now be discussed calmly and dispassionately. He thought, however, that it was essential, previously to the determination of Parliament as to the terms on which the future government of India was to be conducted, that there should be laid before it every document which could by any possibility throw light on the relations existing between the Governor-General of India and the body from which alone, under the law, his orders and instructions as to measures could originate. He assured their lordships that he desired the production of these documents, not so much from personal motives and interests, being secure as to the judgment which posterity would form regarding the matters in controversy between himself and the Court of Directors, as from thinking that their production was essential to the establishment of the truth of history, more particularly as to two measures of great importance,—he meant the combined movements of the two armies on Cabul and Ghuznee towards the end of the year 1842, and the policy and conduct of the campaign of Gwalior. There were also other important matters most materially essential to the future government of India touched upon in his letter of the 4th of July, 1844, and in the documents inclosed in that letter; and he must once more repeat his conviction that it was essential to the proper consideration of the great measure which must shortly be submitted to Parliament, that all the documents should be produced which were calculated to throw light upon it.

The Marquess of Lansdowne said it was his intention in that House to move for a Committee on an early day, and it was the wish of her Majesty's Government to afford Parliament all the information which they deemed expedient to enable it to form some judgment on that important question. If the papers he should then produce did not meet the views of the noble earl, it would be in his power to propose the production of such additional information as would throw light on the subject to which he had alluded. As to the peculiar papers connected with the noble earl's recall from the government of India,—which took place at a period when he had not the honour of being in her Majesty's councils,—it was impossible for him to state on what grounds the late Sir R. Peel acted when he declined to make a communication of them to Parliament. Whether it was expedient to renew the discussion upon those papers now, and whether they were necessary to enable the country to form a right judgment on the whole of this great question, would be a point for that Committee and for Parliament to determine.

FEB. 19.

The same.—The Earl of Ellenborough, after referring to what had passed in the House on a former evening, observed that he had understood the noble marquess then to say that he had had some difficulty in procuring the papers relative to his recall from the government of India, as he did not know whether they were in the hands of Ministers or of the East-India Directors. Now, those papers were in the hands of both those parties; and if the noble marquess had applied to either of them, he would have got at once what he wanted. The Board of Control was, he believed, in possession of those papers in extenso, and the Court of Directors had, at any rate, the most essential extracts from them. If the noble marquess had taken the trouble to read those papers, he could state whether there would be any public inconvenience in producing them now. It was not a personal question between himself and the Court of Directors, but a great public question, involving important public interests. The reasons for his recall had never yet been published, and that was to him much worse than if they had been published; for anybody might now suppose what they pleased respecting them, and might assign at liberty the worst of reasons. He thought it of importance that the public and the Government of India should see his reply to the Court of Directors.

The Marquess of Lansdowne said, with regard to the information which the noble earl wished to have laid before the Committee relative to the circumstances and causes of his own recall, he had only to say that it would be his own wish to do full justice to the noble earl, and to have all that information laid before the Committee. When he had stated on a former occasion that this was a personal question, he did not mean to say that it contained no matter of interest to the public, for a question touching the recall of a Governor-General or a Commander-in-Chief might be of private interest, and yet deserving of the inquiry and judgment of the public. At the same time, he submitted to the noble earl himself that it might not be convenient to produce those papers and to make that inquiry which he proposed, as a particular case, and not in connection with a general system. The case had now been before the public for the last eight years and more. It was not thought fit by the Government of that day to produce the papers connected with the noble earl's recall. The subject had slept ever since, and he should regret going at this time, and after so many successive Governments, into any inquiry into that single event. But, considered as one of a series of events, which marked the tone of the Government of India, and of the progress of the relations between the Governor-General and the Court of Directors, it might be deserving of inquiry; and in that point of view he agreed with the noble earl in thinking the papers might facilitate the inquiry, not as a matter by itself, but as a matter connected with the general system. He had read the papers in question, and with great interest; but in reading them he had found that that letter, which he had no doubt the noble earl considered most material to his case, had no existence either in the records of the Board of Control or in extenso at the East-India House. One reason for this might be, that the Earl of Ripon, who was then President of the Board of Control, had considered it so far a private letter that he felt himself authorized to take it away with him when he left his office. Now, whether that noble earl considered it a private letter or not, he should like, before he consented to produce it as a public document, to communicate with the Earl of Ripon, and with others. In justice to the noble earl, he was most anxious to produce all the information he could to illustrate that transaction, considered as a part of the whole system; but, for the reasons which he had already stated, he submitted that it would not be expedient to revive that particular case. He pledged himself that he would ask Lord Ripon whether he had any and what objections to the production of these papers; and that, as soon as he received Lord Ripon's answer, he would communicate it to the noble earl.

The Earl of Ellenborough was perfectly satisfied with the spirit in which he had been met by the noble marquess. He was anxious to have his own case considered, in conjunction with all the other great questions which would then come before the consideration of Parliament and the Committee. By the law as it now stood, the Court of Directors had no power to send out one single syllable to the Governor-General as to measures; and yet, strangely enough, that Court had continued to it, as a vestige of a former state of things which ceased to exist, the power of recalling, without the consent of the Crown, that officer whom the Crown thought best fitted to carry out the measures which it thought most expedient, and on which the Court of Directors could not offer a single suggestion. So monstrous an absurdity ought not to exist in a regular and constitutional Government. He thought this question ought to come under the consideration of the Committee, as well as the manner in which in one particular instance that power had been exercised. He confessed that he had heard with great astonishment the statement of the noble marquess that this document had disappeared from the records of the Board of Control. He had also heard with indignation of this attempt to make it a private letter. It was a public letter, written by a public man, on a matter of great public importance; and, as such, it was at last considered, owing to his remonstrances; for when he heard that only an extract from it had been sent to the Court, he got a distinct assurance,—he could not, without his papers, say whether it was from the Earl of Ripon or from his secretary (Mr. Waterfield),—that, though only an extract had been sent, the whole letter was recorded at the Board of Control. It was, indeed, marked "Most secret," but, nevertheless, it was a most grievous injustice to him if it had not been recorded.

(On the following day, Lord Lansdowne stated that he had received an intimation from the Board of Control, that, after much search, they had found among their records the letter of the noble earl in extenso, and in manuscript.)

PRESIDENT OF THE BOARD OF CONTROL.—The Queen has been pleased to direct letters patent to be passed under the Great Seal, appointing the Right Hon. John Charles Herries to be her Majesty's Commissioner for the Affairs of India.

PRESENTATIONS AT HER MAJESTY'S LEVEE.—The Queen held a levee (the first this season) on the 26th February, when the following were amongst the presentations:—

Lieut.-General D. Barr.
 Ensign M. G. Geneste, H.E.I.C. Engineers.
 Ensign D. Limond, ditto.
 Lieut.-Colonel J. MacDuff, St. Helena Reg.
 Lieut. F. J. Macfarlane, 9th Lancers.
 Ensign R. H. Oakes, H.E.I.C. Engineers.
 Lieut. Edmund Peavor, Indian Navy.
 Lieut. Sandwith, Bombay Army.
 Ensign R. S. Seloo, H.E.I.C. Engineers.
 Col. M. Soppitt, 26th Bombay Reg.
 Mr. Alexander James Trotter, Bengal Artillery.
 Ensign David Thomson, H.E.I.C. Engineers.
 Ensign W. R. Tucker, ditto.
 Lieut.-General Taylor, C.B., Madras Army.

At a second levee held by her Majesty on the 3rd March, the following were presented:—

Ensign J. Basevi, H.E.I.C. Engineers.
 Lieut. T. H. Bosworth, Bengal Artillery.
 Ensign E. P. Brownlow, H.E.I.C. Engineers.
 Lieut. R. W. Brett, Bombay Light Cavalry.

Lieut. D. J. P. Campbell.
 Lieut. J. W. Clarke.
 Capt. C. W. Thompson.
 Capt. Alfred Wrench.

THE GENERAL SCREW STEAM COMPANY met on the 3rd inst., when a dividend was declared at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum. The report stated that the progress of the undertaking was satisfactory. The chief points brought under consideration were the extension of the line to India, the loss of the Australian contract, and the publication of the accounts. The new service to India was encouragingly alluded to, as was also the proposed reduction of the shares from 100*l.* to 20*l.* each. The Government have given to the company a contract for a monthly Indian postal service, in extension of the line to the Cape, calling at Mauritius, Ceylon, and Calcutta. It will commence on the 15th of May, with the new iron screw steamer the Queen of the South, 1,750 tons, to be followed by the Lady Jocelyn, the Indiana, and the Calcutta, of 1,800 tons each.

COLS. PENNYCUICK AND CURTOM.—Her Majesty has given apartments in Hampton Court Palace to the widows of these gallant officers, who fell in the Sikh war.

THE AUSTRALIAN STEAM COMPANY.—The departure of the first vessel of the Australian Steam Company's line is fixed for the 3rd May, from Plymouth for Sydney, touching at the Cape of Good Hope, King George's Sound, Adelaide, and Port Phillip. She will have accommodation for 50 cabin passengers and 150 intermediate and steerage passengers, as well as for 300 tons of freight.

THE SHIPMENTS OF SPECIE by the Peninsular and Oriental steamer Ripon amount to 236,300*l.*; of this, 102,600*l.* is in gold, for Alexandria, Ceylon, and Singapore, and 133,700*l.* in silver, for Madras, Bombay, Calcutta, Hong Kong, and Canton.

EASTERN STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—The first annual meeting of this company was held on the 18th February, when the objects of the undertaking, the arrangements for its establishment, the grant of a Royal Charter, and the negotiations which the directors have kept up with the Government on the question of steam navigation to the East, were brought prominently under consideration. The statement of account showed an expenditure of only 1,472*l.* out of 5,006*l.*, the amount of subscribed preliminary deposits, leaving a balance of 3,534*l.* With regard to the late contract for Australia, via the Cape, and the pending contract for the India and China service, the directors remark:—"Soon after the last report on steam navigation had been issued, your directors resumed their negotiations with the Government, but the session of Parliament having been brought to a conclusion, unavoidable delay ensued until the autumn, when advertisements were issued, inviting tenders for an Australian line by screw vessels, via the Cape of Good Hope, to be sent in on the 4th December, and on the 26th February inst., for the India and China service, on a comprehensive and extended scale, embracing a communication with Sydney every second month, via Singapore. Your directors did not tender for the line via the Cape to Australia, as being beyond the range of the objects of this company; but they are prepared to tender for the services proposed by her Majesty's Government on the 26th inst."

COOLIES AND CHINESE LABOURERS IN GUIANA.—The ship Lucknow arrived at Georgetown, Demerara, on the 18th January, with 288 Coolies on board, from Calcutta. Not a single death occurred during the voyage. The Lucknow was to return forthwith to India with Coolies, whose five years' service in the colony had expired; after landing whom, she was to proceed to China to load with Chinese labourers for service in British Guiana. A committee had been appointed for treating with Coolies entitled to return passages, and disposed to relinquish their rights for bounties paid to them out of the colony chest.

INCREASE IN OUR EXPORT TRADE.—The official returns show that the increase in the declared value of our exports in 1851, as compared with 1850, has been no less than 2,757,212*l.*, the total amount in 1851 being 68,492,659*l.* against 65,735,447*l.* in 1850. The item in which there is the largest increase is that of cotton manufactures, which, notwithstanding the reduced value of the staple, increased 1,573,406*l.* The only articles in which there was a falling off are wool and woollen manufactures, but for which, the total increase would have exceeded three millions sterling!

THE MOVING DIORAMA OF HINDOSTAN.—We have already called attention to this Diorama, exhibited at the Asiatic Gallery, Baker Street Bazar. A further visit to it confirms our favourable appreciation of this series of most faithful pictures, which will remind those who have seen the originals of many a familiar scene and object, and will afford to those who have never been in India, truer and more distinct ideas of Indian scenery and Indian life than they can obtain from any other source whatever.

ENGAGEMENT OF SHIPS.—The Talavera has been engaged for the conveyance of troops and stores to Madras, and the Forfarshire for freight of stores to Bombay.

The Musnad of Ahmed ben Ayad al-Ashari records the following tradition of Abu Musa: "One day, I said to the khalif Omar, 'I have taken a Christian scribe into my service.'—'Why hast thou done that?' said he; 'God punish thee! Dost thou not understand the sense of this command of God: 'O thou who believest, take not for thy friends either Jews or Christians, for they who contract friendship with them will learn to resemble them.' Wherefore hast thou not employed a true believer?'—'Prince of the Faithful,' I replied, 'I employ this man only to write; I have nothing to do with his creed.'—'That is of little consequence,' returned Omar; 'I will never honour those whom God dishonours; I will never exalt those whom he has abased; and I will not suffer near me those whom he repels.'"

A MS. version of St. John's Gospel, in Ethiopic, has lately been found in the library bequeathed by Archbishop Tennison to the chapel founded by him in London. It is probably of the twelfth or thirteenth century, and is said to vary from the received version.

This Agency has been established for conducting Appeals from the Queen's and Company's Courts in Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, to her Majesty's Privy Council; for the preparation and presentment of Memorials to the East-India Company, to the Board of Control; for the realization of debts, legacies, rents, dividends, and other moneys and property recoverable from executors, trustees, and other parties resident in England, Ireland, and Scotland; for the prosecution and defence of actions and suits in Courts of Law and Equity; for preparing powers of attorney, deeds, wills, settlements, and other legal documents; for the superintendence and charge of estates in England, and for the general management and transaction of all matters in which the assistance, skill, integrity, and intelligence of professional men are desirable.

The Indian Branch of the Agency is carried on by Messrs. OEHNE and BARROW, Solicitors, Attorneys, and Proctors of her Majesty's Supreme Court at Calcutta.

The London Branch is conducted by Mr. W. D. H. OZME, as above, Solicitor and Attorney of the Courts of Chancery and Common Law, and a Member of the Incorporated Law Society of England.

Mr. OSMUN's professional connection and practice in England, where he was admitted an Attorney in 1831, and his long residence in India, where he has enjoyed very extensive practice as Solicitor, Attorney, and Proctor, peculiarly qualify him as an efficient Home Agent and Legal Adviser.

The usual course includes the Classics, Mathematics, and Modern Languages, by qualified resident masters; Drawing, Surveying, &c. &c. Terms, from 60 guineas, in proportion to the age.

For particulars, address "BETA," care of Messrs. Relfe and Fletcher, Stationers, 150, Aldersgate Street, City.

WATER CURE, BEN RHYDDING.

THE CELEBRATED WHARFDEALE HYDRO-PATHIC ESTABLISHMENT is now only 7 hours' distance from London, is 3 hours' distance from Harrogate, and 2½ from Fountains Abbey and Studley Park, 1½ from Leeds and Bradford, 2½ from Manchester and York, 3½ from Liverpool, and 7 miles' drive from Bolton Abbey, the beautiful seat of the Duke of Devonshire.

Physician to the establishment, Dr. WM. MACLEOD, Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, Edinburgh; Member of the Edinburgh Medico-Chirurgical Society; Honorary Member of the Royal Medical Society; formerly Lecturer on the Institutes of Medicine in the Argyle Square School of Medicine, Edinburgh; and Physician to the Royal Public Dispensary, &c. &c.

On a high eminence near the banks of the Wharfe stands this noble edifice; the extensive and varied scenery of the locality, with its salubrious springs and bracing air, have for centuries back rendered it a favourite place of resort for invalids. The Establishment, for its situation and completeness, is unrivalled in England. It was built expressly for the Water Cure treatment, at an expense of £30,000, and is provided with every convenience, comfort, and even luxury. The Estate, which has been elegantly laid out, consists of 65 acres of hilly and wooded pleasure-grounds. The Hotel, for the accommodation of friends of the patients, is complete in every department. Terms: Board, Lodging, Medical Attendance, &c. (including all servants), per week, £3. 6s.; Board and Lodging in the Hotel department (including all servants), per week, £2. 9s. Further particulars respecting coaches, &c., may be obtained of the House Steward, by letter addressed to him, Ben Rhydding, near Otley, Yorkshire. Dr. Macleod begs to refer those resident in India for further particulars of his establishment and method of treatment to his friend, Robert Browne, Esq., M.D., Superintending Surgeon of the Honourable East-India Company's Service, Dinapore, Bengal Presidency.

A SEARCH AFTER HEALTH, AND WHERE IT IS TO BE FOUND. A LETTER by a LIVERPOOL MERCHANT to his Brother Merchants, and to all who are labouring under the Great English Malady, the wear and tear of the system, or an over-wrought brain.
"The letter is written in a high tone of elation, because of a complete return to health.... He had consulted most of the eminent physicians at home and abroad; visited Harrogate, Buxton, &c., and the German Spas. All of no avail. At last he places himself under Dr. Macleod, at his palatial establishment of Ben Rhydding, from which, at the end of three months, he emerges completely cured."—Glasgow Citizen.

PHYSICIAN.—George Burrows, M.D., F.R.S., 18, Cavendish Square.

ACTUARY.—David Jones, Esq.

The principle adopted by the Universal Life Assurance Society, of an annual valuation of assets and liabilities, and a division of three-fourths of the profits among the assured, is admitted to offer great advantages, especially to those parties who may wish to appropriate their proportion of profit to the reduction of future premiums.

The following Table will show the result of the last division of profits, as declared on the 14th of May, 1851, to all persons who had on that day paid six annual premiums, being a reduction of 45 per cent. on the current annual premium. This will be found a most liberal reduction, if the original premiums be compared with those of other offices adopting a similar plan of division of profits:—

Age when Policy was issued.	Date of Policy.	Sum assured.	Original Premium.	Reduced Ann. Premium for current Year.
20		£1,000	£19 6 8	£10 12 8
30	On or before	1,000	24 8 4	13 8 7
40		1,000	31 10 0	17 6 6
50	14th of May,	1,000	43 15 0	23 10 3
60	1846.	1,000	66 11 8	36 12 5

* * * The attention of Gentlemen connected with India is particularly requested to the Regulations of this Society; as, on comparison with other offices, its terms will be found peculiarly advantageous, especially as regards the liberal plan adopted on the return of Indian Assurers to reside permanently in this country; and the Indian Rates have been calculated from extensive data and Tables exclusively in the possession of this Society, by which the true risk of life during residence in India has been most accurately ascertained.

DENT'S PATENT WATCHES AND CLOCKS.—

E. J. DENT begs leave to inform the public that, in addition to his extensive Stock of Chronometers, Watches, and Clocks, he has purchased most of the Watches manufactured in Switzerland for the purpose of the Exhibition of 1851. E. J. Dent, therefore, solicits an inspection of his Stock, amongst which is "The Smallest Watch in the World," that attracted so much curiosity and admiration whilst at the Exhibition. Ladies' Gold Watches, 8 guineas; Gentlemen's, 10 guineas. Youth's Silver Watches, 4 guineas; Durable-lever Watches, 6 guineas.—E. J. Dent, Watch and Clock-maker by appointment to the Queen, H.R.H. Prince Albert, and H.M. the Emperor of Russia, 61, Strand (late 83), 33, Cockspur Street, and 34, Royal Exchange (Clock-tower area).

FOR THE TEETH AND GUMS.—The first TOOTH

POWDER extant, both as to cleanliness in using and effectually realising beautiful teeth, is ROWLANDS' ODONTO, or Pearl Dentifrice.—During several years past, and at the present time, Rowland's Odonto, as a purifier, guardian, embellisher, and preserver of the teeth and gums, has been patronised (almost exclusively) by royalty and the nobility, and is now universally appreciated as possessing renovating qualities, unequalled by any dentifrice of the age. This justly-celebrated toilet appendage is a vegetable white powder of great brilliancy, and as cleanly in application as felicitous in result. As an anti-acribute it totally ejects defect, and renders the teeth and gums impervious to decay, from youth to age; it bestows the most radiant whiteness on the enamel, accompanied by a beautiful polish, which considerably adds to their beauty. At the same time, it will be found to thoroughly eradicate all tartar and concretion, remove spots of incipient decay, render the gums firm and red, fix loose teeth firmly in their sockets, and, above all, is distinguished for its aromatic influence in giving sweetness to the breath.

CAUTION.—The words, "ROWLANDS' ODONTO," are on the label. The Proprietors' name and address, thus,—"A. ROWLAND and SON, 30, Hatton Garden," are engraved on the Government stamp, which is affixed on each box. Sold by them, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS HAVE

AGAIN BEEN MOST EFFICACIOUS IN CURING A SORE LEG. John Thomas, a labourer, far advanced in years, residing at Pemmasen-back, Conway, had suffered for a very considerable time from a dreadful sore leg, and was for many months under the care of eminent medical men, but their remedies appeared perfectly useless. He then commenced using Holloway's Ointment and Pills, and after giving them a fair trial, his leg was completely cured, and the wound soundly healed. These medicines exceed all others in the cure of scrofula, or king's evil, glandular and other unnatural swellings, scurvy, leprosy, and all skin diseases.

Sold by all Druggists, and at Professor Holloway's establishment, 944, Strand, London; and by all European and Native vendors of medicine throughout the whole of the East Indies.

The Company book passengers, and receive goods and parcels as heretofore for CEYLON, MADRAS, CALCUTTA, PENANG, SINGAPORE, and HONG-KONG, by their steamers, starting from SOUTHAMPTON on the 20th of every month, and from SUEZ on or about the 8th of the month.

The next extra Steamer will be despatched from Southampton for Alexandria on the 3rd April next, in combination with an extra steamer, to leave Calcutta on or about the 20th March. Passengers may be booked, and goods and parcels forwarded by these extra steamers to or from SOUTHAMPTON, ALEXANDRIA, ADEN, CEYLON, MADRAS, and CALCUTTA.

BOMBAY.—The Company will book passengers throughout from SOUTHAMPTON to BOMBAY by their Steamers leaving England on the 20th February, 20th March, and of alternate months thereafter, such passengers being conveyed from ADEN to BOMBAY by their steamers appointed to leave BOMBAY on the 17th February, 1st April, and 1st of alternate months thereafter, and affording, in connection with the Steamers leaving CALCUTTA on the 8th February, 20th March, and of alternate months thereafter, direct conveyance for passengers, parcels, and goods, from BOMBAY and WESTERN INDIA.

Passengers for Bombay can also proceed by this Company's steamers of the 29th of the month to Malta, thence to Alexandria by her Majesty's steamers, and from Suez by the Honourable East-India Company's steamers.

MEDITERRANEAN.—MALTA.—On the 20th and 29th of every month. Constantinople.—On the 29th of the month. Alexandria.—On the 20th of the month. (The rates of passage-money on these lines have been materially reduced.)

SPAIN AND PORTUGAL.—Vigo, Oporto, Lisbon, Cadiz, and Gibraltar, on the 7th, 17th, and 27th of the month.

N.B. Steam-ships of the Company now ply direct between Calcutta, Penang, Singapore, and Hong-Kong, and between Hong-Kong and Shanghai.

For further information and tariffs of the Company's recently revised and reduced rates of passage money and freight, and for plans of the vessels, and to secure passages, &c., apply at the Company's offices, 122, Leadenhall-street, London, and Oriental-place, Southampton.

Siamese and Burmese civil year 1214, which began 2nd April, 1851, and their religious year 2394, which began 31st May, 1851.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE most important incident of the present mail's intelligence is the deposal and degradation of Ali Moorad Khan, the Ameer of Khyrpore, for reasons assigned in a proclamation issued by the Commissioner in Scinde, under the direction of the Supreme Government. It appears from this official document (which will be found in a succeeding page), that the Ameer had been guilty of fraud and forgery; that, after the fall of the Ameer of Hyderabad, the territory to be assigned to the "friendly" Ameer of Khyrpore was defined by the treaty of Nowshur, which was written on a leaf of a Korun, which he removed and destroyed, substituting another leaf, of a different tenor, whereby he obtained possession of several large districts, instead of villages of the same name, to the prejudice of the British Government, to which they lawfully belonged. This scandalous fraud, which should disgrace the perpetrator in the eyes of his co-religionists, the proclamation states, was established against the Ameer by clear and complete evidence, and, according to the Bombay Times, he ultimately admitted it! He has been most deservedly degraded from the rank of Rais, and all his lands and territories, excepting those hereditary possessions allotted to him by his father, Meer Sohrab Khan, are annexed to the British empire in India.

The quarrel with the Burmese remained in the same state as before. The Governor-General reached Calcutta by dawn from Benares on the night of the 29th of January, and next morning resumed his seat as President of the Council of India. "It is an amusing incident in the history of British India," observes the Friend of India, "that, just at the time when the authorities at home are said to have sanctioned the removal of the Government of India to Simlah, on the ground of its being the most central position in the British empire in the East, the Governor-General should be constrained to come down post haste to superintend military operations at the distance of 1,660 miles from that most central of all stations." His Lordship is said to have approved generally of the proceedings of Commodore Lambert, excepting (it is added) his removal of the Burmese vessel of war, upon the supposition, probably, that that act led to the hostilities. This, however, appears not to have been the fact. The Governor told the Commodore that, if he attempted to remove British property from Rangoon, he would be assailed from the stockades; the Commodore replied, that if so much as a pistol were discharged at him, he would level the stockades,—and accordingly, when attacked, he kept his word. The Governor-General is said to be most anxious to avoid a war, if possible.

There is a strong impression in some quarters that the affair, if not further exasperated, will blow over. A large number of troops had been collected about Rangoon; but it is reported that the upper portion of the valley of the Irrawaddy was tranquil, and that, in the districts around Amerapoor, there were no preparations for war. Accounts from Moulmain state that the Line-Myoothoo-Gee was in irons for failing to recapture the King's ship; that all the houses in old Rangoon had been razed to the ground, and the inhabitants removed to Oakahlabat, the new town; that 200 men were killed by the Fox and steamers at the stockade affair, and that the new town was being doubly stockaded with the wooden materials from the houses destroyed at Rangoon. Reinforcements and munitions were meanwhile being despatched in abundance to our settlements on the frontier, and every preparation was making to repel assault, revenge insult, or enter on hostilities if necessary. The arrangements made to reinforce Arracan had given great satisfaction to the mercantile community of Calcutta, who have been under serious apprehensions for their property on the east side of the Bay.

The intelligence from Peshawur informs us that the hill-men continue their system of annoyance. Some troopers of the 7th Light Cavalry, returning from Kohat, were attacked between Muttanee and the Pass by a party of Afreedees, and deprived of their horses and arms. Two sergeants had also been fired at whilst riding along the Kohat road.

The Momunds appear by no means disposed to come to terms with us, though they continue to make all sorts of absurd propositions. The preliminary condition on which they insist, is the demolition of the fort of Dubb. On the 20th January Saadut Khan ventured to reconnoitre Sir Colin's position, but from a very respectful distance. On the 23rd some of his horsemen approached our out-lying picquets so close as to be easily counted by the latter. They kept well out of shot, however, and passed between the picquets and the hills, their retreat being covered by some two or three hundred foot-men stationed on the hill above, but they were allowed to go unmolested.

Dureea Khan, a Momund of the Duwizye tribe, is one of the chief troublers of the peace in that neighbourhood. He is the son of a chief named Sutar Khan, who was put to death by Shah Zuman; he was reinstated in his father's possessions by Kooshyal Singh, and remained on friendly terms with the Sikhs until after the departure of Avitabile, when he secretly attached himself to Dost Mahommed. The Sikhs becoming aware of this, attempted to seize him, but he escaped to Cabul, and received from the Ameer the jagheers of the Damaun-i-Sufed Koh. When the Dost fell into the hands of the British, the Khan took refuge at Tээрh, where he remained about a year; thence he went to Khost, and only returned to his native hills after our first occupation of Lahore. Since then he has steadily done his best to annoy us, and our politicals are utterly incapable of taking adequate measures for the suppression of his band of freebooters and assassins.

Colonel Mackeson has succeeded in capturing three of the Urbabs of Teekal, who committed a murder some eight months since, and fled to the hills. He has also seized Ameen Khan and Muejed Khan, the present Urbabs, in consequence of their having been found intriguing with our enemies, as usual; in fact, "eating our salt," and playing us false.

On the 25th January, a skirmish took place near Dubb. Thirty or forty sowars of the 15th irregulars were attacked by a body of Momunds; they defended themselves gallantly, and succeeded in killing five of the enemy, with the loss of only one man wounded on their own side. Captain Hicks, of the 15th irregulars, commanding the fort, sallied out with a resallah, and two companies of the 71st N.I.; but as soon as the valiant Momunds saw the little force advancing, they made good their retreat. "This border warfare," observes the Bombay Telegraph, "may last for years, and may at last embroil us with the Affghans. It is in that quarter, probably, that hostilities on a large scale will next be conducted in India. Such is the opinion we hear expressed by officers well acquainted with the Affghan-Punjabes frontier."

The Delhi Gazette, referring to its intelligence from Herat, says: "It is now certain that 12,000 Persians have arrived from Meshed to aid the Alikzyes in beleaguering the citadel in which the son of Yar Mohammed Khan still remains shut up. The name of the Persian general who is at the head of this army is unknown to us, but we hear that he is the governor of Khorassan, and son of the late Abbas Mirza. Fifteen years have now elapsed since Pottinger's defence of Herat against the late King of Persia. There is every chance this time of the success of the Kajars, who have taken advantage of the disunion and anarchy existing in Herat since Yar Mohammed's death, and have just stepped in good time between the contending parties; they are ostensibly the restorers of Atta Mohammed's sons, but there is very little doubt that they will annex Herat to their dominions in the event of success, of which there is every probability."

The accounts from Oude say, that one good effect of the late remonstrance to the king by the British Government has been made manifest, in a payment of ten months' salary to his servants and troops. A letter from the Englishman's correspondent at Lucknow furnishes some further particulars concerning the plot against the resident. The writer adds:—

"The king is a poor weak imbecile; he is, in a political point of view, a mere cipher. His nearest relations are literally starving, and have scarcely a decent suit of clothes to put on, while the worthless employés of the minister appropriate all the revenues that are collected. So abject is the wretchedness these poor people bear, that many of them threaten to put an end to their misery by poisoning themselves. Indeed, I suspect that it is the object of the minister's creatures to bring such occurrences about, as this would be the easiest method of liquidating their debts."

No change had taken place in the Nizam's dominions, except that a pecuniary windfall, by the death of an uncle, had recruited the Nizam's exchequer, which may enable him to pay up another instalment of the debt. The Madras Spectator gives the following particulars of this happy event:—

"Akbar Jah, the uncle of the Nizam, died on the 31st January. He has a son, but his wealth, already put under seal, will be sequestered by the Nizam. There are circumstances which would vindicate the escheat although the deceased had not of himself assigned the property to the Nizam, which he is reported to have done. Rumour attributes an immense hoard to him in specie and bullion, as well as in jewels. It is reckoned by crores; but the Nizam may be satisfied if he obtain twenty-five or even twenty lacs of good transferable property."

The Bombay journals state that there has been something like a rebellion in the Portuguese territories of Goa, occasioned, it is said, by resistance to some unpopular taxes lately imposed by the governor. "The troops were called out, and some bloodshed ensued, and it was supposed at one time that assistance would be required from us by the Goanese authorities; their own army amounting in all to about 2,000, and of these 1,000 are now in the field."

From China we learn that the rebellion continued in the Kwang provinces, and that Seu, the governor-general of Canton, was besieged by the insurgents in the city of Kew-chow-foo.

The recent advices from the Cape of Good Hope are highly favourable. It is a little remarkable that this happy turn of affairs should be contemporaneous with the supersession of Sir Harry Smith by the late Colonial Secretary, for lack of "foresight, energy, and judgment."

BENGAL. BURMAH.

THE Enterprise steamer arrived from Moulmein on Saturday, after having called at the blockading station at the mouth of the Rangoon river and Bassein, as well as at Arracan. No attempt has been made to attack Moulmein, but a considerable body of troops was assembled on the opposite bank at Martaban, to whom Col. Bogle was prepared to give a warm reception. No authentic intelligence has been received of the proceedings of the governor of Rangoon subsequently to the engagements at the stockade. Our vessels of war were at the mouth of the river, forty miles below the town; but it was currently, if not confidently reported, that some of the refugees, who had been so foolish as to return on the promise of protection, had been immediately thrown into prison; that all the property left by British subjects when they embarked, at the request of the commodore, had been confiscated, and that the governor had erected a strong stockade, at a comfortable distance from the river, and beyond the reach of a broadside from our vessels of war, to which he had constrained the inhabitants of the old town of Rangoon to remove; that town had thus become a desert. Rumours reached Calcutta about a fortnight ago, that a Burmese force was concentrated at Theong, with the intention of pouring down on the province of Arracan, and the 67th Regt. N.I. was dispatched from Barrackpore in all haste to protect it, on board the Precursor steamer. By the Enterprise we have authentic intelligence that this province was at the latest date in a state of profound tranquillity, and as yet totally free from all anxiety. An officer had been deputed to the Aeng Pass, in the heart of the Zama mountains, which separate Arracan from the basin of the Irrawaddy, and he saw traffic going on as briskly as ever. Many Burmese and Shan merchants were passing and repassing it with their cattle, laden with merchandise, as though nothing had happened, or was likely to happen. It was evident from the statement of the traders, that the upper portion of the valley of the Irrawaddy was undisturbed by orders of any kind from the Burmese government, and that in the districts around Amerapora there was neither rumour of war, nor preparation for it. The despatch of the 67th was notwithstanding a wise measure. It places an important province, the seat of industry and commerce, in a state of security.

The notice we gave last week regarding the seizure of the Burmese frigate, as she is called, has been fully corroborated by subsequent letters. From what has appeared in the papers there seems to be a strong disposition to throw the blame of the war, if we should be engaged in one, on this act, and every circumstance connected with it must, therefore, be considered important. The vessel was taken possession of after the deputation from the commodore had been so grossly insulted, and British subjects had been obliged to leave nearly all their property at the mercy of the Burmese, and seek refuge on board our ships. The commodore, the next day, conveyed information to the governor, that if he apologised for the insult he had offered, the vessel would be restored, and pacific negotiations resumed. But no apology was sent. The Dalla governor, who came on board the flag-ship, entreated time to enable him to wait on the Woongee at Rangoon, and incline him to an accommodation. The only result of this effort was the reply received by the commodore from that personage, to the effect that if a single vessel attempted to move down the river, it would be fired on from the stockades. The commodore replied, that if even a pistol was fired, he would level the stockades with the ground, and he was true to his word. The governor did not state that the commodore would not be permitted to pass the stockades with the king's ship, but that he would be fired on if he attempted to remove any British property. There is, therefore, every reason to believe that if the royal vessel had not been touched, the stockades would equally have opened a fire on our vessels, as they passed down the river.—Friend of India, Feb. 15.

Troops are being despatched from Calcutta to the British provinces lying adjacent to the Burmese kingdom. On the 25th January, at which time H.M. S. Fox was enforcing the blockade of Rangoon river, the governor of Pegu sent down a flag of truce with an inquiry about "news;" rather a cool proceeding on his part, considering what he had done and was doing. The head man of his deputation reported that the old town of Rangoon had been burned by order of the governor, and that the new one was strongly fortified. The new town was founded by Tharavaddy, not many years since, and a large mud fort built, about a mile and a half inland from the old site. To this spot, all Burman subjects were ordered to repair, and old Rangoon thus became but the port of the Burman town, having chiefly, if not wholly, a motley foreign population. In destroying it, therefore, the viceroy doubtless aimed as much at injury to the outside barbarians, whose loss of property, timber, unfinished craft, &c., must be great, as at the levelling of what might have been a shelter to his foes. Large quantities of timber, much of it half burnt, were seen floating down past the British vessels at the mouth of the river, and in some instances recognized by parties to whom it had belonged. These, being seized, were put on board the prize ship, for the use of the Crown. Fresh claims to compensation have consequently arisen; and as money is what the Burmese have least ability and inclination to part with, it follows that they have an additional motive to hazard a war. Everything looks, indeed, as though they were at present bent on doing so. Large numbers of Burmese troops had reached Rangoon from the upper provinces, but food for them was said to be growing scarce. The blockade already severely affected the poor classes, and to add to their distress, the cholera had broken out. Report spoke of its ravages as extensive among the natives and Armenians; and famine will no doubt cause the disease to spread, unless the rivers be shortly reopened. That event, however, is indefinitely distant. Commodore Lambert, in the Hermes, reached the Rangoon river on the 27th January, but bore no news or directions from the capital, the council having been unable to act during the absence of its head. The British squadron in the Burmese waters was expected to regain its former strength, by the arrival of the steamers Tennasserim and Phlegethon. The Hermes was to proceed to the mouth of the Pegu river, to institute a blockade there also. She called at the Bassein river, and saw the Serpent so employed in that quarter.

The latest news is that conveyed by the Precursor steamer, which reached Calcutta on the 6th February from Kyook Phyo in Arracan, where she had landed above 1,000 European and native soldiers. A person on board of her thus writes:—"All we heard reported at Kyook Phyo was that the Burmese king had given leave to his subjects to act as they pleased towards the English, and that 1,400 robbers were ready to come down upon the English settlements when they had a favourable opportunity; also, that the king was prepared in the neighbourhood with 20,000 troops, all equipped with muskets, to invade our territory. I received this as a mere unauthenticated report, and I give it to you as such."—Bombay Telegraph, Feb. 17.

DEPOSAL OF ALI MOORAD KHAN.

Proclamation.—The government of India had long seen cause to believe that His Highness Meer Ali Moorad, Khan of Khyrpore, by acts of forgery and fraud, had deprived the British Government of Territory in India, to which it was lawfully entitled. Reluctant to condemn the Ameer unless upon the clearest proof of his personal guilt, the government of India directed that a full and public enquiry should be made into the charges that had been brought against him. His Highness attended the enquiry in person. Every opportunity was afforded of eliciting the truth, and of establishing His Highness's innocence of the crime of which he had been accused.

His Highness Meer Ali Moorad Khan entirely failed to rebut the charge. On clear and complete evidence, he was convicted of having destroyed a leaf of the Koran on which the treaty of Nownabur was written, and of having substituted for it another leaf of a different tenor, whereby His Highness fraudulently obtained possession of several large districts instead of villages of the same name, greatly to the prejudice of the British Government, to which the said districts lawfully belonged, and in gross violation of good faith and honour.

The Government of India sought no pretext to interfere with the possessions of His Highness Meer Ali Moorad Khan. It desired that His Highness should continue to rule the territories he held in peace and security, and it was slow to entertain and urge against His Highness accusations which placed in jeopardy his reputation, and authority; but the ameer's guilt has been proved. The Government of India will not permit His Highness Meer Ali Moorad Khan to escape with impunity, and a great public crime to remain unpunished.

Wherefore the Government of India has resolved, and hereby declares, that Meer Ali Moorad Khan of Khyrpore is degraded from the rank of rais; and that all his lands and territories, excepting those hereditary possessions only which were allotted to him by his father Meer Sobrah Khan, shall henceforth be a portion of the British empire in India.

The inhabitants of those territories are hereby called upon to submit themselves peaceably to the dominion under which they have passed,—in full reliance that they will be defended against their enemies and protected from harm, and that, unmolested in their persons, in their property and their homes, they will be governed with just and mild authority.

By order of the most noble the Governor-General of India.

H. B. E. FRERE,

Commissioner in Scinde.

Camp near Roosa, 21st Jan., 1852.

THE SANITARY STATE OF BRITISH INDIA.

Whilst civilized man, throughout the world, has brought his highest faculties to bear upon the adaptation of natural products to his wants and wishes; whilst sage and savage, each in his own degree, have separately, from the earliest ages, toiled to find a remedy for bodily disease, the heritage of their common fall;—the conviction, amongst educated nations, of the possibility of not alone subduing but actually warding off its inroads, is but newly awakened, and even now the question of its truth trembles in the mental balance of not an inconsiderable number. It is ever the law of mind to disbelieve all evils imperfectly understood.

Sanitary reform labours under the disadvantage of dealing with mal-influences, which speak not for themselves, but require to be long and sedulously studied, ere their distinct and undeniable relation to disease be recognized. Now that the light of full intelligence is breaking on the public mind, the ignorance of past ages is inexplicable. Air, light, and water, the very elements of life and health, have been systematically, it would appear, excluded from the doomed inhabitants of large cities; whilst plague and pestilence, sweeping away their tens of thousands in the prime of life, have come in vain, as far as any practically operative warning was concerned. Civilization, unaccompanied by sanitary knowledge, has played an evil part. The high pressure of commercial activity in England, combined with want, has forced into the industrial classes a child-population, who, instead of obtaining purity of mind and healthiness of body in open fields, have been condemned to doubtful companionship, to weakened power, retarded growth, and imperfect development of mind and body, by a system of precocious labour in close, unhealthy factories. Nor does the evil end with this. A deteriorated race begets a like progeny; and thus, by slow degrees, the stout yeoman, filtered through successive generations, rises to the surface a crippled, mindless man.

If the injurious conditions we have thus so lightly touched upon be fatal to life and health in ordinary times, how must their influence become enhanced during any epidemic constitution of the air—when the angel of death hovers above and around us, thrusting his fiery torch into every spot in which the neglect of nature's laws has suffered to accumulate the fuel appropriate to its flame! If this be true of England, where, with happily rare exceptions, a wide-spread pestilence is now unknown, and where a recently-awakened Government, aided by scientific minds, is putting forth all its strength to crush the Hydra, what shall we say of India, our present theme—a land where death rides rampant, trampling an untold number of victims beneath his courier's heels with each successive year? Here no breathing time is given. Epidemics prevail at all and every season: sometimes acquiring a maximum of destructive power; at others, sinking to a point which still in western nations would be viewed with horror and affright. And how has this been remedied? What steps have been taken to protect the people over whom we rule, to save ourselves, and to circle with a fence those whose lives are dearer to us than our own, against the fell destroyer? Absolutely next to nothing. With the exception of Calcutta (for we limit our remarks to the presidency of Bengal, although little doubting their applicability to the subordinate governments), our Indian towns remain unchanged from what they were two thousand years ago.

Deeply impressed ourselves with the truth of all that has been urged by sanitary writers, we cite their testimony, in conjunction with our own experience, to impress upon the rulers of this land the absolute and urgent necessity of putting into force, without delay, a system of reform which shall gradually purge the country of physical ills. A more extended knowledge of the subject will demonstrate that these are not confined to Hindustan, but constitute a nucleus and nursery for that plague which never dies with us—the cholera—and which seems destined, whilst we remain indifferent, to burst its bound with each decade of years, and roll a flood-tide of death and desolation over Europe, than which the lava-stream of thousands of volcanoes would be less destructive.—Calcutta Review.

THE LATE SIR WILLIAM MACNAGHTEN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE FRIEND OF INDIA.

Dear Mr. Editor,—My stock of the English knowledge is so poor, that I cannot properly reveal my feelings of indignation and astonishment at the most unfair and cruel manner in which my name has been handled by the two public journals, viz. the Calcutta Review of January, 1851; and the Friend of India of 3rd July. Nor do I possess abilities to parade myself in public papers.

I have not read the former publication myself, but from what I have read in the Friend of India, I see that the reviewer is as cruel in his unjust and groundless attacks upon the late Sir William Macnaghten, as the writer of the article in the Friend of India is mercilessly resolved to heap all sorts of odium on my head. The information and the proofs which the reviewer brings forward to throw light on his groundless accusations on the bright character of Sir William Macnaghten, seem to have reached him (reviewer) from the sources prejudicial to the late Envoy and his subordinates. On my part, I solemnly declare and say that I know nothing of the reviewer. In fact, I have never read the Calcutta Review in my life; nor have I ever held any conversation on the Cabool affairs with any officer privately in India or England. As far as the writer of the article in the Friend of India proceeds in defending the memory of the late Envoy, I heartily agree with him. He was my best friend and a noblest patron from the time he was secretary to Lord William Bentinck.

The report of Sir William Macnaghten's authorizing me or any one else to employ assassins against the rebel chiefs, is a tissue of bare falsehood. To authorize or approve anything of the kind was below his generous temper, and far from his pure principles. I have said this in my official document, dated so far back as the 28th May, 1843, which I showed to the Hon. Mr. Erskine at Simla in 1847, with its accompanying letter from the Government. This gentleman, having read both the documents, expressed his satisfaction, adding that I was unjustly blamed, and I believe that he related the whole contents of the documents to Lord Hardinge.

The words which have poured from the pen of the writer of the article in the Friend of India against me as "treacherous plotter," "cheating Government," "to impose on the Court of Directors to secure the sum of Rs. 4,000," bid fair that he is maliciously resolved to injure me, and is my bitter enemy. I have never asked any money from the Court of Directors nor have they given me any, excepting their own gift and the payment of certain Cabool accounts which were forwarded by the Government.

I never did anything in Cabool, before or after the insurrection broke out, which was not published by the authority of my political superiors. Hence it is evident that every word of the writer of the article in the Friend of India regarding my conduct in the affairs of Cabbol, is the creature of his malignant heart and bent to make me a victim of his spiteful bosom.

Yours obediently,

MOHUN LALL.

THE LONDON MAIL of Dec. 24th arrived at Calcutta, on Feb. 1st, per Oriental.

LIEUT. BOULNOIS.—It seems that the recovery of Lieut. Boulnois remains involved the expenditure of Rs. 100, and even then they were brought in headless; the head having been sent by the murderers to Lalpoor, as a suitable offering to their chief, Saadut Khan. The ruffian who took the head is said to have received a handsome reward, and another of the villainous gang received twenty rupees on presenting the deceased officer's cap and signet ring.—Delhi Gaz. Feb. 7.

LANGUAGE USED IN THE COMPANY'S COURTS.—A memorial has been presented to the Government by certain native inhabitants of Bengal, urging that the Hindue, as a medium of communication between the judge and the vakeel, be prohibited in the Mofussil Courts of Justice in Bengal, and that English and Bengallee be substituted in its stead. They allege that the profession of the law, arduous of itself, is rendered more difficult by the vakeel being obliged to plead in a foreign tongue, which is one cause of the inefficient state of the Bar of the Mofussil Courts; that, in the Sudder Dewanny Adawlut, the pleaders employ English, and the written proceedings in all the native Courts are in Bengallee, and that some of them cannot be correctly rendered into Hindostanee; that the proposed alteration had been successfully tried by Mr. Mytton, late judge of the 24-Pergunnahs, and that it will not be productive of any inconvenience to private individuals, inasmuch as all vakeels are now required to know Bengallee. The Friend of India, with reference to this memorial, says:—"We have always been among the most strenuous advocates of the exclusive use of Bengallee in the Courts in this province; but we cannot admit that it is altogether judicious or just to banish the Hindostanee medium of communication at once from all the Civil Courts. All the judges now occupying the Civil bench in the Courts of Bengal left the college before the substitution of Bengallee for Hindostanee was sanctioned by Government, and we question whether a third of them are sufficiently masters of it. Mr. Mytton is an accomplished Bengallee scholar; but he is the exception, rather than the rule, of the higher branches of the service. We think the cause of justice and equity would suffer from the abrupt exclusion of a language which is familiar to the judge on the bench, and to the pleaders at the bar, and to all the ministerial officers of the Court. As regards the Criminal Courts, however, the case is different. All the magistrates have been declared by the College of Fort William qualified for the public service by their knowledge of Bengallee, and they are, or ought to be, perfectly familiar with it. Government might, with the utmost propriety, insist at once upon the banishment of Hindostanee from the Magistrates' Courts, and we question whether there are more than four or five who would thereby be placed in a disadvantageous position."

REVENUE OF BENGAL.—A table of the comparative revenue and charges of the Bengal Government for the years from 1848-49 to 1850-51 shows that the total receipts of 1850-51 were less than those of the previous year by Rs. 74,83,869, of which deficit upwards of 68 lakhs are in the item of opium, and nearly 25 lakhs in salt. In customs' receipts, an increase is noted of nearly 16 lakhs; and the land revenue, abkarnae, sayer, &c., show an increase. The post-office expenditure exceeded its receipts by Rs. 13,170. The receipts from the marine department fall short of the disbursements by nearly 12 lakhs of rupees. The expenditure in the general, judicial, customs, opium, and several other departments, has increased. The total receipts during the three years were respectively Rs. 9,81,78,370, Rs. 10,72,65,478, and Rs. 9,97,81,609; the disbursements, Rs. 3,72,43,630, Rs. 3,58,48,001, and Rs. 3,67,70,826.

A MORMONITE ELDER, named William Wilkes, who has recently arrived in Calcutta, has addressed a letter to the Citizen, stating that he had already baptized three Europeans, and expected to baptize six natives on the 25th January.

ROMAN CATHOLIC BISHOPS.—The Bengal Catholic Herald, in an article upon the spread of the Roman Catholic faith in India, says, that in the year 1836, there were only seven bishops of that church in all India, including Ava and Pegu, and there are now nineteen.

RESIDENT AT CASHMERE.—The Lahore Chronicle informs us, that the project of appointing a resident in Cashmere has resolved itself into a year's leave on sick certificate to Major Mac Gregor. That officer is permitted to draw his full pay in the Hills for twelve months, on condition of his performing certain duties at the court of the maharajah. The leave will probably be extended should it ultimately be found necessary. This is the least invidious mode of appointing a political resident in Cashmere.

SUTTEE AT PACHETE.—The Englishman furnishes a few more particulars respecting the reported suttee at Pachete. It is said that the murder was perpetrated within the enclosure of the rajah's residence, and that when it was over, some palkees were sent on to Cutwa to keep up the impression, that the funeral shroud was to be performed on the river side. The ranee had for some time previously been at feud with her son, who had assumed the management of the estates contrary to her desire.

COMMISSION TO CHANDERNAGORE.—The Morning Chronicle reports that Government have appointed Major Baker, and Messrs. Wauchope and Chapman, commissioners to meet the commission appointed by the French authorities at Chandernagore, to settle the exact boundaries of their respective territories. The frontier of the settlement, it seems, includes a tract of debatable land, which is claimed by both parties, and which is wanted for the purposes of the rail.

BULLOCK TRAIN.—The Delhi Gazette mentions that Mr. Brown, of Delhi, intends to establish a bullock train between Calcutta and Allahabad, to join the one which already connects the latter city with Lahore. Heavy goods could thus be conveyed between Calcutta and the Punjab in thirty-four days.

CALUMNY AGAINST A NATIVE OFFICIAL.—A correspondent of the Englishman, probably a native, publishes a letter concerning the misdeeds of the Moonisiff of Nysera, who has just been appointed Sadder Ameen of Serampore. The letter commences with the assertion that "the people of this zillah have become sick of the Moonisiff of Nysera," and continues by charging him with gross injustice in the decision of a suit. We think it is rather hard that the character of a worthy officer should be slandered away in this fashion, merely because he is a native. Duragprasad Ghose, the moonisiff in question, acted for some months as moonisiff of Serampore, to the satisfaction of all classes of the community, and his permanent appointment to the station, has added immensely to the popularity of Government. Yet some fellow, whose claim he was obliged to reject, is permitted to come forward and slander him in the most unjust manner, in one of the influential papers of the metropolis.—Friend of India, Jan. 29.

THE "KELSO."—The Calcutta journals announce the destruction of the ship Kelso, by fire, on the 24th Jan. She took fire when lying in the harbour, from some mismanagement in smoking her to destroy rats, and the combustible nature of the cargo, consisting chiefly of 7,000 maunds of salt, caused the flames to spread with fearful rapidity.

REMEDY FOR CHOLERA.—The Citizen states, that Dr. G. J. Berwick, in charge of the station at Dum-Dum, has discovered a remedy for cholera in quinine. Having observed the remarkable similarity between the symptoms of jungle fever and cholera, he resolved to administer the same remedy in the latter disease, which he had found so effectual in the former, and his practice has been attended with marked success.

AUSTRALIAN PRODUCE.—The Samuel Boddington, from South Australia, brought to Calcutta fifty-eight horses of good breed, twenty-five fine dogs, and two hundred tons of copper ingots, from the smelting works at Adelaide, the largest shipment of Australian copper yet received in India.

THE AGRA BANK.—The Supreme Court, on the 3rd February, passed an order for the registration of the Agra Bank under Act 43 of 1850, deciding that the Act was applicable to banks or other companies having branches or agencies in other presidencies or in England, and intimating that, where there are branches in distinct presidencies, the company ought to be registered in the particular presidency only where the head office is situated.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.—The Citizen apologizes to the Governor-General for the rudeness shown him by the congregation of St. Paul's Cathedral on Sunday, the 1st February,—in that they not only actually did not allow his lordship to pass out after service before they moved from their seats, but crowded on him and his staff as if they were 'nobody,'—by stating that his lordship's long absence from the city of palaces had caused the good people to forget him!

CHARGE OF BRIBERY.—Ferozepore, Jan. 30.—“A court of inquiry has been sitting for some days past on the complaint of numerous Bunees against the kotwal. He was charged with accepting bribes to an enormous amount, but nothing can be proved against him hitherto. A great sensation has been created here by the sight of monster placards (affixed to various gateways during the night), accusing in no measured terms the bazar authorities of league and connivance at dishonesty.”—Delhi Gaz., Feb. 4.

THE FREE TRADE LAW SYSTEM, pursued in the Small Cause Court of Calcutta, is sometimes productive of rather amusing results. In a case brought up before Mr. Brietzke, the defendant was represented by his son, a boy of ten years of age, who pleaded his father's cause in set legal terms, and won it. The plaintiff was a khidmutgar, who sued for wages, which the juvenile pleader contended he had forfeited by absconding.

CAPTAIN YATES, military secretary to the Commander-in-Chief, has had a fall from his horse, by which he has sustained considerable injury.—Delhi Gaz.

AN EARTHQUAKE, on the 26th January, was felt at Ferozepore, Umballa, Lahore, and Peshawar, betwixt 5 and 6 A.M., within forty minutes of time, the most severe shocks occurring at the two latter places.

A MINERAL SPRING has been discovered by Dr. Paskett, surgeon of the Commander-in-Chief, near Rotas, the water of which is said to possess healing virtues of rare excellence.

THE UNCOVENANTED.—There are at this moment, we are told, no fewer than ten vacancies in the canal department, which will have to be supplied by officers at present with their regiments. Now, it so happens that there is already the full complement, allowed by the Court of Directors, absent from most corps, and consequently the selection must be made from among a comparatively small number. The natural result will be to remove from their regiments ten more officers distinguished for their superior abilities or application, and thus one branch of the public service will suffer in the exact ratio in which the other is benefited. But, after all, is it so very certain that military men are required to superintend the progress of the works? Could not this duty be equally well discharged by men of peace, employed as uncovenanted servants of the government? The staff allowances amount, we believe, to two hundred rupees a month, for which sum paid as a regular fixed salary there can be little doubt that fully competent persons might be found for an employment of this nature.—Delhi Gaz., Jan. 28.

THE CIVIL FUND.—The subscribers of the Bengal Civil Fund have found that the rate at which they marry has overtaken and outrun the rate at which they have hitherto contributed towards the fund for the support of their wives and children. Of the 499 members of the service, who look forward to the fund for a provision for their actual or probable families, we find that all but one half (248) are married, and the great increase of wives and children has rendered a revision of the scale of contribution absolutely necessary. The actuaries were consulted, and one of them (Mr. Griffith Davies) has expressed his opinion that the state of the fund must be considered unsound unless the subscriptions be increased. A committee, consisting of Messrs. E. Currie, J. P. Grant, and Cecil Beadon, have drawn up a report, in which they generally coincide (with exceptions) in the recommendations of Mr. Davies, and submit a draft of revised rules calculated to meet the present and future exigencies of the fund, whereby a married subscriber, with three sons and three daughters, will be called upon to pay, from the 1st of April, 1852, until further notice, the sum of Rs. 6. and 2 as. on every hundred of his income.—Lahore Chronicle, Feb. 7.

RESUMPTIONS.—The British-Indian Association have petitioned against resumptions made contrary to the rule of limitation. We understand it has been hinted to the petitioners that, if they persist in pressing their claim, it may perhaps be conceded, but that provision must be made for its liquidation out of their own pockets, in the shape of a land or income tax.—Englishman, Feb. 7.

COURTS-MARTIAL.—Private letters from Cawnpore inform us that the fracas which took place a short time ago at one of the messes is likely to end in more than one court-martial.—Delhi Gaz.

THE 26TH L. I.—We have been requested on behalf the officers of the 26th L.I. to deny in the most positive manner the truth of the aspersions cast upon that distinguished regiment by the author of “A History of the War in Afghanistan.”

JOTEE PERSAUD.—It is asserted that orders have been given by Lord Dalhousie that, as soon as possible after his arrival in Calcutta, the accounts of Jotee Persaud shall be submitted to him and a final settlement of his business be come to.

MR. HENRY LUSHINGTON has accepted the bonus, and retires immediately from the Hon. Company's civil service.—Delhi Gazette.

ON-DUTY.—It is understood that the 40th Regiment N. I. (volunteer corps) have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness to move down to the Presidency by water, as they will in all probability accompany the 67th N. I. to Arracan. It is also said that the 54th take the place of the 40th N. I. at Allahabad, and do not therefore move on to Allypore. If the 54th remain at Allahabad, it is expected that the wing of the 6th N. I., now at Allypore, will remain stationary, as the services of an entire regiment are not required at that station.—Col. Stuart retires from his office of military secretary to the Government of India. Col. Birch, now judge advocate general, is to succeed Col. Stuart, but rumour has not named Col. Birch's successor.—On the promotion of Mr. A. Ross, superintendent of the Deyrah Dhoon, Mr. E. Thomas, under secretary foreign department, will proceed to take charge of that appointment.—It is rumoured that Mr. E. Tyler goes to Allahabad as judge.—Col. Cumberland, commanding H. M. 96th regiment, will, in consequence of serious indisposition, be under the necessity of leaving India.—Lieut. George Moir, of the artillery, is likely to be appointed to one of the batteries at Gwalior.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

RETURN OF THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

Fort William, Jan. 30.—With reference to the proclamation of 15th April, 1850, it is hereby notified, for general information, that the Most Noble the Marquis of Dalhousie, K. T., Gov. Gen. of India, having returned to the presidency, has this day resumed the seat of President of the Council of India.

MUSTACHIOS.

Head-Quarters, Camp, Pucka Serai, Jan. 21, 1852.—In view to establish uniformity of appearance between the European and native ranks of regiments of the native army, the Commander-in-Chief is pleased to direct that mustachios be worn by all European commissioned and non-commissioned officers actually serving with native corps, of whatever branch of the service.

Officers detached from their regiments on permanent staff, or other employ, are permitted to follow their own pleasure in the matter referred to.

MADRAS.

THE MOPLAH OUTBREAK.

The following additional particulars of this affray are given in letters published in the Calcutta Englishman. "The news of our soldiers coming down to meet them having reached the rioters, they (125 in number) dispersed themselves into different parts of the district, and there can be no doubt have deserted the province. There were, however, about a score who determined upon having a fight with the 'Kaffirs.' With this intention, they proceeded to the residence of an opulent native, a Nair, named Calliat Annandan, intending to murder all whom they could find in it, and to burn down the house; but the Nair had prepared for the rencontre, by assembling a body of about 150 of his agriculturists, well armed with guns, swords, &c., and thus when the mob rushed in, the overpowering force of the Nair settled the whole of them in an instant; a couple of the Nair's men were wounded in the conflict. On the morning of the 12th January, a few Moplahs proceeded to the residence of the said Calliat Annandan Nair, and there killed him and others in cold blood. This done, they did all the violence they could, and now apparently bid defiance to all the subordinates of the law. Chavachary, Muttanoor, and their suburbs, are in a state of open fermentation. Moplahs armed with knives, 'peeshankutthies,' and the like weapons, and burning with anger at the fate of their fifteen fellow-countrymen, taunt and insult all they come near to, and [if retorted on in the least, use the deadly weapons ever ready at hand. Thus situated, travellers and inhabitants are in dread of their lives and rights.

"From the frequency of disasters similar to the present one, the question as to their causes naturally springs. The causes are apparently oppression and injustice at the hands of the executive native police, who are generally 'Nairs,' a class of people devoid of conscience, whose predominant virtues are bribery, corruption, and practices of injustice, and to which tribe in particular the Moplahs bear implacable animosity for the above reasons. I have heard many a Moplah say, that there will be no peace so long as the Nairs are vested with authority to oppress them; and at the same time I have heard many a Moplah say, that the appointment of European and East-Indian tehsildars is, in the present state of affairs in Malabar, a sine quâ non."

The district is in a wretched state. A goodly number of Moplahs are in confinement, awaiting their trial. Chavacherry is garrisoned by detachments of H.M.'s 94th regiment and the 16th M.N.I. Danger is still apprehended from the temper of the Moplahs, who are furious at the slaughter and imprisonment of their comrades: the authorities are therefore not able to relax their vigilance. A commission of inquiry is loudly demanded to investigate and report upon the causes of these periodical atrocities. The following paragraphs embody the two most respectable theories that have been advanced on the subject. A correspondent, writing from Malabar, says, "Regarding the cause of these atrocities, two opinions prevail here, and we are informed that the collector and his sub. are at issue upon the subject. The collector has hitherto been of opinion that fanaticism was the cause, and martyrdom the object in view. Of late, we are told, he allows that this fanaticism is taken advantage of by evil-disposed men, and that the attention of the fanatics is directed to influential landlords, who may have offended their tenants either by expulsion or oppression. The sub-collector holds that this fanaticism is purposely created by the influential Moplahs and their head priest, and that parties are set aside for the purpose of gradually carrying into execution the extermination of the Hindoo proprietors by murder, or causing them to emigrate through fear. This opinion he grounds upon the fact that these atrocities are increasing in exact proportion with the success attending them. The collector advocates a more liberal policy towards the Moplahs, by admitting them into public employ, and giving them an interest in the peace of the district, by holding them, as public servants, responsible for the parish or umshan over which a party may preside. The sub-collector advocates a system of repression, and the establishment of a local corps to keep the Moplahs down, and protect the Hindoo landlords in the exercise of their just rights, holding the Moplahs as a race in general unfit to be entrusted with power, or to be admitted into equal privileges with the Nair population.—Madras Athenæum, Feb. 13.

The Bangalore Herald mentions a report current in Malabar, of a rich Moplah having been arrested, as one of the gang who committed such sanguinary outrages. His motive is said to have been a bitter hatred to the native gentleman, who was the first victim of the murderers, and several priests are supposed to be implicated in the outbreak.

THE LONDON MAIL of Dec. 24th arrived at Madras on Jan. 29th, per Oriental.

BOOK TRADE.—Messrs. Pharaoh & Co., of Madras, intend for the future to deliver any English work to the Madras purchaser at an advance of ten per cent. on the English prices. As the charge for freight is stated to amount to fifteen per cent. on the cost price, the books will positively be sold in Madras at a less price than in London.

LIEUT. WYATT.—A Court of Inquiry has been ordered to sit at Kammeppe by order of the Commander-in-Chief, to inquire into the circumstances connected with the desertion of Lieut. Wyatt, of the 37th grenadiers.

FISH LIVER OIL.—The Fort St. George Gazette contains the report of the Madras Medical Board upon the properties and value of Seer fish liver oil, as compared with that extracted from cod-liver. Out of twenty-five surgeons to whom the oil was submitted, twenty-three, after fair trial, have reported in its favour as a specific in all chronic pulmonary complaints, and valuable in certain cases of diarrhoea and dysentery. The board have in consequence ordered very large supplies of the oil to be prepared at Cannanore, Calicut, and Mangalore, and they believe that it can be manufactured at 4 annas a pound, or about one-eighth of the price of the European article. It is, moreover, fresher, and will probably keep better.

THE HOUSE OF SETH SAM & Co. have been obliged to go into the Insolvent Court. The firm of Samuel Phillips & Co., their corresponding agents in England, are creditors to the amount of three lacs of rupees; and the transactions between the parties have formed the subject of protracted litigation.—Athenæum, Feb. 7.

A. J. McKERTICH, the principal book-keeper of Messrs. Binny and Co., has rounded off a service of thirty years in that establishment, by absconding on the 28th, in the Calcutta steamer. His defalcations are as yet undetected, with the exception of a single item of Rs. 2,000 in a particular account, but no doubt they are considerable, as is it hardly likely he would forfeit his character and a salary of Rs. 300 a month for a mere trifle. He took his passage out in his own name a couple of days beforehand, and has got at least seven days clear start of justice. McKertich has left a wife and a large family totally unprovided for. He managed to accomplish his fraud by sending in forged orders in the name of a lady who kept an account with the firm.—Athenæum, Jan. 31.

A SNAFF, named Vencatolinga Chitty, employed in the Bank of Madras, has been sentenced to four years' imprisonment by the Supreme Court for knowingly cashing a forged note, and putting the real one, corresponding with it in number and value, into his own pocket.

THE JURY SYSTEM.—The Spectator publishes a remarkable illustration of the utility of that bulwark of British liberty, the trial by jury. Of the twelve men empanelled to try Gholam Moortaza Khan, for concealing property from his creditors, eleven considered him innocent. The twelfth, however, held out, and declared that he would remain all night rather than acquit. Within two minutes after this declaration, the remainder of the jury, to save their suppers, brought in the prisoner guilty, though they believed him to be innocent.

THE MADRAS BANK has again raised its rates to the highest limit, 12 per cent! At Bombay, Government bills are discounted at 4 per cent. The indignation of the Madras trading community finds vent in very vehement phraseology in some of the local journals.

LIEUT. JOHNSTONE.—The Athenæum regrets to hear that the Jaulnah Commission have found no clue to the murderer of Lieut. Johnstone.

EAST-INDIAN EMIGRATION.—Another scheme for the benefit of the East Indians of Madras has been set on foot there, that of emigration to Australia. On the 3rd February, a meeting was held on the subject, the principal speakers being Sir W. Burton, Mr. Mead, and Capt. Biden, when an association was formed for the encouragement of East-Indian emigration to Australia.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

REMUNERATION TO OFFICERS TEMPORARILY EMPLOYED ON PUBLIC WORKS.

Fort St. George, February 6th, 1852.—The Right Hon. the Governor in Council is pleased to direct that the following rules, granting remuneration to officers (not engineers, executive officers, or in receipt of special pay as such) temporarily employed in superintending public works, be established in substitution of those published in G. O. G. No. 103, of date the 27th May, 1851.

1. An allowance, as below specified, is granted to the staff or other officer nominated by officers commanding stations, to superintend the execution of annual or special repairs not requiring science, amounting to not less than Rs. 200, provided that there is no engineer or executive officer at the station, and that the work requires the superintendence of an officer.

2. An allowance of two rupees a day is granted to officers nominated to superintend works, the cost of which does not exceed Rs. 2,000.

3. The above allowance is payable for such period (not exceeding three months) as the works may be actually in progress.

4. For the superintendence of more considerable works than those above adverted to, namely, exceeding Rs. 2,000, an allowance of four rupees a day may be drawn for such period (not exceeding six months) as the works may be actually carrying on.

5. For the superintendence of works under Rs. 2,000, performed by contract, an allowance of two rupees a day (for such period), not exceeding three months, as the works may be actually carrying on, is granted; and when above Rs. 2,000, the same allowance under the same stipulations for six months.

6. In both instances the amount of the sanctioned estimate, not the bill, is to be taken as the guide to the extent of the estimate bond fide executed.

7. These allowances shall be payable at the end of each month, when an abstract will be submitted through division head-quarters for the countersignature of the military board, accompanied by a certificate from the commanding officer of the station that the period charged for is correct, and that the work executed required the superintendence of an officer.

8. The military board will, if satisfied that the time occupied in the completion of the work has not been unnecessarily protracted, or that the period stipulated in the contract has not been unnecessarily exceeded, cause their secretary to countersign the abstract, which will be sufficient authority to the pay department for the disbursement of the amount.

9. In no instance is the allowance of two or four rupees to be admitted beyond the period of three or six months respectively without the special sanction of Government, sought and obtained through the military board, as the above specified periods are considered sufficient with reference to the extent and nature of the work contemplated.

10. In no instance is there to be more than one officer appointed at any one station or cantonment, notwithstanding that there may be many works on hand at the same time, nor is a separate allowance to be drawn for each work, but the aggregate amount of all the sanctioned estimates (and on emergent works, of the bills) at any one station is to be taken as the guide by which the daily allowance of two or four rupees is to be drawn; and this allowance is to be calculated as payable from the date of the commencement of the works, and to vary as they fall below or exceed Rs. 2,000, and to cease to be drawn on monthly abstracts at the end of three and six months respectively; so that if works during the three months, from the first of which the allowance was commenced to be drawn, shall exceed in their aggregate estimate cost, by the addition to them of fresh works, the sum of Rs. 2,000, the larger remuneration, namely four rupees, shall be drawn for such period of that time as the cost of works under execution shall continue to be above Rs. 2,000; but on the completion of any one of them reducing the aggregate amount below Rs. 2,000, then the superintending officer shall only be entitled to two rupees per day. It must, however, be distinctly understood, that the respective allowance of two or four rupees on account of a work shall cease three months or six months, as the case may be, after the date of its commencement, and will on no account be permitted to enter into the calculation by which the higher or lower rates shall become payable.

11. Officers commanding stations are responsible that no undue stoppage takes place in the works; and in granting the certificate required by paragraph 7, they will state whether any and what stoppage has occurred in the execution of the work, as, in the event of such stoppage exceeding ten days, pay will cease to be drawn. Printed forms of certificate required by paragraph 7 will be furnished by the military board.

12. The above regulations are not intended in any way to disturb the rules laid down in G. O. G. No. 128, 31st July of 1838, and G. O. G. 143, of 26th June, 1846; and in divisions where there is no superintending engineer, plans and estimates will be prepared as heretofore by station staff, under whose orders part of the establishment of superintending engineers was placed in 1838 for that purpose, and when necessary, by civil engineers, under the authority of G. O. G. No. 143 of 26th June, 1846. In divisions where there is a superintending engineer, plans and estimates will be prepared by, or under the instructions of that officer, and the abstracts of officers nominated to the charge of works at stations in such divisions will, in the first instance, be submitted to the superintending engineer, and by him forwarded to the military board through division head quarters.

13. The appointments of regimental officers to the performance of the extra and temporary duties adverted to in the preceding paragraphs do not require the confirmation of Government; and paymasters are authorized to disburse all abstracts duly certified and countersigned in the manner and for the periods above provided for.

14. The military board will establish such forms as may be requisite in communication with the military auditor-general.

15. The foregoing rules do not apply to the presidency division of public works.

COLONEL OUTRAM.

COLONEL OUTRAM, late resident at Baroda, returns home on sick leave, and in official disfavour, by to-day's steamer—carrying with him the homage and respect of all honourable men. Our readers are already aware of the circumstances out of which the displeasure of Government has arisen:—having, in standing up for the fulfilment of the British pledge formally made in favour of a lady who has been robbed of her only son, stripped of her fortune, and maligned by miscreants who have confessed their crimes, discovered a frightful amount of corruption in which Government servants seemed deeply implicated. Desirous of purging the Augean stable, and redeeming our good name, he was considered by Government to have gone too far—such inquiries were troublesome—misdoings of this sort were better hushed up—the wrongs of an injured lady of rank, of a house that enjoyed our protection, not worthy of our notice!

This question has caused Baroda politics to be more deeply inquired into than they otherwise would have been. It appears that in 1834 Mr. Willoughby was almost victimized for having exposed the grossest delinquencies on the part of a late political agent; and though Colonel Ballantine was pronounced to have been convicted—"1st. In failing to deliver over to his successor the records of his agency, English or native, in a complete state. 2nd. In failing to deliver over account-books, the keeping of which must have been essential to the due discharge of his duties; and some of which, from the evidence of persons on the political agent's establishments, are known to have existed. 3rd. In furnishing the resident of Baroda and the accountant-general with irregular, inconsistent, and incorrect accounts; the results of which are far more favourable to his pecuniary interests than could have been exhibited by correct and true accounts. 4th. In having levied moshulls beyond what was required as compensation for the moshul, after the orders of Government, expressly forbidding such excess of levy, had been communicated to him. Also in having unauthorizedly levied, without any account rendered, various collections in the Sadra bazaar. 5th. In having received from the Guicowar, or, which was the same thing, deducted in his accounts with the Guicowar, from the tribute of the mahce castra remittable to Baroda, a sum of Rs. 7,705 per annum, on account of scorpoo, or annual presents to the chiefs, and not having disbursed it in the way intended; but, on the contrary, having converted it, either wholly or in part, to his own benefit,"—he has never been punished by Government. In the case of Muncherjee Jamsatjee, the Desal of Nowshary, the Bombay government allowed a long series of commands to the Guicowar to be trifled with and disobeyed for a period of thirteen years; while in other cases haste as indiscreet as the delay here was disgusting has made its appearance,—acceleration or retardation always accompanying the full purse, and always being associated with rumours of corruption; whilst gentlemen engaged in Baroda politics are believed to have returned to Europe with fortunes exceeding in amount the entire emoluments received by them in India. We believe the hands of the heads of departments in these matters to have all along been clean—we believe those of subordinates to have been most polluted,—and the evil name we have now so naturally obtained has arisen from the tardiness, vacillation, and mystery-making of Government; and these weak attempts to hush up and conceal wrong, when decided action and full exposure ought to have been resorted to.—Bombay Times, Feb. 17.

THE RAILWAY.

We are able to give some pleasing information respecting the progress and speedy completion of a portion of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, extending from Bombay to Tannah, which is being executed by Messrs. Faviell and Fowler.

The whole of the earthwork and masonry in this contract of twenty miles is in a forward state, and no doubt now is entertained, but the whole of that description of work will be completed by the commencement of next monsoon, in June. Considerable progress has also been made with the ballasting and laying of permanent way. About ten miles of single line have already been laid, and the contractors to complete the ballasting of the remaining thirty miles more rapidly, have had out from England a locomotive engine, to draw the ballast in waggons to distant parts of the work, where that material is not procurable. This engine is now on the rails, near Bycullah. She is of the most improved construction, styled the "Tank Engine," carrying her boiler, fuel, and water entirely upon the same frame. There are but four wheels which are coupled to the cranked driving shaft, placed in the centre. This is not a usual mode of communicating the motion, but it has been found to answer exceedingly well. She has been landed six days, and every exertion is being made to prepare her for work by the end of this week.

The native population appear to evince great interest in the "Fire Chariot," as they name her, and crowd round to have a look. The weight and massive character of the whole is quite at variance with their notion of speed; and, after observing the slow progress she made when being dragged along the public road by 200 coolies, their incredulous look of astonishment is not to be wondered at, when told, that in a few days she will be able to pass the race course swifter than their fleetest Arabs.—Telegraph, Feb. 17.

THE FIRST FUSILIERS.

Poona.—This usually quiet, and at this season rather dull station, was, on the 10th February, enlivened by the distribution of the Punjab Medals to that distinguished old corps, the 1st Fusiliers. Col. Mignon, having formed the corps into three sides of a square, addressed the men in an eloquent and interesting speech. After tracing the early history of the regiment, he recounted to them its services on the banks of the Ganges, in Southern India, in Western India, and in Northern India. He traced its connection with the most brilliant exploits of our Indian history, from the time when the Bengal army was annihilated, and the British inhabitants driven from Calcutta, or shut up in the Black Hole by Sooruj-ud-Dowlah. About that time, the great Clive was employed with this regiment, in conjunction with Admiral Watson, in extirpating the pirates, and destroying their nests about Angria's Colabah, Basseot, and Severndroog, but was soon afterwards called upon, with a combined force from Madras and Bombay, to avenge the cruelties of the Bengal tyrant, and to re-establish British supremacy in that quarter. On the 23rd of June, 1757, Col. Clive, with this combined force and H.M.'s 39th Foot amounting to 1,300 European soldiers and 2,000 natives, on the plains of Plassey attacked and put to flight Sooruj-ud-Dowlah's army of 60,000 men, and subverted his dynasty, thus laying the foundation of this glorious empire, which was consolidated at the crowning achievements of Mootah and Gujarat. The gallant colonel spoke of the important services of the Fusiliers in the fierce struggles with Hyder Ali and Tippeo, and in the capture of Seringapatam, on the battlefields of which, Serj. Graham, of this regiment, planted the British colours as he fell mortally wounded. He briefly alluded to its services in the Deccan and Guzerat, in Burmah, in Persia, and in Arabia, and spoke of the capture of the new important Peninsula of Aden, the Gibraltar of the Red Sea, in which many then listening to him had been engaged, but for which neither medals nor prize-money was awarded to them. He then, addressing himself to the younger part of his audience, adverted to the services of the corps in the late war, exhorting them to imitate the noble example of their elder comrades, who, by their deeds in the Punjab, had crowned themselves, and the country for which they fought, with glory, and for which they were now about to receive their medals. The regiment then by companies received, from the hands of Mrs. Mignon, the Punjab medals; after which they marched past, saluting the colours. They were then formed up at quarter distance, and dismissed; when every hat flew into the air, and the camp rang with three British cheers for Mrs. Mignon, followed by three for the gallant colonel. In the evening a select party sat down to dinner in the mess-room.—B. Times.

THE LONDON MAIL of Jan. 8th arrived at Bombay on Feb. 6th, per Adur.

LORD STANLEY was in the North West, and expected in Bombay about the 15th of March, on his way back to England.

ATTEMPT TO MURDER MR. E. C. JONES.—In the Court of Sudder Foujdaree Adawlut, on the 27th January, Soobangeor Gooroo Moothesyeer, a Goavee, was convicted of the attempt to assassinate Mr. Jones, of the civil service, agent at Colaba, mentioned p. 103. The examination of the prisoner, taken before the police hamildar of Rewdunda, was to the effect that, having been accused of improper intercourse with a Duer woman, he had thrice petitioned Mr. Jones on the subject, but without effect. He therefore repaired to the kharee to speak to the gentleman. He there placed his hand on the horse's rein, and complained to him about the matter; and then drew his sword and raised it above his head, merely showing it to the gentleman, who became afraid and sprang from his horse, and pushed him (prisoner) down, and fung the sword away. His reason for drawing the sword was, that he might lose his life either by the gentleman's hand or his own, as he had not received justice. He did not mention this to the gentleman, but he wished it in his heart. He positively denied having raised the sword for the purpose of striking Mr. Jones. He was sentenced to be transported for life.

MASSACRE OF PRISONERS.—Extract of a letter dated Indore, 30th January:—"I witnessed yesterday a horrible massacre. The prisoners returning from the jungle, when near the jail, disarmed some of the guard, wounded twelve, and then tried to escape. They were, however, pursued, some shot, and others cut down. In all, forty-seven lives were lost. I never witnessed a sight like this before. Some were cut through the back with swords, others were to be seen with their legs cut through, and hanging by the skin. The prisoners managed to run very fast; but they were soon overtaken and shot one by one as they ran. When their numbers were reduced to ten or twelve they were all shot down together, and the sepoy, mad to be revenged, plunged among them, and cut them almost to pieces. I saw forty-seven dead bodies lying by the jail this morning. Really the sight was a terrible one."

NARAYAN, THE REFORMER OF GUJARAT.—About a quarter of a century ago, Bishop Heber was at this place, and held a personal conversation with Narayan Swami, the so-called reformer of Gujarat. The contrast which the bishop draws between the native Guru and himself, and the hopes and expectations he entertained respecting the future career of that man, evince little knowledge of Narayan's real character and position. Like almost all the founders of sects among the Hindus, Narayan made himself God. He claimed, and the disciples rendered, divine honours. He is now as completely an incarnation of the Supreme as was Krishna. More than that, the Swami claimed, or his disciples claimed for him, the full power to forgive all sin, and as though Satan would to adopt the very language of Christians relative to the true atonement for sin, the first injunction on Narayan's disciples is to go to him, cast all their sins at his feet, and take merit from him. The zeal of those disciples approaches to ferociousness. They are blustering and overbearing. They are producing much social misery. The Sadhus of the sect affect it to be impurity even to touch a woman; they consequently leave their families, and lead a monastic life. The Shastras of this sect are, they say, becoming voluminous. The men of this generation were conversant with the Swami; and knew him to be such an one as themselves, but they are now inventing unutterable lies about his miracles, &c. Thus potent is the genius of falsehood. As far as one can judge, the so-called reformer has occasioned real retrogression in the moral and religious condition of Gujarat.—Dnyanodaya, Feb. 2.—The Bombay Guardian publishes a journal of a late missionary tour kept by the Rev. W. Clarkson, Missionary at Baroda, who met with many followers of the so-called reformer of Gujarat, Narayan Swami, of whose future career Bishop Heber expressed such high hopes. Subsequently to the bishop's visit, he claimed to be in possession of divine power, and his followers are spreading abroad extraordinary stories of the miracles he performed. The sect has become numerous, but in Mr. Clarkson's opinion, its influence has been decidedly prejudicial to the people.

SOURCES OF THE NILE.—At the last meeting of the Bombay Geographical Society, a paper was read by Mr. John Smith on the discoveries made by the east African missionaries of what appear to be the sources of the Nile. This mysterious river is said to arise from two lakes, one of which is of great dimensions, nearly under the line, and they seem fed by the melting snows of the gigantic range, which rises to the altitude of 22,000 feet at least, close by. The description of this long-looked-for locality coincides exactly with that given of it by Ptolemy 2,000 years ago. The society resolved to provide the missionaries with instruments: there were stated to be abundance of them lying useless in the stores of Government, but that such was the difficulty of getting at them, that they would be sooner and more speedily provided by other means.

DONATION FOR PROFICIENCY IN NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The Honourable the Court of Directors have been pleased to authorize the grant of a donation of Rs. 1,000 to Capt. J. W. Schneider, of the 2nd Grenadier Regt. N.I., for proficiency attained in four native languages.

THE NEW CHARTER.—The Dnyanprakash (a native paper) of the 26th January, states that a memorial from the natives of Western India is to be forwarded to Parliament, exhibiting their views and wishes in reference to the provisions of the expected new charter of the East-India Company.

THE ELPHINSTONE COLLEGE.—On the 9th a splendid meeting, presided over by the Governor, took place in the Town-hall on the presentation of prizes to the most distinguished of the alumni of the Elphinstone College. There were above 2,000 persons assembled in the room, of whom 1,500 were pupils at the various seminaries in the island under Government. The Chairman of the Board of Education, Sir Erskine Perry, in reviewing the progress of education, stated that, when the first professors of Elphinstone College, of whom one, Principal Harkness, was present, arrived twenty years ago, they were obliged to lecture to empty benches—their only want was pupils.—Bom. Times, Feb. 17.

THE SMALL CAUSE COURT has now been fully established, though not yet in operation. Messrs. Crawford, Johnson, and West, are the judges, on £1,800 and £1,200 per annum respectively.—Ibid.

COURT MARTIAL.

LIEUT. ARTHUR CRAWFORD, ARTILLERY.

Head-Quarters, Bombay, Feb. 2, 1852.—At an European General Court Martial, assembled at Ahmednuggur, on Wednesday, Jan. 28, and of which Lieut. col. W. Parib, H.M. 10th Royal Hussars, is president, Lieut. A. Crawford, of the artillery, was tried on the following charges, viz:—

Charge.—Lieut. A. Crawford, of the Bombay artillery, placed in arrest by me.

For conduct unbefitting an officer and a gentleman in the following instances:—

1st.—In having, at Ahmednuggur, on the night of Dec. 3, 1851, appeared in a disgraceful state of intoxication at the artillery mess-house, at an entertainment given by the officers of the artillery to the society of the station.

2nd.—In having, about an hour after he had been removed from the mess-house, and taken to his quarters in the condition described in the entertainment still in a state of intoxication.

Finding.—Guilty.

Sentence.—To be severely reprimanded.

Confirmed.

(Signed) J. Grey, Lieut. Gen., Commander-in-chief.
Head Quarters, Bombay, Feb. 2.

Remarks by the Commander-in-chief.—I do not approve of the very lenient sentence passed by the court; drunkenness, which is criminal in a soldier, is infinitely more so in an officer, and requires to be visited with greater severity than by a reprimand, but as it is an offence of rare occurrence amongst the officers of the army, I have refrained from ordering a revision.

I direct the officer commanding the artillery at Ahmednuggur to read, in the presence of his officers, the following reprimand to Lieut. Crawford, who is then to be released from arrest.

Reprimand.—Lieutenant Crawford—You have been found guilty of appearing in a disgraceful state of intoxication, a crime so degrading, that an officer convicted of it is generally considered unworthy of remaining in the army. A court martial has not only spared your commission, but sentenced you to the mildest punishment it was competent to award, and I have no wish to disturb its decision—I trust that your future conduct will prove that this lenity has not been exercised in vain.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

The intelligence from Cape Town, which is to the 3rd Feb. affords good reason for believing that the disastrous hostilities on the frontier are near a termination.

• The expedition across the Kei consisted of two separate divisions under Major-gen. Somerset and Lieut. col. Eyre.

The former amounted to 4,000 men, including Capt. Tylden's corps, Col. Mackinnon's column, Lieut. col. Michel, 6th regiment, Fingoes, &c., three pieces of ordnance, and a train of 100 commissariat waggons. On December 9, the major-general moved in three divisions to attack Tyopo's kraals, under the Thaba Mtchako mountains. Capt. Tylden's force entered from the south; the main body, under the general, by Mackay's Neck; and Col. Michel, with the 6th Royal Warwickshires, Rifles, and Fort Peddie Fingoes, from the south-east—this division scaling the almost inaccessible mountain's breast, and driving the enemy, with vast herds of cattle, over it. These effected their retreat under cover of a dense fog. Capt. Tylden, however, secured 1,050 head of cattle, besides horses and goats, with the loss of two men killed. The enemy, with their cattle, having thus fallen back upon Kreli's country, the three divisions rejoined and followed on the 11th over some streams which feed the Kei, and down the left bank of that river. On the 16th they reached the Kei Drift, and next day proceeded to the T'Somo (which joins the Kei), arriving there on the 18th, and on the 19th scouring its kraals towards the Kei, but without finding opposition or cattle. On the 20th, having moved over the T'Somo northwards, the major-general came upon the spoor of the retreating cattle, and dividing his force into four divisions,—under Col. Mackinnon, Lieut. col. Pole, 12th Lancers, Lieut. col. Napier, C.M.R., and Capt. Tylden, with the Whittlesea force,—overtook them on the 22nd, under the Ulkelo Swanga mountains, and captured several thousand head. Lieut. col. Napier's party meantime killed 30 Caffres and took 1,500 head, Col. Mackinnon a large number, and Capt. Tylden 500 head. On the 29th, the major-general was in possession of between 5,000 and 6,000 cattle. The whole of these operations had been carried on under incessant rain, and in a country presenting natural obstacles of every description.

Lieut. col. Eyre left King William's Town on the 1st December, with a force of 1,000 men, viz.—12th Lancers, 99; 60th Rifles, 216; 73rd Reg., 430; Cape Mounted Rifles, 63; Royal Engineers, 2; Levies, 146. They on the 4th crossed the Great Kei by the Wagon Drift. Here the enemy showed in numbers. A large body of Caffres held the drift, and each hill adjoining the ford occupied by them, whilst a corps of Caffre cavalry, preceding a crowd of warriors on foot, suddenly menaced our rear. Col. Eyre separated his troops, and made arrangements for covering the descent to the river, which he succeeded in, after a sharp resistance, and with some loss. The Caffres had rendered the river impracticable for waggons by rolling rocks into it, and on the left bank they had erected a series of stone breastworks, proof against musketry, and which they appeared determined to defend. The main body of our troops held the approach to the river, and supported the cavalry and waggons, whilst the grenadiers of the 73rd and a company of the 60th Rifles forded the river higher up and took the enemy's position in reverse, and another company of the 73rd drove the enemy from a kraatz commanding the drift on the right bank. Capt. Campbell's and Lieut. Knox's companies were each hotly engaged whilst the troops crossed the river. The enemy were driven back, still making resistance, and the troops reached the springs, having toiled and fought for fourteen hours without rest or refreshment. Col. Eyre, however, pushed on with the cavalry to Butterworth station that night. The 73rd lost 5 killed and 10 wounded; the 60th Rifles, 1 killed and 1 wounded. From this date to the 13th, Col. Eyre's column scoured the country towards the Bashee River, when he returned to Butterworth; and on the 16th proceeded to attack Napassa's Caffres, near the junction of the T'Somo and the Kei. On the 21st he was in possession of 6,000 cattle. During the operations, Lieut. Clifton, 12th Lancers, with a detachment of cavalry, gallantly swam the T'Somo, dislodged the enemy, and captured above 500 head of cattle.

On the 23rd, the divisions under Major-gen. Somerset and Col. Eyre were in direct communication on the Bashee River, the former moving down the river, and the latter proceeding coastwise towards its mouth. This latter force was divided into three divisions on the 28th; one, under Major Pinkney, 73rd, consisted of three companies 73rd, Capt. Campbell's Cavalry, Cape Mounted Rifles, and Fingoes, by the Guaniuga to the Bashee; a second, under Major Bedford, with two companies 60th, by the sea coast; the third, under Capt. Campbell, 73rd, across the Koka, to attack Moru's kraal; Major Tottenham, with the cavalry, pushing into Mazeppa Bay: 5,000 head of cattle were captured by this force, and brought into Butterworth on the 4th January.

Major-gen. Somerset's force arrived on the same day at Butterworth, in possession of 16,000 head of cattle. This force had been separated into two divisions; one, under Col. Mackinnon, consisting of 280 6th Regiment, 100 60th Rifles, 60 Cape Mounted Rifles, 50 Catty's Riflemen, 25 Mounted Levies, and 80 Fingoes, under Lieut. cols. Pole, Michel, Nesbit, Napier, &c., moving down the Qualana Spruit, thence along the Nabagha towards the Bashee; this division brought in more than 3,000 head of cattle. The other division, under Capt. Tylden, was composed of native and Fingo levies, 18 officers, 562 rank and file, and 180 horses. He had a smart engagement on the 30th December with a body of the enemy in the Xuaba Valley, posted in a strong rocky position, from which he drove them, killing between 50 and 60, and taking 1,200 head of cattle. This division captured in all about 3,000 head, the latter part of his operations being in conjunction with Col. Mackinnon's division.

On the 1st of January, the troops returned to head-quarters, King William's Town, with about 23,000 head of cattle, many thousand goats, and some horses.

The Amapondas of Faku, under his great son Damass, and the Caffres of Morley, Clarkeberry, and Buntingville, with the Amabaca tribe of the late chief N'Capai, as well as the Tembus of Joi and the Fingoes of Ludidi and Zipo, all came forward and gave their active co-operation; 400 of these people joined the patrol under Col. Mackinnon.

On the 18th January, Lieut. col. Eyre returned to King William's Town with 5,000 captured cattle, and the whole of the Fingoes from Butterworth with their cattle,—viz. 7,000 souls, possessing 80,000 head of cattle,—as well as the British Resident and traders, in order to secure them from the savage wrath of Krelli. These Fingoes must prove a serious embarrassment, and it will doubtless require much judgment to render this a valuable acquisition in our present difficulties. For the present they will be located south of Fort Peddie, towards the sea-coast.

The Albert Burghers, under their Civil Commissioner Cole, have rendered good service on the borders of that division towards Krelli's country. Jan Olivier, field commandant, with a number of field cornets, &c., under Mr. Cole's direction, have brought away from the Tambookies 2,500 head of cattle, 350 horses, 20 stand of arms, and have killed 160 of the enemy, with little loss. Mr. Cole hoped to be able to make another descent on the Caffres and Hottentot rebels near the T'Somo, in the event of receiving sufficient aid from the Burghers.

It appears that a meeting of all the leading Gaika chiefs,—Macome, Tola, Stock, Seyolo, Botman, Ruta, Oba, Sutu (Sandilli's mother),—was held at the Wolf River, at Sandilli's kraal, with their councillors, when two of their councillors were sent as a deputation to request Mr. Brownlee, the Gaika Commissioner, to interest himself in procuring peace. The Governor intimated to them, through Mr. Brownlee, that their surrender must be "general and unconditional, trusting to her Majesty's clemency," and that "this tendered in a solemn manner and in good faith, hostilities would cease, and their lives would be respected." Eight days passed over (from 15th to 23rd January), and the Governor ordered a combined movement on the Amatola mountains and the country of Stock, Seyolo, Tola, and Zazine, east of the Keiskama. This movement, in four columns, under Lieut. col. Pole, 12th Lancers; Lieut. col. Eyre, 73rd Regiment; Lieut. col. Michel, 6th Regiment, and Capt. Catty, commenced on the 26th and 27th January. The orders were to spare the tribes of every chief who would quietly surrender, but to cut down the crops, take the cattle, and destroy every enemy found upon the land of the disaffected. The result was not known.

The Governor had entered into "terms of amity" with Bokoo, the chief whose people attacked Col. Eyre's column at the Kei on the 4th of December; and with Mapassa (his son), against whom Lieut. col. Eyre had specially proceeded on the 16th of December.

The frontier intelligence to the 27th January holds out a prospect of peace; but Macome, Sandilli, Anta, Stock, Tola, and the rest, were still in their mountain fastnesses, and private letters say that the Caffres are perfectly unsubdued, and mocking us with a request for peace until they have procured ammunition and reaped their crops.

Mr. Thomas, the missionary at Clarkebury, informed Major-General Somerset that Krelli and the whole of the chiefs had concerted a movement, which was to have been effected that moon,—the Tambookies moving upon Cradock, and the Galekas moving upon Whittlesea and Shilo, the Gaikas moving in another direction,—the whole forming a combined movement. The chiefs asserted that they had already put the English women on board the ships, and that they had nothing more to do than to move into the colony with their wives and stock. They were to have moved down upon Butterworth the day they heard of the movement of Col. Eyre on the Kei, which called off their attention at that moment.

The Graham's Town Journal contains the particulars of the death of Major Wilmot, in a letter from Fort Peddie, Jan. 2:—"We have again been at the Camyana, but I am sorry to say with less success than upon any former occasion. On the morning of New Year's-day we were at our position, ready to "first feet" our black neighbours. On entering the kloof we found it vacated, and in consequence moved off in the direction of the old Committee's path, where we found a few huts, which were speedily destroyed. It being time for breakfast, the Fingoes, with their officers, our commander, and Mr. E. Driver, sen., took a circuitous route to the halting-place, while the troops (91st regiment) moved along the ridge. We all met at a little kloof about three miles from Breakfast Vley, where we halted for breakfast. Having seen a few horses and cattle in the bushy kloof below, it was resolved to attack them, and, if possible, capture their cattle. Accordingly, we moved on till we came to the great cattle path, which we found lined with huts. These we stormed, and had burned a good many, when our brave commander, Major Wilmot, while gallantly leading on his men, received his death-wound. This misfortune threw a damp over the spirits of every man; but, notwithstanding our perilous position, we determined to save and bring out the body of our brave and much-lamented commander, or die to a man. This was accomplished in a manner reflecting the highest credit upon the brave men of Capt. Cahill's company, 91st regiment. Shortly after we arrived at Breakfast Vley, the clouds gathered in one portentous black mass, vivid lightning and heavy peals of thunder followed, and the rain fell in torrents, through which those unflinching men bore the dead body of their lamented commander, reaching Fort Peddie at 9 p.m. the same night. Great praise is due to Capt. Webb and Lamont, and to Lieuts. Blackbeard and Driver, for the spirited manner in which they conducted themselves upon this occasion. I cannot omit the name of Mr. E. Driver, sen., whose conduct is beyond all praise, and in whose arms, I may say, the fallen warrior breathed his last. Lieut. Mackenzie, 91st regiment, also behaved in a manner which reflects credit upon his profession, as did also Staff-surgeon Dr. Wadsworth, whose skill and activity on this occasion were alike conspicuous."

A great meeting between H. M. Assistant Commissioners and the Trans-Vaal emigrants, held at the Sandt River, terminated in the most satisfactory manner. The Commissioners guaranteed them the full "management of their own affairs, without the least encroachment or interference on the part of the British Government." Eight points have been agreed upon as the foundation of the friendly relations entered into, the principal being, a free trade and passage through the whole country, no slavery, and the surrender of all offenders.

The proclamation proscribing Mr. A. W. Pretorius and other emigrants has been rescinded.

"Colonel Fordyce," says the Friend of the Sovereignty, "in his last will, bequeathed a pension to the widow of every soldier who should fall under his command; a shilling each per day to all disabled soldiers of his corps, and left the means of purchasing commissions for his five most deserving sergeants."

A hundred years' intimate acquaintance with Bengal has furnished us with no antidote to the venom of snakes, although, according to the statement furnished by the magistrate of Midnapore, and quoted in Major Munro's paper upon snake-bites, the mortality of that zillah alone amounted to 402 deaths in twenty-one months. If this be a correct average of one zillah, the loss of life throughout Bengal must be enormous. In 1846, the Aristolochia Indica was praised as a perfect specific for bites of the most venomous snakes, and Mr. Lowther, of Allahabad, recounted some astounding cures which seemed to have been produced by it. It was, however, employed by other persons with no success. The Leucas Aspera was formerly much esteemed, and Trichodesma Indica has been known to work a cure. Many of the cases treated by these plants were, according to the narrators, of the most severe kind, as witness those at Allahabad, seen by Mr. Lowther; and yet up to this moment there is no universal faith in the value of the Aristolochia. The most encouraging and extraordinary fact (for such we believe it to be), connected with the history of snake-poison, is the impunity from its destructive influence enjoyed by the mongoose. Of the reality of this there can be no reasonable doubt. Nor is the phenomenon unparalleled in the animal world; for, according to the experiments of Dr. Breton, one venomous serpent cannot be injured by another. Some two years ago we submitted a mongoose to the following experiment, with the view of testing his invulnerability. Being fastened by a line, of some thirty feet in length, to a verandah pillar, and thus permitted a free range of turf overgrown by wild arrow-root, he was freely bitten in the thigh by a cobra, which five minutes previously had destroyed a fowl, with the usual symptoms. Upon the infliction of the wound, the length of his line he ran amongst the wild arrow-root, and returned in about five minutes. He was kept carefully tied up during the ensuing seven days, but exhibited no symptoms of suffering from the injury. The only room for fallacy in this experiment lies in the fowl having been bitten only five minutes previously, and the consequent possibility of the poison having failed to be freshly secreted; but Dr. Breton narrates some experiments on this subject, by which it appears that a rabbit and five pigeons, consecutively bitten by the same cobra within an hour and a quarter, all died, although at increasing intervals, in the order of their being bitten. Taking the average strength of the cobra poison, then, we may safely assume that what could destroy five animals in that period would suffice to kill two, although one were a mongoose. On what does this impunity depend? Is the animal endowed by nature with conservative powers, or is the popular opinion correct in assigning its safety to a plant procured and eaten in the jungle? If the latter solution be correct, why is a single day lost in the discovery? Kœmpfer asserts the valuable plant to be the Radix Mungo; but no satisfactory proof of this has ever yet been offered.—Bengal Hurkaru.

LITERATURE AND SCIENCE.

The following particulars respecting the Mahapurushyas, or votaries of the Borpetah Shostro,—a sect of Vaishnavas widely spread throughout Lower Assam, and extending into Cooch-Behar, Gawalpora, and Dacca,—is furnished by Captain E. T. Dalton, Political Assistant Commissioner in charge of Kamrup, in a paper laid before the Asiatic Society of Bengal.

The sect, which is distinguished by the general respectability and intelligence of its members, their number, and success in making proselytes, has many monasteries, all of which are regarded as subordinate to the great establishment at Borpetah, in north-western Kamrup, which gives its name to a large village and pergunnah. That portion considered as belonging exclusively to the Shostro, comprising an area of 175 acres, contained, in 1848, 7,348 souls, all bhakats, or attached to the great Namghar Shostro, or place of worship,—a large building, with a thatched roof, supported on huge posts, 180 feet long by 60 broad, built in a grove, in the midst of an enclosure surrounding the other sacred edifices of the institution. The altar in the great Shostro is covered with red silk, on which the Bhagavat and other sacred books are placed, under square frames of talc. There are colossal figures of Hanuman and Garúr, supported on massive frames of timber, painted in bright colours; but they are not worshipped. The outer or verandah posts are elaborately but rudely carved, every second or third representing an incarnation of Vishnu. None but bhakats, or disciples, are admitted into the interior of the Shostro: women may sit in the verandah and join in the spiritual songs. To the east of the Namghar is a small brick temple, with a dome, enshrined in which is a stone, half a cubit long, bearing an impression said to be the foot-print of Mádhab, one of the founders of the Shostro, which is revered as a most sacred relic. In front of this temple is a well, the water of which is considered very holy.

The Mahapurushyas recognize two orders of their sect: the Udásins, or monks, who have renounced the world and practise celibacy; and the Grihist, or Grihi, laymen. The former live on alms, and devote themselves to reading the Lila Cheritra (history of Sankar and Mádhab, the founders of the sect), practising the three Veds, singing, and contemplation. They are not allowed to worship idols. They likewise act as spiritual advisers and confessors of the families of Grihi, to whose houses they are allowed access at all times. These monks live in cloisters adjoining the Namghar. Their raiment is a waistcloth, and a small white chudder, or scarf, and they carry a long staff, having a brazen knob.

There are, in the Kamrup district alone, 195 Shostros subordinate to that of Borpetah; all are built exactly on the model of the parent institution, each having its establishment of Udásins in cloisters. A few of them only are to a small extent endowed.

This sect, comprising a very industrious community, including traders as well as cultivators, has sprung up within the last 400 years. Sankar was born (that is, his avatar occurred) at Ali Pukari, a village of Central Assam, A. D. 1461, and died A. D. 1569. Mádhab "first appeared" A. D. 1512, and died A. D. 1597. They were thus contemporaries of Sri Chaitanya, who is adored as an incarnation of Crishna, and venerated as the founder of their creed by the Vaishnavas of Bengal; and, from the similarity of their doctrines, as well as from a tradition to that effect, it may be inferred that the Assamese sectarian was indebted to him for the system he introduced. The Assamese admit an interview between him and Sankar.

The Lila Cheritra, already referred to, which is in verse, relates that Sankar's reputed father, Cusim, was one of the chiefs of the country. He was a Sudra, of the caste (little known except in Assam) called Collita, and he entrusted to a learned Brahmin the education of his son, whose childhood was distinguished by extraordinary aptitude for learning and intense application to study. Sankar married early, but his wife died, and shortly after, on the death of his father, he distributed his property amongst his relations, went on a pilgrimage to Gya, Juggannath, and other places, and returned after an absence of twelve years. He found the civil government of his country in a very disordered state, and was importuned to resume his position as chief, to assist in restoring order; but he declined, observing that he should meditate on what he had seen and read. In his study of the Bhagavat and the Paras, he appears to have been assisted by a Brahmin named Ráma Ráma Guru; but their full meaning was disclosed to him by a messenger from Juggannath himself, named Juggá Misra.

About this time he became acquainted with Mádhab, who was a Sakta, or worshipper of the female principle, to whom he expounded from the Bhagavat how all adoration should be paid to Vishnu the Supreme; "for," said he, "if you pour water upon the roots of a tree, the leaves and branches are refreshed and strengthened; but applied to the branches and leaves, and not to the roots, it is of no avail." Mádhab is stated to have been so much struck with this illustration, the aptness of which is not very apparent, that he prostrated himself before Sankar as a disciple, from that hour devoted himself to the study of the Bhagavat, and other Granthas, and ultimately became Sankar's most efficient coadjutor in translating those works into the vernacular, for the benefit of his countrymen. The Mahapurushyas now regard the master and the disciple as equally entitled to adoration; if there be any difference, it is in favour of Mádhab.

The success of Sankar drew upon him the envy and jealousy of the Brahmins, whom he challenged to a meeting, and he is reported to have refuted them out of their own mouths.

After this, he went about establishing Shostros in different places. In the latter part of his life, he revisited Juggannath, when he had the interview with Chaitanya referred to. Upon his return from this pilgrimage, he recommenced religious teaching, with a greater store of knowledge, and at length resigned his mantle to Mádhab in the 104th year of his age.

The doctrines taught by these sectarians inculcate a belief in only one God, Vishnu the Supreme, and prohibit the worship of any other deity. They do not ignore the existence of the minor gods of the Hindu Pantheon, but consider that, in adoring Vishnu, they obtain the favour of all. They instruct their disciples to acknowledge all the avatars of Vishnu, but to regard his appearance as Crishna as the manifestation most important to mortals, and to seek salvation by repeating his name and contemplating his attributes. Elevation to Vaikant'ha, the heaven of Vishnu, is the reward of the virtuous; an eternity of Narak, or hell, the lot of the wicked. The Grihi, or laymen, are permitted to worship the images of Vishnu and Crishna, in the form of the Sálagram; but all other idol-worship is interdicted. The Udásins are absolutely prohibited to worship even the Sálagram; the reason assigned for this distinction is, that images or symbols of the deity on which to concentrate the ideas are required by men whose minds are distracted by family cares and worldly enjoyments, but not by those who have withdrawn themselves from both.

The Mahapurushyas have not that reverence for caste which is entertained by other Hindus; yet the distinction is not altogether effaced, and a Mahapurushya will not eat cooked food from the hands of a brother whose blood is not as pure as his own. Hindus of all castes are admitted into the fraternity, and, with the exception just noticed, associated with on equal terms. One of the most respected of the Udásins is by caste a distiller of spirits.

The first Shusturiah, or Adhikári (priest), of the Borpetah Shostro was a Udásin named Mathura Dása, who was installed in the office by Mádhab. Before his death, Mathura Dása directed the Bhakats, in conjunction with the Mahants, or heads of the subordinate Shostros, to select a successor from the Brahmin family of Ráma Ráma Guru, the learned pundit of Sankar, whose descendants have always since filled that office.

With the exception of certain fees allotted to the Adhikári all offerings for religious duties, presents, and fees of admission and readmission, are deposited in the Shostro treasury, which is said to be very rich. No disbursements can be made but by order of the Adhikári, with the assent of a committee of Bhakats.

The superiority of the form and mode of the devotional exercises contrasts very favourably with the ordinary temple-worship of the Hindus. Instead of a small shrine, into which none but the officiating Brahmin enters, and from which no instruction to the crowd outside is even attempted, a large building, capable of affording accommodation to thousands, is devoted to the purposes of praises of the deity, congregational singing, and moral instruction; and to keep up the spirit of the sect, as well as to afford them examples of holy living, the actions, precepts, and chief incidents in the lives of their founders are constantly brought to their recollection.

TO THE EDITOR.

KAMGAR presents his compliments to the Editor of Allen's Indian Mail, and requests the favour of a place in his forthcoming number for the few following lines, lately addressed to the learned President of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, Dr. Wilson:—

"A friend has sent me the Oriental Christian Spectator of the 17th January last. It contains, I see, a reprint of a letter of KAMGAR, which appeared in Allen's Indian Mail of the 19th

November, 1851. * * * * You will have seen that I have followed up the subject in two more letters, under the same signature, in the Mail of the 17th December and 17th February last.

"In the first of these, I have resumed the examination of the strange opinion Colonel Rawlinson holds, as to the parentage of the Zend. If correct, we shall witness the phenomenon of a singularly rugged, harsh, and poor language, deriving its origin from another entirely alien in grammatical structure and character, but, in strong contrast, above all, excelling in richness, power, and melody.

"The second letter, as you may have observed, is dedicated to the exposure of any argument in favour of the authenticity of a language founded on the capability of its illustration by means of a grammar, and that I further mention a circumstance of which you would necessarily be already aware,—I mean, Professor Westergaard's having given up Pehlvi as a genuine language. This is of importance, and may end in the professor, after further examination, and under the pressure of consistency, withdrawing his belief in the truth of the Zend also.

"The question, as it now stands, may be stated thus:—The Zend text of the Vendidad, and its translation, as it is called, are, in all probability, nearly contemporaneous; that is, they were composed (inserted) about the same time, and are held in equal reverence by the Parsees. The Zend is read with facility, from its scheme of orthography expressing, by distinct and separate letters, all the short vowels, and even their modifications; while the Pehlvi, on the contrary, although written in the same character, does not even employ the Persian marks for these vowels,—zer, zubar, peah. Hence, when any illiterate Dastoor can make a shift to read Zend, it is only those who are better instructed that can attempt reading the Pehlvi, and most of them only succeed in making it out by means of a transcript written below in Persian letters.

"It would now appear impossible to discover why the Zend text of the Vendidad has been translated into Pehlvi, a language entirely dissimilar; but although using the same characters as the Zend, it is written with such abbreviations, or rather absence of distinctive letters, as to present a complete puzzle, only to be solved by calling in the aid of Persian characters. Is this the effect of the peculiar difference, in this respect, between Sanskrit and Persian writing, upon which languages I suppose the Zend and Pehlvi respectively to be formed?"

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON,

THURSDAY, March 18, 1852.

THE patronage of India has more to do with the Charter question than many at first apprehend. It is a prize which every political party, indulged with the dimmest hope of becoming the executive, would rejoice to see appropriated to it,—not, of course, from any sordid motive, but in order that, with such potent anti-attribution, the machinery of government might work smoothly and noiselessly; whilst the humblest individual, who possesses the most minute particle of "influence," parliamentary, governmental, or aristocratical, fancies that its secret fountains would be replenished, and its dews and showers rendered more plentiful and refreshing, by such an appropriation of the Indian patronage.

Those who are thus unconsciously biased by their interests see in the existing mode of dispensing that patronage, a terrible anomaly. Even to speculative politicians it must appear at first sight a very extraordinary departure from ordinary principles, that all the public services of British India,—civil, military, marine, medical, ecclesiastical, consisting of some thousand posts,—should be filled up at the nomination of twenty-four private gentlemen, qualified for the exercise of this function by the mere holding of a certain amount of India Stock. Only think, it might be said, of the master and wardens of the Merchant Taylors' Company having the exclusive right of commissioning the officers of the army and navy! Yet it is a trite observation, that, in the science of government, the happiest expedients have sometimes been the result of pure accident.

That system of selecting candidates for public offices, whatever be its nature, must be the best, which secures the fittest persons, and which is least liable to be abused for purposes prejudicial to the general weal. This proposition can hardly admit of dispute. All pretensions derived from prerogative, prescription, custom, or convenience, are or ought to be subject, more or less, to the two conditions before mentioned. The sovereign in this country, by royal prerogative, appoints all the great ministers of the State, who carry on the executive government. Virtually, however, this power of appointment, absolute in appearance, is subjected to the veto of Parliament, which judges of the fitness of the persons appointed.

If it were necessary now to determine for the first time in what manner and by what agency the numerous offices in British India might be most beneficially filled, the objects sought would be, in the first place, to prevent so dangerous an amount of patronage from falling into the hands of the ministers of the Crown, and, secondly, to intrust it to an independent body, which, having no connection with the political parties whence those ministers are chosen, has a direct interest in the good government of India; the members of which are competent to judge of the fitness of the candidates, and have no inducements to abuse their patronage (securities being provided, moreover, to guard against its abuse), their appointments, when made, being liable to be dealt with by a co-ordinate authority as the public good may demand.

It does not appear that any conditions could be added to these, in order to create a depository for the Indian patronage that should, on the one hand, protect it from being employed as an instrument of parliamentary influence, and, on the other, well provide for the fitness of the appointees; and it is obvious that, in all particulars, the Court of Directors of the East-India Company exactly corresponds to the description. Being elected by the proprietors of East-India Stock, in no way mixed up, as a body, with home politics, and having no visible temptation to identify themselves with the administration of the day, the members of that Court can exercise their free choice in the nomination of candidates; many of them having been employed in India in the civil or military service of the Company, and all of them being familiar with the qualifications required in such candidates, they are no imperfect judges of their fitness; whilst their interest in the well-being of British India,—for which they are not only responsible, but in which they have a pecuniary stake,—would forbid negligence in their choice, which, in the case of the civil service, is subject to a qualified review by the Governor-General of India, who has the power, at least, of judging in what capacity the appointees shall be employed.

Let us consider what would be the necessary incidents of passing this patronage through any other channel. Suppose the Crown,—that is, the ministry for the time being,—were to fill all the Indian offices, as they do those at home and in the colonies. If we leave out of contemplation the constitutional objection to such a proposal (which is alone fatal to it), no one would expect that those appointments would be made upon a different principle from all others, which are given to political connections in return for political support. As to qualifications in the candidates, they are rarely thought of, unless it be to excuse a preference given to the recommendation of the more powerful patron. In the Customs or the Excise, if a broken-down tradesman, with influence in a borough, or a superannuated butler to a nobleman, be pitchforked into a place for which he has not a single qualification, his co-officials are expected, nay, required, to teach him the details of his duty, or to perform it for him. At present, such a person could not be even smuggled into the Indian services, and, if he could, it would still be in the power of the supreme local authority, at all events, to restrict his means of doing mischief,—a power which would be very reluctantly exercised if the Governor-General of India were a colleague of the patron.

Some have proposed that these appointments should be put up openly to sale. It is hardly worth discussing this proposal, which is open to a multitude of objections, and would lead to a system of gross venality, that must eventually corrupt every branch of the Indian administration. The men who bought their places would, as in Turkey and other countries where this system secretly prevails, be sure to make those places repay the outlay. The height of the bid would be the measure of the bribes demanded. It is nothing to say that commissions in the regular army are purchasable. The analogy is ideal. Would the purchase of civil appointments at home, or of places in Parliament, be tolerated?

Then it has been suggested that a special commission should be intrusted with this delicate function. Let the commissioners be ever so discreetly selected, and ever so jealously watched, he would be no very bold prophet who predicted that, in a few years, the establishment would become the instrument of jobs. At the very best, it would be an exchange of one machinery for another of the same kind, but worse in quality.

Lastly, it has been urged that the appointments might be distributed amongst the universities in the United Kingdom, which could devise schemes of discipline as well as selection that would insure a constant stream of well-qualified Indian officers. This function would change the character of those seats of learning, and convert them into arenas of struggles for place and political advancement. The probability is, that they would decline the dangerous gift; but if they did not, save in the single article of education, it is not apparent that the candidates could be better selected than at present, and in respect to this article, the existing system, if it requires improvement, is easily susceptible of it.

Then, if we are compelled to fall back upon that system, let us next see how it works,—whether there is any vice or abuse in it which calls for a change. Are incompetent persons appointed, and thrust into situations which they are unfit to fill? Does any suspicion of the corrupt abuse of power rest upon the Company's servants in the judicial, magisterial, or revenue departments? Is the patronage at home prostituted to serve sordid or political ends? It is notorious that, on all these points, the very reverse is the truth. The civil service of India, according to testimony the most competent and impartial, is remarkable for the fitness of those who compose it, and even for the number of able officers it has produced: Mr. Gladstone has recently termed it "a nursery of public men rarely equalled, certainly unsurpassed." They may not exhibit that critical perception of the niceties of the English Common Law which would qualify them to preside in a Queen's Court, nor may all be able to speak in perfection all or any of the languages of India; but they are not deficient in accomplishments not inferior to these in practical utility. Rare, indeed, have been the instances, in modern times at least, in which a charge of corruption has been brought against a member of any of the services, rarer still in which such an accusation has been proved. The exercise of the home patronage is guarded from abuse, not merely by the law of the land, but by the vigilance of those intrusted with its distribution, who have never shrunk from bringing to legal trial one of their colleagues suspected of having been made even the innocent instrument of a fraudulent presentation.

Why, then, if no better channel can be found for the administration of the Indian patronage than the present system, and if, further, the end of its administration is fully attained thereby, it would seem to be an absurd, nay, a suicidal, policy to change it, and, for the sake of experiment, try some other scheme in a matter which involves the safety of such a dependency as India. The evil effects of a false step in our domestic legislation may be soon discerned and promptly arrested. A similar error in our Indian policy may not be discovered until it is too late to repair it. In the words of Burke, "Where we do not see our way clearly, let us tread cautiously."

THE debates in both Houses of Parliament on Monday-night, if they did not indicate very distinctly the views and intentions of the new Ministers upon the great question of our commercial policy, showed with sufficient clearness the course of tactics which they and their opponents respectively mean to pursue.

The case of the Ministers is this. They did not seek office—it was thrust upon them. Knowing that they were supported by only a minority in the House of Commons, they did not desire to eject the late Ministry, who, upon the successful attack of a former colleague, precipitately threw up the reins of government, which the present Ministers consented to accept because there was no other party equally strong and possessing the same amount of public confidence; and the Sovereign could not be left without advisers. Such a position, the difficulties of which were not their own creation, entitled them to the forbearance of their opponents; but they would take no advantage of it. An immediate dissolution of Parliament was admitted to be inexpedient; and all they proposed to do was to bring forward such measures as the exigency of public affairs demanded, postponing those questions which involved our commercial policy until the verdict of the country should be obtained at a general election. If that verdict should be adverse to a change, or even if only a bare majority should favour it (as we understand Lord Derby's declaration), the present Ministers will not hereafter propose to disturb the existing system. Further, if the country should express a general concurrence in the expediency of a change, they do not contemplate a reversal of the free-trade policy, but only such a modification of it as will correct its evils, and repair the injury it inflicts upon particular classes—not binding themselves, however, to any specific measures. To these views and intentions it must be assumed that their supporters in Parliament have assented; and nothing can be fairer, at least, in appearance.

Let us now consider the case set up by the Opposition, which is avowedly recruiting its numbers by accessions from the intermediate, or Peel party. The position of the present Ministers, they say, is anomalous and unconstitutional, since it is proposed by them to conduct the government of the country with an acknowledged Parliamentary minority. But if there was no other party which could take office with a majority, and an immediate dissolution is admitted to be an evil, the position of the new Ministry is a necessity, which supersedes all appeal to precedents, or even principles. Then it is alleged that the Ministers are pledged by past avowals to reverse the free-trade policy, and to restore protection. This argument, however, is neutralized by the recent declaration of the head of the Government, that, although his opinions upon this subject are unchanged, he is ready to bow to a distinct verdict of the country; and we can perceive nothing "humiliating," but, on the contrary, something constitutional, in the "subserviency" of the Government to a decided majority of the constituency. The call made upon the new Ministry, not needlessly to protract the necessary public business, but to hasten as much as possible the period when the final appeal is to be made, is reasonable, since a dishonest set of Ministers might avail themselves of their peculiar position to prolong their enjoyment of the spoils of office without its responsibilities. But the Opposition, having a decided superiority in numbers, is, on the other hand, in a situation to expedite the transaction of the necessary business, and to control the Ministers, who could not retain their posts in the face of an address for their removal, or a denial of supplies.

Upon the whole, then, the present administration is in a position by no means unfavourable, and which, if its advantages be skilfully and judiciously employed, may be made a strong one, whilst the country may derive benefit from their absolute dependency upon its favour. The weakness of the Government may be said to be its strength, but only so long as its measures coincide with the interests of the community. Hitherto, the acts of what are termed "strong" administrations have frequently disappointed public expectations; we might possibly find a weak administration, incapable of sustaining itself but by a sound, direct, and wise course of policy, realizing all that the public desired. And if the Opposition party, possessing a giant's strength, should forbear to use it like a giant, and, forgetting all party strife, heartily co-operate in measures of general utility, acting only (as an opposition should act) as a check upon, not an obstruction to, the Government, this crisis in our domestic affairs may be a happy one for the country, and ultimately reveal the true cause of the slow progress of practical and reformatory legislation, namely, the predominance of party feelings and party combinations.

This is, however, we fear, a visionary prospect. It is pretty plain, we think, that the present Ministers, having attained office, will endeavour to preserve it by so adapting their policy to circumstances as to baulk their antagonists without openly deserting their partisans. If forced to dissolve Parliament, they will calmly take their chance of the result. Should protection prove to be in favour, which is utterly improbable, they will be happy to restore it; if it be condemned, they will be content to administer the Government with things as they are. The Opposition party, in like manner, will watch their opportunities to damage the party in power, in order to displace them, by constantly pressing upon the weak points of their adversaries' position—its anomalous and unconstitutional character; the humiliating condition of a Ministry, with no policy of its own, subsisting by the forbearance of its antagonists; and the hazard to which the commercial prosperity of the country is exposed by their secret antipathy to free trade. The arguments derived from these common-places, reinforced by the casual errors of men new to office, will, it is no doubt expected, restore the Whigs to the power they covet, strengthened by new alliances.

It appears that one of the public measures which it is the intention of the new administration to bring forward, is the appointment of a Select Committee to inquire into the operation of the East India Charter Act; and as Mr. Anstey has given notice of an amendment, for the simultaneous nomination of a Commission, to take evidence upon the subject in India, we shall very shortly have a discussion in one of the Houses of Parliament, perhaps in both, upon East India affairs.

We have received a letter from Mr. Traveller, of Madras, furnishing explanations of his case, in the Insolvent Debtors Court at that presidency, upon which we felt it to be our duty to make a few remarks,* and he hopes that his explanations may induce us to modify them. We regret our inability to alter our opinion respecting the case; but, anxious to afford him every means in our power of justifying himself, we have inserted his letter.

Mr. Traveller protests against our placing any reliance upon native evidence. We therefore take his own account of the transaction, whence it appears that he required from a native woman, whose son was in prison, Rs. 2,000, or £200, for "representing the hardship of her son's case," the whole of which sum he was to keep if he procured his liberation, and if he failed, he was to retain £50. We do not scruple to characterize this bargain, even supposing it untainted with fraud, as a most extortionate one. Mr. Traveller does not deny that not only Rs. 2,000, but Rs. 3,000, were actually paid by the woman or her friends, and he admits that he signed an obligation for Rs. 3,000; but he says he did so without reading the note,—though he understood Tamil,—and that the additional Rs. 1,000 was a fraud of his dubash. We grieve to be constrained to concur in the disbelief of the Chief Justice of Madras "that any man would sign a promissory note without first knowing its contents." After the transaction, Mr. Traveller became insolvent, and the native woman can recover no more of her Rs. 2,500 than her proportion as a creditor of his estate.

The explanations which Mr. Traveller has now given he had an opportunity of giving, and we presume did give, to the Insolvent Debtors Court. After sentence, he represented them in a letter to Sir Wm. Burton, the Judge who tried the case; Subsequently to this, he appealed to the Supreme Court at Madras, the Judges of which (including Sir Wm. Burton), after reviewing the facts, confirmed the sentence.

Mr. Traveller seems to think that the sum of his offence is his having signed a promissory note without reading it; whereas it consists in this:—that he, an ordained minister of the Gospel, obtained a large sum of money from a native woman on "a false pretence" (as the Judge in his sentence said), and "for a purpose which he knew he could not fulfil."

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—I now propose, with your permission, to consider what are the real evils of our Indian Government, and how they may be diminished.

1. The first and most prominent of these is the universal venality of the people of India. It may be objected that the Government cannot be held accountable for this trait in the national character; but, should it be shown that the universal favour with which corruption is regarded, if it may not be fairly said to have its origin in misgovernment, is at any rate perpetuated by a dereliction on the part of Government of a very important department of its duties, it must be admitted, however reluctantly, that for this state of things, as long as they exist, the Government is accountable.

2. Corruption, or the disposition of the great body of the people to buy and sell justice, and to connive at such practices in others, depends, I believe, upon ignorance of two kinds: 1st, an ignorance of the characters of their rulers, and a belief (fostered for their own purposes by native officials) that the European is as venal as themselves; 2nd, an ignorance (or want of moral sense) of the criminality of corruption.

3. Both these kinds of ignorance may be expected to give way to education. But it should be understood that the classes to which such education is wanted to be applied are not merely the upper classes, but the masses of the people; for it is from their ignorance that such a state of things becomes possible. An education so applied has not yet been attempted by the Government.

4. In these times, the education of the people is admitted to be a responsibility of all good Governments; and few will be found to deny that mental discipline, when rightly directed, forms one of the most powerful supports of social order, and of the stability of whatever exists in harmony with the precepts to which such mental discipline has subjected the popular mind.

5. The only question seems to be, whether or not it is advisable to extend education equally to all classes. Some hold the opinion that those with lower means, if they receive the same education as those in a better class of society, become unfitted for the duties of their station.

6. On the other hand, it is certain that, in India, where the better classes of society are educated, and the lower classes have not had education extended to them in the same degree, the higher domineer over their inferiors, trample upon their feelings, break their spirit, and make them their ready tools and dupes. The humble cringing manner of the lower classes in India is the evident result of a long subjection to such haughty discipline. This cringing manner has happily decreased under our rule, probably because, 1st, education has been in some measure extended to the people through the efforts of the missionary schools; 2nd, but more, perhaps, from the feeling, which is gradually establishing itself, that it is the principle of our Government that all men are equal in the eye of the law. No equality, however, in the distribution of justice, will suffice to cure the popular tendency to connive at and practise corruption, unless education is more extended. The defect of the present Government system is, that it is lavished on a very small body of men, and those not philanthropists,—not men whose object is the good of their fellow-countrymen,—but men bent upon speedy self-aggrandizement. Their object is to make use of their knowledge for themselves exclusively; consequently, when, by reason of the rank they have taken and the certificates they have received, they obtain a Government appointment, in their intercourse with the lower classes they pretend, on account of their high attainments and knowledge of English, to great influence with the European officer to whom they are attached, while at the same time, to the European officer, they make their high attainments and apparent respectability of character a stalking-horse for their intended villainies upon the people, from whom they receive bribes to exert their pretended influence with the European officer in the decision of cases of which he has the adjudication.

7. This state of things could not continue were all upon a footing in point of education; stronger intellects would still be able to take advantage of weaker, but not to the same extent. The missionary system is of too exclusively religious a nature to be of use, even were it, which it is not, accessible to the masses of the people; except in one or two favoured parts, the missionaries are but very thinly scattered.

English suggests itself as the language upon which a universal education should be founded, for important reasons. Its literature, and the European notions which that literature would unfold, enabling the natives of India to become better acquainted with the European character; its superiority to all the languages of India, in possessing, which they do not, works on all the branches of knowledge which the last three centuries have unfolded; the almost insuperable difficulty of translating such works into the languages of India, which are wanting in most words to express terms of European science;—all these reasons recommend English, instead of any other language, as the one in which a system of universal education should be conveyed.

But it is only a universally applied system of education which could be safely conveyed in English, for this reason,—that in any system in English not universal, there would be the same inherent evils as those noticed in para. 6.

An education of the kind I have represented as necessary would, of course, be of enormous expense in the first instance, as it would embrace every town and village in the empire. But if it were once allowed that education of the people is one of the most important duties of Governments, the current of expense might soon be turned from many of its present shallow and useless channels to water the nursery-fields of education. Unhappily, this is not at present a prevalent idea.

I propose in my next letter to notice the centralizing system of the Government, and its injurious results.

I am, Sir, yours obediently,

A CIVILIAN.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—A friend who, I presume, takes in the Indian Mail, has been at the trouble of copying an article relating to myself, which I have read with no particular surprise, but certainly with regret, from the circumstance that your comments and conclusions bear an impress unfavourable to myself. I know not whether your publication be intended for Anglo-Indians, or for the information of the home public generally; if the former, the trouble you have taken was quite unnecessary, from the fact of the subject having gone the round of the Indian press, of which, from being in the receipt of most of the journals published in this country, you must have been cognizant. Permit me to invite your attention to the accompanying statement, which contains explanations that may probably alter your opinion, and induce you to think of my case with less repugnance. You need not be reminded that courts of law are not always courts of justice, and that hundreds have had their characters destroyed by testimony concocted for the avowed purpose of gratifying a base cupiditas. The natives, where money or property of any kind is concerned, will unhesitatingly swear to anything, and feel no compunction at thus committing themselves. The very party that prosecuted me repeatedly expressed to myself and others that they exonerated me from all blame, and affirm it their belief, as was the fact, that my dubash had deceived both them and me. The evidence by which you seem to have been guided was far from a full account, and in some particulars positively erroneous. However, it is not my intention to do more on the present occasion than to request you will give my remarks an unprejudiced perusal.

The fact was simply this: my services were engaged by the person to whom you allude for the avowed object of representing the hardships of her son's case, then under imprisonment for fourteen years. In the event of a favourable issue, I was to receive Rs. 2,000; but if otherwise, Rs. 500. One thousand was deposited with my dubash, and another thousand was borrowed for a friend of the same party, who was unable to take it up when it became due, for which I became security. This was the amount of my obligation; in acknowledgment of which, I gave a promissory note in English.

The Friend of India has expressed himself satisfied with my statement, and those who know me need no such testimony in favour of my integrity. I have the proud consciousness of having acted in the whole affair with the most perfect integrity, and, though suffering as an evil-doer, am happily freed from the conviction of having done wrong. Not one rupee of the amount said to have come into my hands ever reached me.

The Tamil note, as I have stated, was a gross fraud, and was brought to me when engaged in writing for my paper, and being informed that it was nothing more than a Tamil version of the English note I had given for Rs. 2,000, I signed it without it,* but afterwards learned that it was for Rs. 3,000; Rs. 1,000 being added by my dubash, which he had obtained on his account, and had given also a separate acknowledgment for the same.

I will not take up your time by recapitulating what has already met the public eye; but should you, from the information with which I have furnished you, have reason to alter or modify your opinion, I rely upon your candour to do me even-handed justice.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

Madras, 19th Jan. 1852.

C. TRAVELLER.

LAW.

VICE-CHANCELLOR PARKER'S COURT, FEB. 26.

In the Matter of Angelo and of the Trustee Act of 1850—Ex-parte Frith.—The petition stated that the petitioner had become the purchaser from the North-Western Bank of India of 132 shares in the Oriental Bank, which had been assigned by way of mortgage to the North-Western Bank by Major Angelo, now in Australia. The object of the petition was to obtain a vesting order for the transfer of the shares, and the receipt of the dividends thereon, under the 22nd section of the Trustee Act of 1850. It was contended that the shares were comprehended within the term "stock," as defined by the interpretation-clause of that Act. The petition was founded on the following letter from Major Angelo to the manager of the Oriental Bank in London, dated Calcutta, October 15, 1850:—"Dear Sir,—Be good enough to deliver over to the agent of the North-Western Bank of India in London, Robert James Roy Campbell, Esq., the 132 Oriental Bank shares standing in my name, and pay to him or his order all dividends accruing thereon, and be good enough to attend to the instructions of that bank with reference to a sale or transfer thereof, and consider this as a full authority." The shares were still standing in the name of Major Angelo, and their sale to the petitioner, the signature of Major Angelo to the above letter, and the fact of his being still indebted to the North-Western Bank of India, were duly proved.

Sir J. Parker said the letter contained an authority to sell the shares, and, in exercise of such authority, a sale of them had been effected to the petitioner. No doubt, this was a case of constructive trust, and if a bill were filed, Major Angelo would be declared a trustee for the petitioner. Looking at the Acts 11 Geo. IV., and 1 Will. IV., c. 60, as contrasted with the Trustee Act of 1850, there appeared to be this distinction—that, under the 18th section of the former Act, nothing could have been done on this petition until the right had been ascertained in equity; but his Honour found in the interpretation-clause of the latter Act the words, "trust and trustee shall extend to and include implied and constructive trusts," and that this Act contained no such clause as the 18th section of the former Act, limiting its application to the case of a constructive trust only where the decree of a Court of Equity had been obtained. He thought that, under the circumstances, he could make the order asked.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY, FEB. 27.

In re D. Macleod.—The bankrupt, of Tirhoot, East Indies, applied for his certificate. There was no opposition. The bankrupt, who was a pleader in the native courts under the Bengal presidency, enjoying a good professional income, was induced to accompany the Nepaulese Ambassador to this country in the early part of 1850, as secretary and interpreter; he continued here in the suite until August, again accompanying the ambassador to India. He was necessarily put to very great expenses, which he imagined would be defrayed, independent of the salary to which he was entitled as of course. He had spent 912l. in the service of the prince, and through the breaking up of his establishment in the East Indies, there had been a very heavy loss upon the realization of his property. He owed 3,000l., and the property to be realized was very small; but for the circumstances referred to, the bankrupt would have been able to meet his engagements.

An immediate certificate of the second class was granted.

THE PUNJAB BOOTY.—The Indian journalists appear strangely mystified on the subject of the Punjab booty. Some imagine that the Royal Warrant intends that the whole 13 lakhs shall be given to the army; whereas it is clearly declared that one half is to go to the proper use of the Company towards the expenses of the war, and the other half is to be for the use of the troops employed in the operations, after deducting the amount of the six months' batta they have received. Another journalist, after computing that 6½ lakhs,—half of the booty,—would fall short, as it certainly will, of the six months' batta, charges the authorities with "a sad arithmetical error, in directing the performance of an impossibility, the deduction of the greater from the less amount." But it would be obvious that the deduction is to be made only in case of excess, if it were not expressly stated, in the Company's memorial, that if an individual's share of the booty be less than the batta, the prize-money only is to be repaid to the Company. In this country, too, there are apparently captors of the booty who expect to receive their proportions twice over. "An Officer wounded at Moultan" wrote the other day to the Times in the following terms:—"Three years have now elapsed since the fall of Moultan—many soldiers are since dead—many widows dead; but many starving widows survive, to whom a mite from the Rs. 12,00,000, blood-bought gain of the East-India Company, would be a mighty boon. Many a 'broken soldier' counts the lonely moments in hope to pay his surgeon's bill for shattered limbs before the glacié of Moultan. And why is this distribution delayed year by year?" This gentleman must have strangely forgotten that he received his share, with the rest of the claimants, upwards of two years ago,—a few months after the capture of Moultan,—in the shape of six months' full batta!

THE REV. W. VON DADLZEN is appointed colonial chaplain of Trinity Church, Colombo, Ceylon. The Rev. W. N. Simmonds is appointed colonial chaplain at Kandy. — Observer.

THE OVERLAND INDIAN MAIL.—The Sémaphore of Marseilles on the subject of the transmission of the Indian mail, says:—"In the struggle entered into between the two countries of which Marseilles and Trieste are the champions, every one is aware that the victory will remain with the one which shall gain in speed over the other; politics will have but a very slight influence in the affair, and England will definitely give the preference to the shortest route. The question, therefore, is to ascertain whether the passage of the English mail through France is effected with the greatest possible speed. To put this question is to solve it. It is only necessary to follow with some attention the progress of this service, to see that there is much wanting both in rapidity and regularity. To quote only one example, we will say that the mail which left Marseilles at the end of January last took eighty-six hours to reach London, although the journey might, if necessary, have been made in forty-eight hours. Every one is generally agreed in attributing the frequent delays which the English mail meets with on the French territory to two principal causes; the first, in the examination and classification of the letters which takes place in the post-office at Marseilles, and which occasions a loss of about two hours; the second results from the necessity of waiting for the fast trains on the railway, which causes another delay, varying from one hour to ten hours, according to the time of the arrival of the packet. The first delay evidently falls within the exclusive domain of the government. If we are well informed, the prefect, who has the rare merit of assuming the initiative in all affairs which interest his department, has just addressed a communication to the government, in which he suggests that the sorting of the letters from India should be henceforth made at Malta, which would save to the English mails all the time which is lost in that operation at Marseilles. That, in fact, is the most rational means of remedying this serious inconvenience, and it is to be hoped that this suggestion may be acceded to by the Post-office authorities. The second cause of delay is more complicated. In order to remedy it, it would suffice that special trains should be placed at Marseilles at the disposal of the English courier, on the arrival of the packet. But here arises a question of expense, which must be first solved. There probably exists in the contract entered into between the French Post-office and the English Government, for the transmission of the India mail, a blank as far as concerns the transport by railway, which it will be proper to fill up. On the other hand, the dispute which has arisen between the Post-office and the Avignon to Marseilles Railway Company, relative to the transport of despatches, is not yet settled, and will doubtless act on the service of the India mail, which is thus reduced to the condition of a private undertaking. In such a state of things, the English courier only takes a special train under very particular circumstances, and never except by paying the expense of it. The prefect, in his application to the government, has said nothing on the subject of the expense; he has confined himself to pointing out facts, and the inconveniences which result from them, and demanding that they should be remedied by having the necessary arrangements made, in order that, the moment the English mail is landed, the courier may find a train, either special or not, but a fast one, always ready to start with him. The Chamber of Commerce, to which the prefect communicated his intended application, has also supported it by a similar one. The question thus put cannot fail to receive a speedy solution, and one in conformity with the interests of the country. It must not be forgotten that it is the whole of France, and not Marseilles alone, which is interested in preserving the transport of the India mail, and nothing should be neglected to obtain this result."

* Sic in MS. The word "reading" is probably omitted.—Ed.

BOOKS.

Modern India; a Sketch of the System of Civil Government. To which is prefixed, some account of the Natives and Native Institutions. By GEORGE CAMPBELL, Esq., Bengal Civil Service. London. Murray.

This is evidently one of those works which have been and will be got up to meet a presumed demand for information respecting India, created by the approaching inquiry into its affairs. This contribution to the wants of the nation is by no means superfluous if the fact be, as Mr. Campbell affirms, that "nine-tenths of the educated classes in this country, both in an out of Parliament," are so ill-informed upon the subject as to be incapable of detecting the most absurd notions respecting India.

Having "had an intimate experience of the detail of the principal departments of the Indian administration," Mr. Campbell thought, he says, that a general sketch of the civil government of British India would be acceptable. He has accordingly dashed off, in a loose and rapid manner, in his "spare time," during "the last few months," a volume which embraces the history of India from the earliest times; the general and social characteristics of the natives previous to our occupation of the country; the native institutions, Mahomedan, Hindu, Mahratta and Sikh; our political progress and present position in India; the origin and obligations of the native states; the history and progress of our internal administration; the Government as it now exists, and its instruments, the civil service; the different systems of land revenue and the other sources of income; finance, police, criminal and civil administration, &c.

It must be obvious that such a vast variety of subjects, sufficient to fill half-a-dozen volumes, can be treated in one, however skillfully the matter may be compressed, but superficially by the ablest writer in the spare time of a few months. The whole contents of the book, in respect to style as well as matter, produce the impression that we are reading the written conversation, rather than the composition, of a tolerably well-informed person, trivial inaccuracies as to facts and solecisms of expression instantly recurring; yet it is no doubt calculated to answer the limited object the author had in view, that of affording a popular and general notion of the subject, correcting gross errors, and removing palpable ignorance. His chapters upon the civil administration, properly so called, are more copious, accurate, and instructive than the others.

Mr. Campbell is, very naturally, an encomiast of the civil service, which, "as a body," he says, "possesses habits of business, a knowledge of its duties, and general official aptitude, such as is [are] excelled by no body of equal number in the world." The compliment (in which we fully concur) thus paid to one body, to which the author himself belongs, is balanced by a slashing attack upon another body, for which (for some reason or other) Mr. Campbell seems to have contracted a dislike, namely, the Indian press, the emancipation of which he deeply laments. "It is certain," he says, "that the Indian press has become unscrupulous beyond all precedent, and extremely false and libellous, and that it is only tolerable because most of the papers have rendered themselves discredited and contemptible." This is pretty severe. But, in a subsequent part of the volume, he directly charges the "editors of Indian papers" with taking bribes. Adverting (p. 521) to the outcry raised in those papers on Jotee Pershad's behalf, he says: "They (the editors) are always willing enough to side against government, but, in the instance alluded to, they must undoubtedly have been stimulated by bribes, because the popular opinion in every Indian cantonment ran very strong against the commissariat, and they wrote in the teeth of the feeling of the great majority of their subscribers. The accused was rich, in danger, and ready with his money." We cannot acknowledge that Mr. Campbell's logic is of a very convincing kind,—that the conclusion necessarily follows from the premises.

A Letter on the Cultivation of Cotton, the Extension of Internal Communication, and other matters connected with India. Addressed to Sir Harry Verney, Bart., M.P. By EDWARD MONEY, of the 25th Regiment Bengal Native Infantry. London. Ridgway.

THE object of this little pamphlet is "to show briefly the causes that have, and do now, hinder the extension of the cotton cultivation in our Eastern possessions, and suggest how these hindering causes may be removed. Having been in India myself," the author adds, "for a number of years, and having been employed on the public works, both military and civil, during a part of which time I was located in one of the great cotton districts, and on one of the great cotton thoroughfares, of which road I had charge, my remarks on many points are the result of experience, and, if worth nothing else, have at least the weight of evidence."

It is with great satisfaction we find that he has adopted precisely the same views upon this subject as the writer of a series of papers, which appeared in our Journal some time back, on "Indian Cotton," and that, from the same facts, he has drawn the same conclusions.

ACTUARY.—David Jones, Esq.

The principle adopted by the Universal Life Assurance Society, of an annual valuation of assets and liabilities, and a division of three-fourths of the profits among the assured, is admitted to offer great advantages, especially to those parties who may wish to appropriate their proportion of profit to the reduction of future premiums.

The following Table will show the result of the last division of profits, as declared on the 14th of May, 1851, to all persons who had on that day paid six annual premiums, being a reduction of 45 per cent. on the current annual premium. This will be found a most liberal reduction, if the original premiums be compared with those of other offices adopting a similar plan of division of profits:—

Age when Policy was issued.	Date of Policy.	Sum assured.	Original Premium.	Reduced Ann. Premium for current Year.
20		£1,000	£19 6 8	£10 12 8
30	On or before	1,000	24 8 4	13 8 7
40	14th of May,	1,000	31 10 0	17 6 6
50	1846.	1,000	48 15 0	22 10 3
60		1,000	66 11 8	36 12 5

. The attention of Gentlemen connected with India is particularly requested to the Regulations of this Society; as, on comparison with other offices, its terms will be found peculiarly advantageous, especially as regards the liberal plan adopted on the return of Indian Assurers to reside permanently in this country; and the Indian Rates have been calculated from extensive data and Tables exclusively in the possession of this Society, by which the true risk of life during residence in India has been most accurately ascertained.

HINDUSTANI WORKS BY JOHN SHAKESPEAR, Esq.

NEW EDITION, with GREAT ADDITIONS.

This Day is published, the 4th Edition, in 1 vol. 4to. price £3. 5s. in boards, SHAKESPEAR'S HINDUSTANI and ENGLISH DICTIONARY, GREATLY ENLARGED: to which is added, a DICTIONARY, ENGLISH and HINDUSTANI, ENTIRELY NEW.

. To the First Part of this Dictionary, the author has, by laborious study of Hindustani works, both printed and manuscript, made the most extensive additions. In the Hindustani and English Part, the Hindustani words are printed in their proper characters, together with the pronunciation in Roman letters. The Derivatives, which are traced from the Sanskrit, Arabic, Hebrew, Persian, and Greek, are given respectively in the character peculiar to each of those languages.

The Second Part, English and Hindustani, is ENTIRELY NEW. It comprises the most common English words, and also numerous usual phrases, with the fittest corresponding translations into Hindustani.

REVIEW IN "TIMES," Jan. 3.—"Much attention has been paid to the collecting of scientific terms, especially botanical ones, as well as to the correct rendering them into the technology of Europe." * * * "The Hindustani and English Part of it now contains upwards of 83,000 words and phrases explained, being 7,000 more than in the last edition, and 11,000 more than in any other Dictionary of the like description now extant." * * * "In India, as well as in Europe, the character of this work has long been fully established, and the present edition will greatly enhance its reputation."

5th Edition, 1 vol. royal 8vo. price 14s.

A GRAMMAR of the HINDUSTANI LANGUAGE.

To which is added, a short Grammar of the Dakhni.

GREAT EXHIBITION, Class 3, No. 22,—a Case of INDIAN CONDIMENT, CURRIES, CHUTNEE, SAUCES, SEEDS, &c., by PAYNE and SON, 384 and 328, Regent Street, London, which obtained "THE HONOURABLE MENTION" of the Royal Commissioners.
THE BEST INDIAN CURRY POWDER, in 1 lb. bottles, 3s. 6d.; ½ lb., 2s. 3d.; and ¼ lb., 1s. 6d.; or 7 lb. bottles for 21s.
INDIAN CURRY and MULLIGATAWNY PASTE, in bottles 2s. 3d. and 3s. 6d. each.

THE DELHI CHUTNEE, 1s. 6d. per bottle.
THE INDIAN CURRY SAUCE, of superior quality, in antique bottles.—This novel and piquant Sauce is peculiarly adapted for Steaks, Chops, Game, Fish, Cold Meats, Soups, &c. The addition of a little of this Sauce, in cases where a curry cannot be procured, will prove a valuable accompaniment to connoisseurs.

All Indian Condiments, Mangoes, Sauces, &c., from Calcutta direct.
PAYNE and Co., Importers and Manufacturers, 384 and 328, Regent Street, London.—May be had of Messrs. DUNCAN MACLEAN and SONS, Prince Street, Edinburgh; BAXTER and SONS, Buchanan Street, Glasgow; or through any Italian Warehouse in the Kingdom.

TO LATE RESIDENTS IN INDIA.—TRUE
MADRAS CURRY, and MULLIGATAWNY PASTE and CHUTNIES.—Messrs. BARRIE and Co., Vepery, Madras, to enable their old correspondents returning from India to continue the use of the celebrated Condiments, have made arrangements to forward regular supplies of the above, packed in glass jars for family use, at 1s. 6d. and upwards, which may be had of CROSSE and BLACKWELL, Purveyors to Her Majesty, 21, Soho Square; FORTNUM, MASON, and Co., Piccadilly; and of the principal Sauce Vendors throughout the kingdom. Each bottle is labelled, and BARRIE and Co., Madras, stamped on the glass.

LADIES' & GENTLEMEN'S DRESSING CASES.—
MECHI, 4, Leadenhall Street, London.—His STOCK possesses peculiar advantages, both in quality and price. There is a general complaint that the internal fittings of dressing cases are often very inferior. Those who purchase at Mech's will be sure of having everything of the best, because he has long been celebrated for the superiority of his cutlery, and has bestowed equal pains in bringing to perfection his tooth, nail, hair, and shaving brushes; and other necessities. In fact, he considers it essential that each article in a dressing case should be perfect in itself, so as to render the whole useful and complete. Catalogues gratis. The largest assortment in London of papier maché manufactures, and the usual stock of articles suited for presents. Mech's peculiar steel razors, 7s. and 10s. per pair. His magic stops, 2s. 6d. to 6s. 6d.; paste, 6d. and 1s. per cake. Cutlery ground and repaired daily on the premises.
. All articles warranted to stand an Indian climate.

TO LADIES.—The high and universal celebrity which ROWLANDS' KALYDOR continues to maintain as an active, yet mild and soothing, extirpator of all impurities of the skin, is, during the period of Spring, most pleasantly evinced. This preparation, eminently balsamic, restorative, and invigorating, is equally distinguished for safety in application, as for unfailing efficacy in eradicating all redness, tan, pimples, spots, freckles, discolorations, and other cutaneous visitations. The radiant bloom it imparts to the cheek, and the softness and delicacy which it induces on the hands and arms, render it indispensable to every toilet. To ladies during the period of nursing, and as a wash for infants, it cannot be too strongly recommended. Gentlemen, after shaving, will find it allay all irritation and tenderness of the skin, and render it soft, smooth, and pleasant. Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle.

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL, for the growth, and for preserving, improving, and beautifying the human hair. Price 3s. 6d. and 7s.; family bottles (equal to four small), 10s. 6d., and double that size, 21s. per bottle.

ROWLANDS' ODONTO, or PEARL DENTIFRICE, for preserving and beautifying the teeth, strengthening the gums, and for rendering the breath sweet and pure. Price 2s. 9d. per box.

The patronage of Royalty throughout Europe, their general use by the aristocracy and the déte of fashion, and the well-known infallible efficacy of these articles, have given them a celebrity unparalleled.

Beware of SPURIOUS IMITATIONS!—The only genuine of each bears the name of "ROWLANDS," preceding that of the article on the wrapper or label. Sold by A. ROWLAND & SONS, 20, Hatton Garden, London; and by Chemists and Perfumers.

DECAYED TEETH and TOOTH-ACHE.—Price 2s. 6d.
—Patronized by Her Majesty and H.R.H. Prince Albert. Mr. HOWARD'S WHITE SUCCEEDANUM for stopping decayed Teeth, however large the cavity. It is placed in the tooth in a soft state, without any pressure or pain, and immediately HARDENS INTO A WHITE ENAMEL; it will remain in the tooth many years, rendering extraction unnecessary, and arresting the further progress of decay, and is far superior to anything ever before used, as it will NEVER BECOME DISCOLOURED in the tooth. All persons use it themselves with ease, as full directions are enclosed. Prepared only by Mr. Howard, Surgeon-Dentist, 17, George Street, Hanover Square, who will send it into the country free by post. Sold by Savory, 220, Regent Street; Sanger, 150, and Hannay, 63, Oxford Street; Butler, 4, Cheapside; Johnston, 68, Cornhill; and all medicine vendors in the kingdom. Price 2s. 6d. Mr. Howard continues to supply the loss of teeth on his NEW SYSTEM of SELF-ADHESION, without springs or wires. This method does not require the extraction of any teeth or roots, or any painful operation whatever. 17, George Street, Hanover Square. At home from 10 till 4.

STEAM TO INDIA, CHINA, &c.—Particulars of the regular Monthly Mail Steam Conveyance and of the additional lines of communication, now established by the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company with the East, &c. The Company book passengers, and receive goods and parcels as heretofore for CEYLON, MADRAS, CALCUTTA, PENANG, SINGAPORE, and HONG-KONG, by their steamers, starting from SOUTHAMPTON on the 20th of every month, and from SUEZ on or about the 8th of the month.

The next extra Steamer will be despatched from Southampton for Alexandria on the 3rd April next, in combination with an extra steamer, to leave Calcutta on or about the 20th March. Passengers may be booked, and goods and parcels forwarded by these extra steamers to or from SOUTHAMPTON, ALEXANDRIA, ADEN, CEYLON, MADRAS, and CALCUTTA.

BOMBAY.—The Company will book passengers throughout from SOUTHAMPTON to BOMBAY by their Steamers leaving England on the 20th March, and of alternate months thereafter, such passengers being conveyed from ADEN to BOMBAY by their steamers appointed to leave BOMBAY on the 1st April, and 1st of alternate months thereafter, and affording, in connection with the Steamers leaving CALCUTTA on the 20th March, and of alternate months thereafter, direct conveyance for passengers, parcels, and goods, from BOMBAY and WESTERN INDIA.

Passengers for Bombay can also proceed by this Company's steamers of the 29th of the month to Malta, thence to Alexandria by her Majesty's steamers, and from Suez by the Honourable East-India Company's steamers.

MEDITERRANEAN.—MALTA.—On the 20th and 29th of every month. Constantinople—On the 29th of the month. Alexandria—On the 20th of the month. (The rates of passage-money on these lines have been materially reduced.)

SPAIN AND PORTUGAL.—Vigo, Oporto, Lisbon, Cadiz, and Gibraltar, on the 7th, 17th, and 27th of the month.

N.B. Steam-ships of the Company now ply direct between Calcutta, Penang, Singapore, and Hong-Kong, and between Hong-Kong and Shanghai.

For further information and tariffs of the Company's recently revised and reduced rates of passage money and freight, and for plans of the vessels, and to secure passages, &c., apply at the Company's offices, 122, Leadenhall-street, London, and Oriental-place, Southampton.

TO PRESERVE LIFE IN SHIPWRECK.

LAURIE'S PATENT FLOATABLE MATTRESSES
(NOT INFLATED), PILLOWS, LIFE BELTS, and sundry buoyant articles. S. W. SILVER and Co., Sole Licensees. Every Ship Mattress will sustain eight persons in the water for an indefinite period, and at a small increase on the usual cost of those in common use. Every pillow or seat-cushion will sustain one or more persons. The Life Belts are preventives to sinking, the cheapest yet submitted, very portable, and applied in an instant in case of accident. Thus, every Sailing vessel, Steamer, Yacht, Boat, or craft of any kind, and every person on board, ought to be furnished with those clever Sinking-Preventives, which may be seen and tested at the manufacturers', S. and W. SILVER and Co., Clothiers, Outfitters, and Contractors, 66 and 67, CORNHILL, and 4, BISHOPSGATE STREET, LONDON; and at LIVERPOOL, where Passengers may be supplied with the whole or any portion of their Outfit without sacrificing the too usual intermediate profit, SILVER and Co. being the Makers of the Manifold Articles in the Outfit, and supplying them at their Shipping Prices, including Folding Furniture for Cabin use on the Voyage, which is so contrived as to form a supply on arrival. Department for Outfitting Cadets, Clergymen, and Cabin Passengers generally, Naval and Military Uniforms, and Clothing for Home use, at 66 and 67, CORNHILL. HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS HAVE

AGAIN BEEN MOST EFFICACIOUS IN CURING A SORE LEG. John Thomas, a labourer, far advanced in years, residing at Penmaen-beck, Conway, had suffered for a very considerable time from a dreadfully sore leg, and was for many months under the care of eminent medical men, but their remedies appeared perfectly useless. He then commenced using Holloway's Ointment and Pills, and after giving them a fair trial, his leg was completely cured, and the wound soundly healed. These medicines exceed all others in the cure of scrofula, or king's evil, glandular and other unnatural swellings, scurvy, leprosy, and all skin diseases.

Sold by all Druggists, and at Professor Holloway's establishment, 244 Strand, London; and by all European and Native vendors of medicine throughout the whole of the East Indies.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE second Burmese war has commenced. The Irrawaddy probably at this moment bears a fleet of eight war-steamers, and an army of 8,000 men is prepared to lay the cities of Rangoon and Martaban in ruins. The Supreme Government, finding negotiations utterly fruitless, appears resolved to prosecute the war with promptitude and vigour, so as to bring it to an issue before the rains.

The occurrences at Rangoon are detailed in a succeeding page. It appears that the Governor-General's letter was treated with marked and intentional insult. Very reasonable and moderate conditions had been proposed for terminating the dispute; namely, the payment of Rs. 9,000 in compensation of extortions from British subjects; the location of a resident at Rangoon; and an apology; and the governor was informed that, when the money was paid, the King's ship would be returned, and an officer of high rank appointed to settle all the differences. On receipt of his instructions on the 30th January, the commodore intimated to the Rangoon authorities that he should ascend the river in his frigate next morning, as the bearer of a fresh communication from the Governor-General. The first stockade he passed the following day, the De Silva, opened a heavy fire on the Fox, which killed one of her crew in the gig. The frigate returned the fire with round and shell, but without stopping her course, silencing the enemy's guns, and setting the stockade on fire. The next stockade, the Dunnoo, opened a fire also, but its shot fell wide of the frigate; the commodore therefore passed it without firing. Two other of the stockades opened a fire on the steamer Tenasserim, which followed the Fox a few hours after; she returned the fire of the first with a few rounds of shot and shell, and eight or ten rockets; the latter set the work on fire, and it continued burning for about six hours. On arriving, the 1st February, off the newly-erected fortifications, which occupy the site of the late town of Rangoon, the commodore sent Captain Latter and Lieutenant Spratt, with a flag of truce, to the governor, with Lord Dalhousie's letter, which they delivered to an officer who had been sent to the wharf to meet them.

A letter from the fleet, published in the Englishman, says,—

"The Burmese have lost no time in preparing for the worst. The whole scene is entirely changed; the town of Rangoon is destroyed, the jungle and villages near the Pagoda are all cleared away, and we have now a beautiful sight of the Dagon and all the smaller pagodas. They have now a stockade apparently all round the new town, and enclosing also the Pagoda; there are other stockades being erected along the banks of the river, near the site of the old town; and they appear to have turned the main wharf into a battery, which I have no doubt they consider very formidable, having built it in, and strengthened it by a quantity of large logs of timber; but as it is built athwart, the frigate could rake it fore and aft, and in two or three minutes dismount every gun."

On the 2nd February, a boat arrived, bringing two letters from the governor of Rangoon; one for the Governor-General of India, and the other for the commodore. They were brought aboard the Fox with studied indignity. The boat was one of the most common country boats, and the three bearers were men of no rank whatever,—one a little shop-keeper in the cloth bazaar. In the letters, the governor said, that when the agent was sent down, he would talk over the subject; and in answer to a paragraph in the commodore's letter, expressing his surprise at being fired into by the stockades on his passage up the river with the letters, after the deputy-governor of Dalla had been positively informed, that, on their arrival, they would be brought up by the frigate or steamer, he says, "I have given orders to fire into any vessels daring to pass the stockades without permission."

The Burmese authorities, it appears, had opened a communication through their governor of Martaban and our commissioner at Maulmain, and the Governor-General having promised that, on their acceding to his moderate demands, he would send down a high functionary to settle the terms of peace and friendship, they requested that this official might be sent immediately. Another letter from the King to the Governor-General had been received through Maulmain, where it was delivered with the proper formalities. Nothing had transpired as to the contents of this epistle, which had not suspended the warlike preparations.

Our frontiers nearest to Burmah were ordered to be watched, and arrangements had been made to meet any sudden aggression. H.M.'s 18th Royal Irish were despatched from Calcutta to Maulmain; two native corps and three companies of artillery were to follow. A like force of artillery and native infantry were to be provided from Madras, being in all two European (18th and 51st) and four native (38th and 67th Bengal, and 9th and 35th Madras) corps, with four companies of artillery, mostly Europeans, in addition to those on board the Bombay steamers. The 49th and 26th Madras native infantry are betwixt Maulmain and Mergui—they probably number about 1,200 men; so that in all we shall have about 10,000 fighting men, independent of the ships' crews, at disposal. The entire force is to be commanded by Major-General Godwin, C.B., of H.M.'s army, who was present throughout the last Burmese war, from 1825 to 1827, with Brigadiers Warren and Elliott to command the Bengal and Madras brigades respectively. Col. Foord, of the Madras army, is to be in charge of the artillery, and Major Frazer, of the Bengal army, of the engineers. Orders were received at Bombay for the despatch for the Bay of Bengal, as speedily as possible, of all the steamers which could be spared; and a squadron, under the command of Captain Lynch, consisting of the Feroze, transformed from a packet to a frigate, the Moozuffer, and the Sesostrie frigate, with the troop steamer Berenice, sailed within five days' time of their being aware that there was any chance of their being required. The Queen was to follow, with the Medusa iron steamer. From Calcutta, the Enterprise, Fire Queen, Tenasserim, and Phlegethon, with the iron steamer Nemesis, were under orders. The vessels of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, capable of transporting 1,000 men each, were also available as troop-ships. The squadron was to sail direct for Rangoon and Martaban, cities by the river side, of 30,000 and 10,000 inhabitants respectively: as they are constructed chiefly of wood, our first fire will set them in a blaze. By some it is surmised that the river steamers will push on as far as draught of water will allow, the fleet remaining at hand throughout the rains.

The Bombay Times reports the arrival of despatches from Burmah, professing a desire for peace; the first condition being, that we should change the channel of communication to Major Bogle, the commissioner, instead of Commodore Lambert.

Intelligence had reached Calcutta, that 6,000 Burmese were encamped on their side the Aeeng Pass, ready to invade Arracan the moment war is declared. The pass, which may be considered the key to the interior of Ava, had been reinforced, and the other principal parts of the frontier were considered strong enough to resist any predatory incursion.

The news from the north-west, though devoid of incident, is nevertheless considered to be of a discouraging nature. When the force under Sir Colin Campbell first took the field, it was announced that the most vigorous measures were to be adopted; that a cordon of forts was to be established along our frontier westward of Peshawur, connected by strong patrolling parties, that would cut off the retreat of marauders. "From the first," says the Delhi Gazette, "we believe Sir Colin Campbell expressed his disapprobation of these plans, and declared that they would prove abortive, unless a powerful force was sent into the hills to hunt out the barbarians, and utterly destroy their homes and property. Such being the case, we cannot but think it an unwise act on the part of Government to have bestowed the command of the expedition on a general who was known to be averse to the plan of operations that was contemplated. What, indeed, has been the result? A miserable mud fort has been partially constructed, in which a detachment of troops is confined as closely as are the Russians in their most advanced strongholds in Circassia. No man dare wander a mile from its friendly protection, nor is it safe to travel thence to Peshawur, a distance of only twenty miles, without an armed escort."

On the 15th, the whole of Sir Colin's force moved into cantonments at Peshawur. A garrison was left in the fort of Dubb, another at Shubkuddur, and a company of the 29th N.I., under Lieut. Davidson, had been sent to relieve the company of the 23rd N.I., at the bridge of boats. The troops had destroyed a number of villages within our own territory.

The only person who is said to have any influence with these border tribes is Colonel Mackeson; partly owing to his familiar acquaintance with the Pushtoo, or vernacular language, and partly to his tact and good temper.

The five Teekal Urbabs, whom we mentioned in our last Summary as having been seized by Colonel Mackeson, had been sent off to Hindustan, it having been clearly proved that they had intrigued with the enemy.

Saadut Khan is said to have acted with great indiscretion. "Instead of endeavouring to conciliate the Affghan ruler, or his people," observes the Delhi editor, "he has been guilty of the folly of detaining a very large kafilah from Cabul, at the same time declaring that he would allow no trade to be held with the Feringhees. As a large portion of the Ameer's revenue is derived from this traffic, it was scarcely probable that he would tamely submit to such an insult and outrage. Accordingly, Gholam Hyder instantly proceeded to Jellalabad to compel the Momund chieftain to make restitution of his ill-gotten spoils."

There is no later intelligence from Herat. The snow had blocked up the roads between Cabul and Candahar, through which latter place runs the road to Herat. It is very certain, however, that the Persians are in Herat.

From Scinde we learn that the commissioner and other civil authorities looked upon everything as settled. The northern division under Brigadier Hewitt had retraced its steps towards Mooltan: it was at Naoshera on the 12th February. The Bombay division, lately under the command of General Manson (who died of dysentery on the 23rd February), had commenced its retrograde movement towards Kurrachee. Ali Moorad's army of 200 men had not allowed him to retire quietly; they broke out into open rebellion against him, and a party of the Scinde horse had to be sent for to put down the émeute, on which occasion seven of the rebels were killed. Ali Moorad had sent in his guns. A letter from Kurrachee says: "Ali Moorad has not only given up his possessions quietly, but has expressed his exceeding amazement at our sending an army at all to take possession; officers are at present in the districts, and the whole affair will, in a very short time, be numbered amongst the things that were."

The intelligence from Oude and the Deccan presents no feature of interest or importance.

The Commander-in-Chief was at Lahore, where he arrived on the 19th February.

Sir John Grey had resigned the command of the Bombay army, and proceeded to Europe.

There is nothing in the news from other parts which invites prominent notice.

BURMAH.

The Fire Queen has arrived from Rangoon. She left Calcutta with the Governor-General's despatches on the 28th of January, reached the mouth of the Rangoon river on the 30th, and then towed the Fox frigate up the river. On passing the stockade both the steamer and frigate were fired upon, by which a man from the Fox was killed. The fire was returned from the frigate with shot and shell. The Tenasserim steamer, passing up the next day, was also fired into, and the Fire Queen again in passing down. The Fox returned from Rangoon in tow of the Tenasserim, and was not fired upon, in consequence of the commodore having informed the Governor of Rangoon that, if another shot was fired, he would utterly destroy the stockades. The commodore, on arriving off Rangoon, sent a boat in charge of a lieutenant, accompanied by Capt. Latter, with a flag of truce, to convey a letter from the Governor-General and one from himself. They were received at the wharf by a golden umbrella'd official. The next morning, 2nd February, a reply was brought by a dirty unofficial man, looking like a labourer, in a common canoe, befitting his appearance. Here ends the negotiation for the present. It is said that the Governor-General made no fresh demands, except for a written apology from the Rangoon Governor to himself, for the insult offered to our officers. The former demand was £900 compensation for the losses sustained by Captains Lewis and Sheppard, and the admission of a resident or agent at Rangoon or Ava. The Governor-General will deserve a statue from the Peace Society for the moderation of these terms. As to the poor commodore, the Governor has distinctly announced his determination not to treat except with some other commissioner. The Burmese are fully prepared for war; the old town of Rangoon has been cleared of its inhabitants, and fortified. Three forts have been erected with the most singular rapidity, and one hundred pieces of cannon mounted on them. The most extensive preparations have been made to meet us in the field; and it is difficult to perceive how these warlike arrangements can be compatible with a resolution to submit to our demands. To all appearance, the public authorities at Rangoon are resolved to try conclusions with us in the field before they comply with our requisitions.—Friend of India, Feb. 12.

The plans of Government are now definitively developed. Two expeditions are to be fitted out with all speed, the one to be despatched from Calcutta, the other from Madras. Each division will consist of one European and several native regiments, with a large complement of artillery. H.M.'s 80th Foot is now on its way down from Dinapore in all haste, and the arsenal in Fort William resounds with preparations. The Government steamers have been ordered round from Bombay to Madras to convey the troops from thence to their destination. General Godwin, recently returned from England, who now commands the division of Umballa, will take the command of the expedition. The Governor-General has done wisely in selecting an officer who was employed during the last Burmese war, and who adds to all his other qualifications, an acquaintance with the country and the people, and their mode of warfare; the appointment has given general satisfaction. General Steel, of the Madras army, possesses the same advantages of local experience for the command of the Madras division. He was engaged throughout the last enterprise, and the general voice of the community seems to point him out as the fittest officer for the command.

It is said to be intended that the two divisions shall embark with as little delay as possible, and that they are expected to capture the towns of Rangoon and Martaban, and complete the object of the expedition before the rains set in. The Chronicle affirms that they are simply to reduce these two towns to ruins, "to level Rangoon with the dust, so as not to leave one stone upon another; houses, stores, pagodas and all will be annihilated by our artillery." According to the Englishman, the expedition is intended "to display to the Burmese what is in store for them, if they persist in refusing redress for the injuries inflicted on British subjects." But we cannot bring ourselves to the conclusion that the Governor-General intends to fit out an expedition of eight or ten thousand men simply to burn down two seaports, and then to retire from the country, in the hope that the Burmese court will sue for peace to prevent a repetition of the bombardment, and a march to the capital. If our troops retire before a final settlement of the dispute, it will be the first instance in our Indian history of such an experiment, and we think, that as it has no past experience to support the probability of its success, so it will find few, if any, advocates among our military authorities. Our retirement will be attributed to fear; even if it were known that the dread of the rains, and not of the Burmese arms, had induced this hejirah, still the discovery that there was one season of the year in which we could not carry on operations, would tend rather to give heart to the cabinet of Ava, than to subdue it by terror; and the demolition of Rangoon would be forgotten, as soon as we had been compelled to retire from the scene. If we are constrained to send a large and expensive armament to Burmah, we ought not to lose the opportunity of connecting our possessions in Arracan with those in Moulmein, by the permanent occupation of the intermediate province. To enter upon a second Burmese war without a determination to annex the maritime provinces would be an act of inconceivable impolicy, with which we sincerely trust our Government will not be chargeable.

The Phlegethon arrived on Sunday last from Moulmein, with despatches for the Governor-General. It appears that the king had sent a communication to Col. Bogle, the commissioner, requesting that negotiations might be again opened, and that a negotiator other than Commodore Lambert might be appointed to treat. The royal letter has, it is said, rendered a pacific termination of the difficulties once more a subject of hope, but it is not allowed to interfere with our preparations. For our part, we have little confidence in the sincerity of the monarch. The proposal is the same which was made by the Plenipotentiary at Rangoon, and emanates from the same source. If the Woongee at Rangoon felt that his master was tremblingly alive to the importance of peace, he would not have insulted the commodore by sending his reply through the hands of a labourer, in a common boat. If these communications were designed for any other purpose than to gain time, the despatch would have been transmitted under circumstances calculated to ensure its success.—Ibid. Feb. 19.

Lieut.-Gen. Godwin, C.B., is to assume command of the Rangoon expedition. Col. George Warren is to command the Bengal brigade, the Madras authorities making their own arrangements for the command of theirs. H.M.'s 80th Foot have left Dinapore for the presidency, but as yet the 29th Foot, at Meerut, had not been ordered down to take their place. There is no doubt that this will be the arrangement, but it has been left entirely to the Commander-in-Chief, and the orders will come from him. The 80th can embark here 900 bayonets strong. All the commissariat, ordnance, and other preparations for the expedition, are being carried on here with great activity, and everything will be ready for the reception and transport of the troops before they arrive at the presidency.

Major Hugh Frazer, of the Bengal Engineers, is warned for service in Burmah, and goes down in command of the contingent of that arm, which will be attached to the Rangoon and Martaban expedition. The Burmese portion of the town of Rangoon is known to be strongly fortified, and the big pagoda is peculiarly formidable, and it is said will have to be taken by regular trenches and approaches. The details of his portion of the force, and the selection of the subordinates, &c. have been left to Major Frazer's own arrangement, and are all being got ready for the expedition, which will sail from Bengal and Mudras, if the Burmese should not give in previously, about the 25th of next month. The letter from the King of Ava to the Governor-General of India is, it is true, pacific, but what reliance is to be placed on its sincerity is another consideration.—Morn. Chron. Feb. 19.

Mr. SUTHERLAND has tendered his resignation of the marine secretaryship, in consequence of his medical advisers having recommended him not to spend another year in India; not on account of any particular illness, but a general decline of health, occasioned by his long residence in this country and incessant and arduous occupation.

Mr. BLUNT, late of the civil service, has sued the managers and trustees of the Civil Service Annuity Fund for the amount of his subscriptions thereto over and above the value of his annuity at the age of seventy-two, as ascertained by the table annexed to the rules of the institution; and also to recover the sum of Co.'s Rs. 4,667-5-3 paid by him (under protest) on retirement, for the purpose of obtaining payment of his annuity quarterly and rateably up to the time of his decease, instead of at the expiration of each year, as contemplated by the original constitution of the Fund. The main question was decided against him; but he had a verdict for the amount which he had paid, under protest, to obtain the annuity. This will carry the costs of the action.

THE 38TH N.I.—Five or six of the native officers of the 38th N.I., stationed at Barrackpore, proceeded to Fort William, where a detachment of the corps was doing duty, to induce the men to join them in volunteering for foreign service, on certain conditions, one of which was the retention of Col. Burney in the command of the corps.

LIEUT. BULNOIS.—The following extract of a letter, dated Peshawur, 18th January, gives a very particular and, we have reason to believe, authentic account of the circumstances attending the death of Lieut. Bulnois: "He, in the evening, went out riding with three officers of the 71st N.I. They got rather a long way from the fort, riding towards a small tower or fortalice at the foot of the hills. At length, one of the party suggested that they had come too near the place, as there might be some men in it. Bulnois laughed, and said that the place was deserted. While two of them turned, he rode on to the tower, and the fourth officer about 200 yards behind him. Bulnois got up to the tower, which is a small mud place, and struck it with his riding-whip, when suddenly a party of men rushed from one side, and shot him off his horse. They then dragged him away. Bulnois's brother officers, being wholly unarmed, tried to get off, but were nearly killed, as the ground was so bad that they could not gallop, and the instant Bulnois was shot, the hill fellows came swarming down, and fired at them for a long way, but they luckily got off uninjured. On getting back to Dub, the commandant went out with a party of Irregulars, who were fired on. Infantry was then sent, but when they came to the scene of the murder they found the place abandoned. They also found poor Bulnois's coat, with thirteen tulwar cuts in it. The body was recovered through negotiation, being brought in by the thanadar of one of the villages. It was buried in the fort of Dub. By all accounts he was shot through the body and head."

MIRZA FUTEH-OOZ-MOOLK, the presumptive heir to the Delhi musnud, visited the Lieut.-Governor in private, and his honour was much pleased with the acquirements of the prince. This visit so much annoyed the king, who is anxious to nominate his own heir, that he has done everything in his power to lower him in the eyes of the rest of the family; he has even ordered his allowances to be reduced.—Delhi Gaz.

INSOLVENTS.—Fifteen cases were heard in the Calcutta Insolvent Court on the 7th February, of which two or three were of considerable interest. Mr. D. C. Mackey, of the firm of that name, obtained his discharge from the liabilities of the house, and his private account, without opposition. Col. A. Harvey also obtained his discharge, on condition of making over his off-reckonings to his creditors. Major George Cox, of the Invalids, applied for release from liabilities to a very large amount, but the case was adjourned, to enable him to state more clearly, how he had disposed of a bonus of Rs. 30,000, which he had received from his corps for invaliding. He had incurred liabilities to the extent of more than Rs. 50,000, but had kept no accounts.

THE SUTTEE AT PACHETE.—A commission has been appointed to investigate the circumstances of the reported sutttee at Pachete. The commissioners are Capt. G. N. Oakes and Mr. A. W. Russel. The Englishman says, that two women servants of the Ranee were immolated with their mistress on the occasion of the sutttee.

SILVER ORE.—At a meeting of the Asiatic Society, a small medal was exhibited made of silver from argentiferous ore, found in Deoghur. The specimen of ore forwarded to Mr. Piddington by Captain Sherwill, weighed 14 lbs., and from it 154 grains of silver were extracted. The ore does not appear to be readily procurable, but the amount extracted proves that it would repay the expense of working.

THE BANKS.—The divisible surplus of the Agra Bank amounts to 3,26,469-14-7, which provides for the usual dividend of 8 per cent, and leaves a sum to be carried to the credit of the Reserve Fund, that brings up that fund to nearly 10 per cent. on the working capital. The Delhi Bank has declared a dividend of 9 per cent.

MR. D. PRINGLE, whose resignation of the civil service has been notified in the Gazette, and whose name appears in the list of passengers for England, per Oriental, has not left Calcutta. On coming down here he learnt that the commissioners, in their report on Mr. Cruise's charges, had made certain statements which might have an injurious and unjust effect on his character, should publicity be given to them hereafter. He, therefore, determined to forfeit his passage, to remain here, and to demand an inquiry. We think this resolution is highly creditable to Mr. Pringle, and the adoption of a course so bold and honourable disposes us to think favourably of his case.—Hurkaru, Feb. 10.

DEPARTMENTAL CHANGES.—We are informed that final orders have been issued for the amalgamation of the Punjab branches of the offices of accountant and civil auditor, now at Agra, with those of the N.W. Provinces. This arrangement would appear to settle the question of the removal of the former to Lahore, and may be looked upon as the precursor of others and final ones connected with the Punjab.—Lahore Chron. Feb. 11.

QUARREL OF ZEMINDARS.—The Citizen records, on the authority of a correspondent at Ugruddepa, a great battle which has taken place there between two zemindars well known in Burdwan and Kishnagur. The number of men engaged is said to have been about 500, many of whom had guns, and several lives were lost.

BORNEO PIRATES.—An expedition (including the Cleopatra and Philo steamers) is to be sent from Singapore against the pirates on the N.E. coast of Borneo.

THE BISHOP OF CALCUTTA states, that he did not give the obnoxious order regarding the burial ground gate.

THE UNION BANK.—The Calcutta Journals mention that Mr. Fulton, an attorney, despatched to Calcutta by the English shareholders of the Union Bank, in concert with other parties interested in the fate of that unfortunate concern, has called a meeting of shareholders for the 28th February, the object of which is to discover the disposal of certain property, believed to have been in the possession of the bank at the time of its failure, and to devise measures for its recovery, should that be considered practicable. The sum is considerable, being the value of 20,000 chests of Indigo.

OPIMUM.—Gambling, according to the Hurkaru, is again going on to an immense extent. A large portion of the drug offered at the last sale, was bought up by a single purchaser, who ran the price up in such a manner as seriously to interfere with the shipments. To such an extent has this been the case, that the P. and O. Company's steamer Shanghai, and the opium clipper were all detained in port, awaiting the settlement of the affair. The late decisions in the supreme courts against these bets have had little or no effect, as the native "bears and bulls" seldom or never resort to a legal tribunal for the settlement of their disputes.

EXTRAORDINARY ARREST.—A gentleman of high respectability, proceeding to England in the February steamer, the Oriental, which left Calcutta on Sunday morning, was arrested by a bailiff in his cabin at twelve o'clock at night, and compelled to return to Calcutta. It appears that the bailiff, unable to effect the capture on Sunday, quietly went on board and waited until the day had expired, and then burst into the gentleman's cabin, smashing the fine inlaid panel door, and secured his prisoner. On his arrival in Calcutta, the gentleman discovered that he had been securit, many years ago, for a debt of certain tradesmen to a certain amount, which had been paid off, although the trading firm had subsequently incurred fresh responsibilities to its creditors. The gentleman, we are informed, is a member of a wealthy firm, and left his partners, his business, and his property in Calcutta, so that his arrest and forcible return appear to have been a most vexatious and unnecessary proceeding. Since his arrival in Calcutta, he has been liberated without bail. —Delhi Gaz. Feb. 21.

THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.—A small portion, some fourteen or fifteen miles, of the great western road, lies along the right bank of the Hooghly, from Moyapoor upwards to Calcutta. The managers of the electric telegraph have found a new use for the wonderful power placed at their disposal. They noted the passing of the runners with the express from Bombay, and signified the fact to all Calcutta three hours before the mail could reach its destination.

ON DTS.—Lieut. Gen. Auchmuty, c.s. will be appointed temporary commander of the forces, on the retirement of Sir John Grey.—Col. Birch is to supersede Col. Stuart, c.s., as military secretary to Government.—Capt. Colebrooke, lately appointed to the command of the regiment of Ferozepore, is to have command of the Bhaugulpore hill rangers, which appointment has become vacant by the death of Capt. Don.—Capt. Renny, 2nd in command of the Ferozepore corps, will, it is said, have the command.—The brigade staff of the divided posts of Wuzerabad and Seealkote will be stationed, for the future, at the latter place, and Brigadier Hearsey has taken up his quarters there accordingly.—The arrangement by which Lieut. Currie, commissary of ordnance at Lahore, was to proceed to the Arsenal, has been set aside, and he will, in all probability, succeed Capt. G. L. Cooper at Cawnpore.—Mr. Morland succeeds to the judgeship of Agra. On the promotion of Mr. Martin Gubbins, which will take place very shortly, Mr. Riddell, post-master general N.W.P., will be appointed magistrate and collector of Agra; and Mr. Spankie will in all probability, succeed Mr. Riddell.—The services of the Rev. A. W. Wallis, have been placed at the disposal of the Government of Bengal.—The Rev. Horatio Moule, now at Singapore, is to succeed the Rev. H. Smith, as chaplain of St. Paul's Church at Agra.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

GENERAL OFFICERS ON THE DIVISIONAL STAFF.

Pursuant to instructions from the Honourable the Court of Directors, communicated in paragraphs 11 and 12 of the military letter No. 95, dated 10th September, 1851, the Most Noble the Governor-General of India in Council is pleased to declare that henceforth general officers on the permanent divisional staff of the armies of the three presidencies will be subject, during authorized absence, whether in India or at sea within Indian limits, to the rules which regulate the allowances of other staff officers when absent on leave, on medical certificate, or on private affairs.

2. A general officer on the divisional staff will accordingly, when proceeding on general leave, forfeit Rupees (1,086-3-2) one thousand and eighty-six, three annas and two pie, per mensem, or half the difference between his salary of Rupees (3,333-5-4) three thousand three hundred and thirty-three, five annas and four pie a month, and the aggregate of the Batta (760-15-0) seven hundred and sixty and fifteen annas, and tentage, Rupees (400) four hundred, therein included.

3. In case of his being compelled, by sickness or other cause, to leave his division for any time exceeding six months, a special appointment will be made for the discharge of his duties. For any shorter time of absence the command may, with the sanction of Government, be allowed to devolve on the next senior officer in the division. In both cases the portion of salary forfeited by the absentee will, with the Indian pay and allowances, extra batta, if entitled thereto, or regimental house rent, if not so entitled, and the tentage of the regimental rank of the locum tenens, form his entire remuneration for his duties.

MADRAS.

CULTIVATION OF THE SHEVAROY HILLS.

The Shevaroy hills, in the Salem district, consist of a series of elevated ranges, upon which tea, coffee, and a variety of valuable products can be raised with much facility. The native inhabitants are rude and totally uneducated. The land is assessed, on an average, at one, or at most two, annas an acre, and pays perhaps about Rs. 5,000 a year. There are no roads except those made by the people themselves. A church and a reading-room both grace the principal station of Yernaad, but they have been established without the slightest aid from Government. About 2,500 acres of ground have been taken up for the cultivation of coffee, four-fifths of which are now covered with trees in full bearing. There are thirty planters, European and East-Indian, on the hills, and about a dozen good houses have been erected for the convenience of the more wealthy of their number, and that of the civilians stationed at Salem. The climate is very delightful, and, combined with the great attractions of the locality, would no doubt entice many Europeans to settle, were it not that the ingenious devices of the Company interpose insuperable objections to the employment of capital.

The apparent profits of a well-cultivated estate on the Shevaroy hills are great; perhaps they reach thirty per cent. over the income of a coffee plantation of equal extent in Ceylon, owing to the cheapness of labour and the better climate; but the first holders have scarcely reason to congratulate themselves on their prospects. Five out of six of the small planters have been obliged to resign their hopes of independence; in many cases just as they had broken the neck of their difficulties. And they were just the men who might have been expected to succeed. They overlooked their plantations themselves, and were forced from necessity to keep down the cost of cultivation as much as possible. No better results followed in the case of an estate belonging to the late Mr. Neave, upon which upwards of a lakh of rupees has been expended. In consequence of his death, it is now in the market, and will not realise a fourth of the capital embarked. We are not about to investigate at this moment the causes of these failures at opposite ends of the social scale. Our object in alluding to them is merely to show that the chances of realising profit are sufficiently precarious without the imposition of needless burdens on the part of the public.

The cost of cultivating lands is about Rs. 5-8 per acre monthly, out of which at least Rs. 4 is paid for labour. On the whole extent of the area taken up, Rs. 8,000 a month is laid out in wages, all of which, by a process more or less direct, finds its way to the pockets of Honourable John in the payment of kists. An acre of land produces about 8 cwt. of coffee, which at 45s., the average price of the Shevaroy article, gives a gross annual value of 36,000l., and 800 tons of shipping are required to convey it home, at an ordinary freight of 3l. 10s. Up to the close of 1850, many new tracts of jungle land had been taken up and cleared. Hitherto the lands required for coffee-planting had been freely granted at an assessment of one rupee an acre, which is eight times as much as the natives pay to Government; but about the time alluded to, Mr. Fischer, the well-known semindar of Salem, applied for some jungle adjoining his beautiful estate of Balmudies, expecting of course to obtain it on the usual terms. In reply he received the following official letter from Mr. T. Conway, the sub-collector of Salem: "With reference to your application for a grant of the lands on the Shevaroy hills, situated opposite to your bungalow at the Balmudies, I have the honour to forward for your information the annexed transcript of a rule of Government, which requires that such lands should be put up to public competition, and request to know whether you are prepared to take the lands at an upset price of eight rupees an acre, in the event of no competitor appearing to enhance it. 'If, on careful inquiry being made upon the above points, the result should be satisfactory, a full report is to be made to the Board of Revenue upon the subject, embracing all particulars and accompanied by an extract from the Survey of the Neilgherries, so as to exhibit the extent and situation of the land applied for, and of that in its immediate vicinity. On their approval being signified, the collector will, after due notice, proceed to put up the land to public auction, at an upset price, in the manner which may appear to him most convenient and best adapted for insuring fair and equal competition. The upset price must vary with circumstances, but should usually be from eight to ten years' assessment of the land to be sold. The amount which he would propose for such price should always be stated in his preliminary report to the Board—and it is to be understood as being altogether distinct from, and in addition to, the actual land assessment, which will be collected yearly according to the terms of the lease. The land will then be knocked down to the highest bidder, or to the original applicant at the upset price, if there be no advance upon it, but under the following conditions and limitations.'"

As we are writing for the public, and not for revenue boards and governors in council, it would be wasting time to point out the obvious consequences of this wretched policy. It is enough to say that not a rood of land has been taken up from the day it was first promulgated. There are not less than 20,000 acres still available for planting, which if cultivated would compel an expenditure of Rs. 80,000 a month for wages, and in five years hence yield a crop worth 360,000l. a year, and give employment to 8,000 tons of shipping! When the sub-collector was remonstrated with on the subject of the new orders, he showed a fine appreciation of the wisdom of "superior authority" by remarking, that "they wanted capitalists and not paupers in the hills." —Athenaeum.

THE FOLLOWING MILITARY ARRANGEMENTS have been made for the probable contingency of a war with Burmah:—A wing of H. M. 83rd regiment, stationed at Trichinopoly, to embark from Colomire per steamer Tenasserim. A wing of H. M. 83rd regiment to embark from Madras per Hugh Lindsay, or such other vessel as may be available. The 35th to embark on arrival from Hurryhur. The 9th N. I. to embark immediately on any vessels being chartered for their transport; and a battalion of European artillery, stationed at the Mount, are also under orders to embark at the shortest notice. Orders have been received by the 30th M. N. I., stationed at Masulipatam, to embark immediately for Burmah. Two companies of sappers and miners have also been despatched to Maulmain.

FRAUDS IN THE SALT DEPARTMENT.—An investigation into reported frauds in the Salt department is now going on under the superintendence of Mr. R. S. Ellis, assistant collector of land customs. The amount of defalcations will, it is expected, reach Rs. 40,000, which, coupled with the loss that was sustained in the great storm of last year, will make a total deficiency of at least a lakh of rupees in the revenue collections under this head. Not having taken the precaution to store a supply of salt sufficient to meet the contingencies of cheating and bad weather, the Government are quite unable to satisfy the demands of the dealers in the Mofussil, and the latter are of course unable to procure it elsewhere. The price will in consequence be enhanced to the consumers, who are taxed enough at the best of times, without the visitation of this worst consequence of monopoly—the actual deprivation of a necessary of existence.—Athenaeum, Feb. 21.

SMALL CAUSE COURTS.—A "barrister," whose letter appears in the Athenaeum, says, "the cry for cheap law has been carried out in a manner which, in Madras, has not only greatly reduced the incomes of the bar, but has almost wholly excluded from practice all barristers who decline to place themselves on a level with attorneys. The following figures will speak for themselves:—Receipts at the bar for the last three months of 1848, Rs. 4,798; 1850, Rs. 4,367; and 1851, Rs. 192. Any one can calculate how far Rs. 192 will go in paying for either house-rent, servants' wages, or even food for a gentleman's family, for three months!"

THE MOPLAHS.—Government have deputed a commission to inquire into the causes of the Moplah outbreaks in Malabar, and Mr. Strange, one of the judges of the Madras Court of Sudder and Poudjary Adawlut, has been selected for that duty. A Malabar correspondent of the Bangalore Herald, has furnished him with "alarming rumours respecting those restless beings, the Moplahs. We are told that the Tangu of Shernaad, a high Moplah ecclesiastic, being suspected as the prime agent in the last outbreak, was summoned to appear before the magistrate to undergo an examination. This individual not only refused to comply with the summons, but threatened opposition and bloodshed, should its enforcement be attempted. Our informant declares, that the country about Shernaad is in a state of commotion, and that smiths and other artisans amongst the Moplahs are busily engaged making and repairing warlike weapons, and that upwards of two thousand Moplahs, a few armed with guns, and the remainder with knives, spears, or swords, are prepared to defend with their lives their favourite priest. One rumour says that they have threatened to march on Calicut, in case their tangul should be interfered with. It is said that these people muster daily in thousands in the Shernaad talook." The Herald also informs us, that Mr. Frere, the magistrate of Tellicherry, had been compelled to make a requisition for European troops from Cannanore, to resist the Moplahs, who are said to be advancing on the town. A hundred Europeans, under the command of Capt. Sykes, had accordingly been dispatched, and it was expected that more bloodshed would be the result.

CHOLERA, of a most virulent description, made its appearance in the camp of the light wing of the 31st Light Infantry, at the village of Jecundahully. The wing was within eight miles of Hurrayhur on Friday last. They were to march four miles nearer the station on Saturday, when, to prevent the introduction of the dreadful disease, they were to encamp until further orders. In the meantime, steps were taken to prevent communication between the camp and station.—Bangalore Herald, Feb. 17.

MAJOR FREDERICK COTTON, of the engineers, will succeed his brother in the management of the great works of irrigation, with which the latter has inseparably connected his name. Colonel Cotton will take up his appointment next month as chief engineer at the Presidency, in the room of Colonel Lawe, who retires with a bonus of Rs. 50,000 from the corps.—Athenaeum, Feb. 21.

BOMBAY.

THE FIRST RUNNING OF A RAILWAY LOCOMOTIVE IN INDIA.

The snorting of the iron horse has at last been heard on Indian ground,—in other words, the steam locomotive, recently imported from England by the contractors, Messrs. Faviell and Fowler, was tried on the line at Byculla, on the 23rd February. Not above a dozen Europeans were present; of natives, however, thousands upon thousands were attracted to the spot. The greater part gazed with an expression of wonderment, not unmixed with awe, at the smoking, hissing machine, as it stood at the entrance of its shed, ready for action; and as it moved slowly onwards, this expression of countenance changed into one of gratified surprise, as if they had scarcely expected that the huge affair could be got into motion. "There! she is moving! she is moving!" burst from their lips, and a group of Beloochees cried "Shabash! shabash!" A loud whistling was heard, a cloud of spray fell like a shower on the crowd, and the engine moved on her way, first (so to speak) at a walking pace, then at a trot, and latterly at a speed of about 15 miles an hour. Crowds of the natives ran after her for a time, pressing all round her, and scarcely leaving the line clear; but not the slightest accident occurred. The starting-place was on that portion of the line near to the government printing office, and the locomotive ran from this (a distance of about two miles) to Parell, where she stopped for some time, probably to give the governor an opportunity of looking at his namesake (she is called "The Falkland"). She then came back, as before, at the rate of fifteen miles an hour, to the great admiration of the assembled people, as testified by their looks, and an occasional shout of "Shabash! Shabash!" and clapping of hands. A second trip, similar to the first, was performed, a lady being among the passengers on the occasion. On both trips there were a few slight stoppages to rectify small matters; but the engine appeared to be in perfect mechanical order.

By what name is a railway locomotive to be known among the natives? This is not an utterly uninteresting question. They have already commenced to call her "Ag-boat," which is the name given by them to a steam-vessel; but this is absurd. It is suggested that the proper appellation would be "Bauf-ka-Ruthee," which means a steam-chariot. Now is the time to settle this important matter. If the term "Ag-boat" is allowed to prevail at this time, it will infallibly stick.—Bombay Telegraph.

THE LONDON MAIL of Jan. 24th arrived at Aden on Feb. 29th, and was expected about March 8th. This mail had been detained at Suez for one month, owing to the Haddington steamer being disabled in her machinery.

THE LATE BRIGADIER-GEN. ALEXANDER MANSON, C.B., of the Bombay artillery, commanding the Scinde division, whose death took place at the presidency on the 23rd of February, entered the army as a Cadet in 1810. He was present at the storm and capture of the Fort of Chya, 13th of April, 1811; severely wounded through the knee; was with Col. Elrington's detachment against Pahlunpore and Deesa, October, 1817; throughout the Mahratta war of 1817-18; was with the Guzerat division of the army of the Deccan; at the siege of Asseerghur, March and April, 1819; attack on Nuggur Parkur and Escalade of Dwarka, 1820; at the attack on Meeteallah, 1821. General Manson was a man of much intelligence and general information; was remarkable for unvarying good humour and an unfeeling fund of anecdote and flow of animal spirits. He had suffered severely in his family,—two fine promising sons having three years ago followed each other rapidly to the grave. The funeral of this lamented officer took place on the 24th, at the Cathedral, where the service was performed by the arch-deacon, and his remains were followed to their last resting place in the English burial ground at Sonapoor by all his personal friends, by the Judges of the Supreme Court, the civil members of the Government, the Secretaries to Government, the whole of the General Staff and the officers of the regiments in garrison, and several members of the civil service.—B. Times.

HINDOO LAW OF INHERITANCE.—A very remarkable instance of the operation of this law has come before the Sudder Adawlut of Bombay. It appears that in the year 1848, the son of a Hindoo banker, whose firm has been in existence for more than a century, instituted a suit to prevent his father alienating the ancestral property. The principal Sudder Ameen of Ahmedabad, before whom the case was originally instituted, decreed in favour of the son, for the sum of twenty-five lakhs. The decree was, however, reversed, on the ground that the son had mixed up questions of ancestral and personal property. A special appeal was therefore preferred to the Sudder Court, but no judgment has yet been passed.

LIEUT. GEN. SIR WILLIAM NAPIER recently forwarded a letter to the Bombay Gazette, in which he stated that Major John Jacob, of the Scinde horse, had insulted him, and that nothing but his physical infirmities prevented him from coming to India, and thrashing Major Jacob. That officer, on the other hand, writes to the Bombay Times to say, that in such a case, he "would strike Sir William Napier dead!"

A MUSKET of a very superior description, invented and made by the armourer sergeant of the 78th Highlanders while at Aden, has for some time past been in the hands of the military board for trial and approval. Frequent trials were made with it at Aden, and it was pronounced equally as efficient as an implement of destruction as any rifle ever constructed. It was entirely the design and work of the sergeant, who is represented as one of the best gunsmiths and mechanics in India.—B. Times.

PALIBOTHA.—Mr. Kinloch Forbes, assistant collector at Ahmedabad, has been directed by Government, at the wish of the Court of Directors, to investigate the appearances around the inhumed city of Palibottha.—Ibid.

EFFECTS OF DECEASED OFFICERS AND MEN.

Bombay Castle, Jan. 16, 1852.—The following extracts from a despatch from the Hon. Court of Directors, dated 13th Aug. 1851, addressed to the Government of India, are published for the information and guidance of all concerned:—

"By the Articles of War, regimental officers are directed to collect the effects of deceased officers and men, make out an inventory thereof, and transmit it, with an account of debts and with the balances, to the military secretary, within one month after the death of the officer or soldier.

"On the 1st of every month the sub-treasurer will furnish to the Secretary to Government in the Military Department an account of all deposits in the general treasury made on account of the estate of deceased officers and soldiers of the Company's service, during the preceding month.

"In this account, the officer's or soldier's name, corps, and date of death, are to be stated, together with the amount deposited on account of his estate, and the date on which the deposit was made.

"The military secretary, on receipt of this document, will cause it to be published in the Government Gazette, at the same time notifying that such estates, against which no claim may be preferred within twelve months from the date of the officer's or soldier's death, as therein specified, will cease to be payable in India.

"Returns of sums which, under this notification, shall have ceased to be payable in India, will be prepared monthly, and contain the names of all officers and men, and of those only whose estates had remained in India during the specified period of twelve months after the date of the party's decease. They will be made up on the 1st of every month succeeding the one in which the twelve months from the date of the officer's or soldier's death expired, and be forwarded to England by the following mail.

"We transmit herewith form of deposit roll, to be prepared on demy paper, and we direct that the information required in the several columns of this form may be invariably inserted in them.

"To enable us to furnish the relatives of deceased officers and soldiers of our service with the fullest possible information regarding their effects, whether such effects be remitted to us for payment or not, we desire that the original wills, and copies of them, as the different cases may require, with copies of the inventories and accounts of debts and credits furnished by the regimental officers to the military secretary, may in all cases be forwarded to us, those connected with the parties whose estates are included in the deposit rolls being appended to the rolls in which the estates are remitted."

To enable the sub-treasurer to fill up the form marked A, in the complete manner prescribed by the Court, it is ordered that all remittances to the treasury on account of estates of deceased officers and soldiers, be intimated to the sub-treasurer according to form marked B, and a duplicate of this return invariably to be transmitted by the same post, or on the same day, to the office of the Military Secretary to Government.

This order takes effect from the 1st Jan. 1852.

DISCOVERIES IN THE INTERIOR OF AFRICA.

At a meeting of the Bombay Geographical Society, on the 12th February, Mr. J. Smith called the attention of the members to an interesting communication from the Rev. Dr. Krapf, dated 1st October last, and published in the last number of the Bombay Church Missionary Record.

In July last, Dr. Krapf left Rabbai, a missionary station, near Mombas, in the dominions of the Imam of Muscat, on the east coast of Africa, in about 4° S. lat., and after 146 hours' hard marching in a N.W. direction, arrived at Ketui, the capital of Ukambani, and residence of its chief Kivoi, situated in about the first degree of S. lat., and thirty-seventh of E. long. From this town, in a direction N.W. by W., and at a distance of about 105 geographical miles, is a very remarkable mountain, called Kenia, situated near the equator, in about $35\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ E., and covered with perpetual snow. It is described by Dr. Krapf, who had seen it on a former journey, as appearing like a gigantic wall, from the summit of which rise two immense peaks, towering majestically over the general mass to a height (judging from the line of perpetual congelation at the equator, and from its being stated to be very much higher than Kilimandjaro, a mountain about 180 miles inland from Mombas, and also covered with eternal snow) of at least 22,000 feet. At Ketui, Dr. Krapf became acquainted with a merchant from Uembu, a country about six or seven days' journey to the northward, and from this man, who had travelled in these countries a good deal, Dr. Krapf acquired the following information:—"He told me," writes Dr. Krapf, "that the Ndurkenia (i.e. Mount Kenia) was five days' journey distant from Uembu. The white matter (snow) which lies upon the mountain they called Kirira, in the Kikua language. From the Ndurkenia the water runs down into a lake on the north-eastern side of the snow mountain Kenia. From this lake the Dana, the Tumbiri, and the Nsaraddi, take their origin. The last-mentioned river goes to the north-east into a much larger lake, called Baringo. This lake, according to my informant, has no end, although one should travel for a hundred days to see the end; or can the opposite shore be seen. The Tumbiri river, he said, goes through the Wakua of Kibia into the sea, and must be identical with either the Osi river or the Jub. This information leaves no doubt about the sources of the Nile. They are in the Lake of Ndurkenia, or the White Mountain, which therefore supplies the greatest East-African rivers,—the Dana, the Jub, and the Nile,—with water."

The account given by the native merchant to Dr. Krapf of the existence of this lake, and its great extent, is almost exactly the same as that recorded by Pliny to have been given to the military officers of the Emperor Nero, by the natives of the country, eighteen hundred years ago. Nero, he informs us, despatched two Centurions, well equipped, and furnished with every convenience, to ascertain the rise of this mysterious stream; and adds that, on their return home, he expressly heard them assert, "we at length reached some immense lakes, whose termination the bordering inhabitants were unacquainted with, and which had baffled every possible inquiry." It is possible that this may have reference to the Lake Dambea of the Blue River, but not probable, inasmuch as the term "Nilus" was applied exclusively by the ancients to the Bahr-el-Abyad, or White River,—the Bahr-el-Azrek, or Blue River, being denoted by the name "Astapas," which is totally distinct from and not to be confounded with the Nile. The coincidence between the two native reports is, however, remarkable, especially when viewed in connection with other cumulative information of precisely similar import, both of ancient and recent date. The first Egyptian expedition in 1842 explored the Bahr-el-Abyad as far as $4^{\circ} 22'$ N., and long. $31^{\circ} 45'$ E. It was then descending from the S.E., and said to come from a lake. The Sheikh of Fasnolo told M. Linant that south of the Shiloukhs the Bahr-el-Abyad is lost in some extensive lakes, which that traveller considered highly probable, from the prodigious quantity of fish which arrive with the freshes at their first appearance, for these fish could only come from lakes, where they remain imprisoned when the waters are low, and escape when the inundation takes place.

The existence of two lakes, as feeders to the Nile, is mentioned by the geographer Ptolemy, who says they owe their origin to the melting of the snows on the Mountains of the Moon. He places the one lake in lat. 6° S. and long. 57° E. from Ferro, and the other in lat. 7° S. and long. 65° E., which, making allowance for the southerly excess of ten or twelve degrees pertaining to all Ptolemy's latitudes, would place the lakes about one or two degrees north of the equator, where recent modern information would also lead us to look for them. This was illustrated by reference to the very excellent map of Africa, constructed by the celebrated Gerard Mercator, in which that continent is delineated strictly in accordance with the descriptions of Ptolemy. The Lake Coloe, through which the Astapas or Blue River flows, and identified with the Lake Dambea, is placed by Ptolemy on the equator, whereas its centre is in about 12° N. There appears thus to be no doubt that this snow-capped mountain on the equator is one of Ptolemy's "Mountains of the Moon," and, if Dr. Krapf's native informant is to be relied on (though we should have expected the direction of the river to be N.W. instead of N.E.), the true source of the Bahr-el-Abyad,—at least, of its eastern branch.

The highest point to which the Bahr-el-Abyad has as yet been ascended, which was by Dr. Knoblicher, of Khartam, the Pope's vicar-general in Central Africa, appears to be in lat. $4^{\circ} 9'$ N., a spot several miles higher than the extreme point reached by the expedition sent by Mahomed Ali, the late Pasha of Egypt, to discover the sources of the Nile. Favoured by a strong north wind, and under the guidance of a skilful pilot, Dr. Knoblicher was enabled to ascend the great cataract which had stopped the further progress of Arnaud—much to the astonishment of the natives, who were greatly surprised at the sight of the vessels and the white men. The Nile was there about 200 yards broad and from two to three deep, and was seen trending away in a south-westerly direction, until it vanished between two mountains, beyond which, according to the natives, the river came straight from the south. We have no means of ascertaining the longitude of the extreme point to which Dr. Knoblicher thus succeeded in penetrating, which is to be regretted, as it appears that he was prevented from furnishing himself with a chronometer solely by want of means. Assuming, however, the longitude to be about $31\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ E., and connecting this extreme point to which the head of the Nile has been approached from the north with other points to the south of the water shed which separates the great Mediterranean basin of Africa from that which has its outlet in the Indian Ocean, the positions of which have been determined approximately by Dr. Krapf and Mr. Rebmaun, it would appear that the terra incognita remaining to be explored, and within whose limits the long-sought-for sources of the Nile are to be found, may be roughly described by an equilateral triangle, each of whose sides is about 370 geographical miles, and whose angles respectively are on the north, the extreme point reached by Dr. Knoblicher, as above; on the east, Mount Kenia, in lat. $0^{\circ} 20'$ S., and long. 35° E.; and on the west, the great lake in Uniamesi, of which the northernmost point is laid down by Mr. Rebmaun (approximately) in lat. $1^{\circ} 30'$ S., and long. 29° E. This lake in Uniamesi, which, according to Dr. Krapf and Dr. Beke, signifies "the possession of the Moon," would appear to be fed from the southern slopes of the same mountains, the snows on the northern sides of which, melted by the sun when approaching and passing the equator in March, form the incipient streams of the Nile. We have no modern information respecting Ptolemy's western lake, but there is now every appearance of the correctness in the main of that celebrated geographer's account of the sources of the Nile, in lakes fed by the snows of the Mountains of the Moon, being ere long established; or, in the prophetic words of the famous D'Anville, a century ago, that "these objects" (the Mountains of the Moon and the lakes of the Nile) "may yet appear in geography, although it is not deemed expedient at present to place them in the southern hemisphere."

Their description by Ptolemy is concise and minute. "Round the Barbarian Gulf (Sinus Barbaricus, the bight of Zanzibar) dwell a tribe of cannibal negroes (Ethiopes anthropophagi), on the west of whose country are the Mountains of the Moon (or rather the range or chain of the Mountains of the Moon,—τῶν ἀλάνης ὄρος), the snows of which are received into the lakes of the Nile. Of these mountains" (or rather of this range), "the one extremity is in 57° E. long. and $12^{\circ} 30'$ S. lat., and the other is in 67° E. long. and $12^{\circ} 30'$ S. lat.; and of the lakes, the western is in 57° E. and $6^{\circ} 0'$ S., the eastern in 65° E. and $7^{\circ} 0'$ S., and the junction of the waters from the two lakes 60° and $2^{\circ} 0'$ S."

Notwithstanding the errors in the absolute positions, both as regards latitude and longitude, of these localities, there is no reason to suppose that he is very far out in their relative positions. Making the usual correction, therefore, of 12° of latitude, it would place the entire range in $0^{\circ} 30'$ S.; which coincides with the latitude of Mount Kenia, which is undoubtedly the most easterly limit of the chain, and is placed by Mr. Macqueen, from a careful examination of Dr. Krapf's journals, as well as personal communication with himself, in $0^{\circ} 20'$ S. It is of importance to ascertain the correct longitude of Mount Kenia, and it is to be hoped that Dr. Krapf may be furnished with the means of determining it when he undertakes his next journey.

Mr. Joseph McCabe, the well-known traveller, arrived in Bloem Fontein, from Kolobeng (Dr. Livingston's station), last evening. From him we learn that Dr. Livingston, in company with Mr. Oswell, had reached the residence of Sebitoana, beyond the Great Lake, who, report says, fled at their approach; but Dr. Livingston had followed him on horseback. Messrs. Samuel Edwards and Wilson had been to the lake. Messrs. Bushe, Shelly, and Green, had passed Kolobeng, and had proceeded towards the lake. Piet Jacobs and Jan Viljoen, two of the Trans-Vaal emigrants, had been to the lake, and returned to the Mariqua, and had, it is said, brought ten of the natives with them. Some of Jan Bloem's people, with a number of waggons, had passed into the interior.—Cape Town Mail, Nov. 8.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

LONDON,

FRIDAY, April 2, 1852.

THE accounts from Washington announce the despatch of a formidable expedition fitted out by the United States government against Japan, consisting of three steam-frigates, a brig of war, three sloops of war, and a store-ship, under the command of Commodore Perry. The vessels, in addition to the usual complement of small arms, are provided with muskets, pistols, cutlasses, &c., and a park of howitzers. The commander of the squadron is instructed, it is said, to take possession of Jeddo, the capital, to effect landings at different points of the coast, and "to leave no efforts untried to open commercial relations." An American journal professes to be gratified to learn that the expedition, formidable as its force appears, is designed to be "entirely peaceful in its character;" but, in the course of a long and elaborate article (which will be found in a succeeding column), its mission is admitted to be somewhat less inoffensive, and more in accordance with its scale of equipment. The commander is to enforce justice; to secure protection to American commerce; to insist upon "a reform in the policy and bearing of the Japanese towards the rest of the world," and the doctrine is pretty broadly laid down, that it is not merely the right, but the duty, of a commercial people to compel such a state as Japan to "submit to the law of nations," and to "a certain degree of intercourse." In short, there is very little doubt that the real design of this expedition, "strong enough to enforce compliance with all proper demands," is to subject to American authority the whole of that remarkable insular empire. The accomplishment of this design would not only open to the United States a most valuable commerce, but furnish stations that would enable her navy to command the Chinese seas, and exercise a potent influence over China itself.

The first question which naturally occurs, upon the supposition that such is the design of the American government, is whether it be justifiable. It is a question of some difficulty, how far one nation has a right to insist upon maintaining an intercourse and carrying on commercial traffic with another, in opposition to the declared wishes of the ruling authorities in the latter. We had occasion to examine this question when considering * the frustration of Sir James Brooke's endeavours to establish commercial relations with Siam. We then observed that,

"At the first view it would appear that, in the exceptional case supposed, there is no remedy; that all nations, represented by their rulers, have a right, if they think fit, to reject the advantages which accrue from the interchange of commodities, and that, if they are insensible to argument, and obdurate to solicitation and importunity, they must be left to the consequences of their own obstinacy and folly. But a close consideration of the subject may well suggest a doubt whether such an option can really be allowed to one society, as would entitle it to obstruct the highway of international trade, which tends to the moral and material benefit of the whole human family. The productions of the earth were designed by the Author of the Universe for the common use, and to be the common property, of mankind in the gross; and an individual nation cannot be at liberty to hoard its products, if abundant enough for foreign supply, and to exclude other nations from an enjoyment which would not contract its own, without contravening the purposes of the Creator. Writers upon public law lay down the doctrine, that nations which wilfully alienate themselves from the rest of mankind, and pursue a solitary and selfish policy, are not entitled to the protection of that law, or to be included within the pale of civilized people."

The American journalist adopts the same principle, which he, however, pushes to an extreme length when he argues that every maritime nation may be compelled, under any circumstances, to submit to intercourse with other people; that it is the right of all the nations of the world to have free access to every part of the coast of the whole world, and that, when this right is denied, it is the duty of the party excluded to extort a compliance by force. But upon the doctrine, a little more guarded, which we have laid down, it is impossible to contest the right of America, or any other civilized state, to claim the admission of its traders into the ports of Japan, for the purpose of peaceable commerce, and the voluntary interchange of commodities suited to the wants of the respective countries, subject to moderate duties and municipal regulations. The degree of compulsion is a question which arises out of the other. If the Japanese government be obstinate, deaf to reason, and blind to the advantages offered to it, can that of the United States apply a "pressure from without," in the shape of shots and shells? This question is one of some delicacy, but it cannot be negatived without virtually negating the other. It must be remembered, however, that all "rights of nations" are to be exercised consistently with the maxims of equity and justice, which are the foundation of the rights themselves. War may be just or unjust not only in itself, with reference to its origin and object, but in the manner in which it is conducted. The Americans are, therefore, bound to carry on their proceedings to effect the end in view,—which is not, as avowed, altogether a national one, but which concerns the whole mercantile world,—in an equitable manner, having due regard to the interests and even the prejudices of the state to be coerced.

After the precedent set by ourselves in the case of China, it would be as presumptuous as it would be idle to protest against the proceedings of the Americans in this instance, or it might be not difficult to make out exceptional reasons why the empire of Japan should be exempted from the application of that principle of the community of intercourse to which we have before alluded. The repugnance of the Japanese to the admission of foreign traders is founded not upon the arrogant and absurd doctrines of their neighbours, the Chinese, but upon political grounds, strengthened painful experience of the effects of such admission. It is not, perhaps, generally known that, whereas the Chinese upon immutable principles of policy have always interdicted the entrance into their territories of "nations from afar," the Japanese afforded them free access, and excluded them only in consequence of the misconduct of their visitors and the manner with which the kind treatment they experienced was ungratefully repaid.

Upon this head we would refer our readers to a valuable little work, published a short time back by the Hakluyt Society,* containing a collection of early documents respecting Japan, including letters from Captain William Adams, a Kentish man, who visited Japan as a trader in the year 1600, where he resided for many years, and until his death, in 1620, being well treated by the emperor, who gave him "a living like unto a lordship in England," though he appears to have suffered much from the ill-will of the "Jesuits and Portingalls." His letters, which extend from 1611 to 1617, are highly curious, and give a minute report, in a quaint and simple narrative, of the state of the empire and the manners of the people. Mr. Rundall, the editor, in his Prefatory Remarks, observes:—

"In the early intercourse which existed between the empire and the states of the West, the government of Japan is exhibited in a most favourable light. It was distinguished, at that period, by high-bred courtesy, combined with refined liberality in principle, and generous hospitality in practice. Without any reservation in regard to circumstances, rank, calling, or nation, the hand of good-fellowship was then cordially extended to the stranger. In the instance of a governor of the Philippines,† although shipwrecked and destitute, the claims of rank were admitted; he was received with the honours due to a prince; while he sojourned in the land, similar honours were paid him, and to facilitate his departure, he was furnished with all the means generosity could dictate. The lowly William Adams, when cast in wretchedness on the shores of Japan, acquired possessions in the empire equal to those of a prince. Merchants, for a century, found a free and open market for their wares. Missionaries were allowed to commence a career of proselytism, and they pursued it with zeal and success. With the unqualified concurrence of the authorities, they erected in several of the principal cities of the empire, edifices for the celebration of divine worship, according to the ritual of the Romish church, while, with the sanction of the authorities also, numerous institutions for the instruction of their neophytes were established. In regard to the people of Europe, Japan, at that period, exhibited more liberality than the nations of Europe exhibited towards each other."

What was the cause of the change of policy? Mr. Rundall's preface traces it to the abominable excesses of the Spaniards and Portuguese, who, whilst, out of religious zeal, they destroyed the temples of the Japanese, insulted their creed, and persecuted their priests, did not scruple to carry away their people and sell them as slaves. But the immediate cause of the expulsion of these Europeans was their manifest ambitious designs, and the communication, by the Dutch, in 1837, to the Japanese authorities of a correspondence, alleged to have been carried on with Portugal, which power was invited to send forces for the conquest of the empire, on pretence of aiding the native Christians; which was confirmed, it is said, by a subsequent discovery.

The conduct of Europeans and Americans towards the Japanese, in later times, has not been calculated to reconcile them to a renewal of intercourse. In 1805, two officers of the Russian imperial navy landed in the Japanese territories, and "pillage, slaughter, rape, and incendiarism," it is asserted, "marked their track." In 1808, H.M. ship Phæton, through some misunderstanding, offered a gross insult to the Japanese authorities, in the Bay of Nangasaki, the result of which was the self-execution of several of the chief native officers. In 1837, the American ship Morrison, with a full knowledge that Nangasaki was the only port open to foreigners, proceeded to the Bay of Yedo, and anchored not many miles distant from the imperial residence, with what view is not very clear. She was driven away by the guns of a battery. "It must be confessed," Mr. Rundall justly remarks, "that the nature of the intercourse between the Europeans and the Japanese cannot have tended either to elevate the character of the former in the estimation of the people of the empire, or to have produced such feelings as can lead to a desire for the formation of intimate relations." Where accident, or even curiosity, has led foreign vessels to Japan, and the proceedings of the visitors, whether American, Russian, or English, have been orderly, they have experienced the utmost courtesy and kindness. So late as 1845, Sir E. Belcher, in H.M. ship Samarang, paid a visit to Nangasaki, having been previously warned, he says, against the "treachery" of the Japanese. Nothing, however, could exceed the friendliness with which he was received; he was furnished with all the supplies he needed, gratuitously; allowed to land, and when he departed, was solicited by the nobles and leading men, with every appearance of sincerity, to renew his visit.

These are far surer criteria of the dispositions of the Japanese than the reports of British and American whalers, who are accused of making descents upon the coasts of the country and perpetrating atrocities there.

Letters, it appears, have been received at Washington from Japan, which state that the Japanese had applied to the Dutch to assist them in enforcing the doctrine of non-intervention.

"It may be affirmed, as a principle not susceptible of dispute, that good management of any portion of the affairs of any community is almost always proportional to the degree of knowledge respecting it diffused in that community." This remark was made by Mr. Mill, in order to show the injurious consequences of the defective knowledge of India by the British community then prevailing. Although much progress has been since made in supplying that deficiency, it still exists, in a less degree, and the principle enunciated by the historian suggests at once a motive for diffusing generally a knowledge of Indian affairs, and a caution in legislating for their management.

The materials for acquiring this knowledge are now most ample. We have volumes upon volumes of evidence taken by Parliamentary Committees. We have histories of India of all dimensions, and, we may add, of all qualities. We have many varieties of descriptions of India. If a visit to that country be deemed a necessary complement of this knowledge, it may be accomplished in a few weeks, with less inconvenience than was formerly incurred by a land-journey from London to Edinburgh. Notwithstanding all these facilities, however, it is mortifying to be obliged to confess that a great deal of ignorance is still found, amongst educated as well as uneducated classes, respecting the country and people of India; though we are not prepared to concur with a writer of a work recently noticed by us, who estimates the proportion of the ill-informed at nine-tenths of the educated classes, including members of Parliament.

* Memorials of the Empire of Japan in the XVI. and XVII. Centuries. Edited, with Notes, by Thomas Rundall. London. Printed for the Hakluyt Society. 1850.

This repugnance on the part of the community at home to become familiar with a subject of vital interest to the empire, gives an accidental value to the peculiar machinery by which Indian affairs are managed. The East-India Company having a stake in the just administration of those affairs, and their directors being conversant therewith,—many of them having filled various posts in the civil and military services of the Company,—provision is made against the pernicious results of ignorance in the ruling authorities of British India,—not a colony or settlement, but a country of vast extent, inhabited by various ancient races, utterly dissimilar from ourselves in all the elements of civilization, and all the accidents of social habits and institutions.

More mischievous, perhaps, than positive ignorance is a slender, superficial acquaintance with India, gained by a short sojourn at one of the presidencies, which, whilst it imposes upon others, often renders the person himself confident, dogmatical, and proof against all evidence but his own impressions. That more errors respecting the people of India may be learned in India than out of it, is no paradox. "The powers of observation in every individual," again to quote Mr. Mill, "are exceedingly limited, and it is only by combining the observations of a number of individuals that a competent knowledge of any extensive subject can ever be acquired: of so extensive and complicated a scene as India, how small a portion would the whole period of his life enable any man to observe!" Upon this basis he founds his argument, that a person qualified for dealing with evidence would make a better historian of India without a local knowledge of the country than with it. The regarding such knowledge as a positive disqualification, is undoubtedly pushing his argument too far. "Had Mr. Mill passed but a short time in the country, or been but moderately versed in any department of its literature," is the remark of Professor Wilson, "his history would have been exempt from many of those blemishes by which its perfectness is now impaired, and its utility diminished." Nevertheless, in a more confined sense, Mr. Mill's axiom is just; "our conceptions of a great whole are apt to be distorted, and made to disagree with their object, by an undue impression, received from some particular part."

We think it important to point out these two sources of error, at this particular moment, when Indian subjects are about to undergo a Parliamentary re-investigation by men who, themselves mostly devoid of local knowledge, will have to collect facts and deduce inferences from the evidence of witnesses in possession of that knowledge. So far from regarding this diversity as an evil, we feel that, upon Mr. Mill's doctrine, if the members of the Committees are moderately imbued with an enlightenment upon Indian topics, and exercise their judicial functions discreetly, they will draw sounder conclusions from the discrepant testimony of witnesses who speak from local knowledge than if they had enjoyed that knowledge themselves.

It might be objected that, upon the most important points relating to the various branches of internal administration in India, the witnesses will be Company's servants, who may be tempted to spread a favourable hue over the acts and qualifications of their own order; so that the Committees will have to encounter not merely prejudice and false impressions, but representations by parties supposed to be competent to give the best testimony, which are delusive and defective. Little apprehension need be entertained upon this ground. It is one of the most valuable incidents of our Indian Government, as now constituted, that its public servants exhibit a spirit of independence, which, indeed, they have no reason to repress. An officer of the Company, civil or military, has nothing to fear from boldly speaking the truth, however unpalatable it may be to his employers. Among the witnesses whose evidence tended more than any other to show the expediency of withdrawing from the Company their highly-valued commercial privileges, were some of their own servants.

The worst effects of the imperfect knowledge to which we referred in the outset of these observations are not likely to be found in the Committees, but in the community. If it should suit the views of any party to raise, as in the last Charter discussions, an agitation in this country upon the subject of Indian affairs, we should fear the result; for the corollary of Mr. Mill's "principle" is, that the misgovernment of India may be the proximate, its loss the ultimate, consequence of a deficiency of knowledge respecting it amongst the British community at home.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—If the "Mahomedan Moonshee" means to assert that the slender acquirements in Hindoostanee, which he has detailed as the basis of an examination, are not possessed by any Englishmen in India, I do not hesitate to say he is guilty of misrepresentation.

How the examination which he proposes, of a single scholar in this country, is to establish the ignorance or knowledge of the entire services in India, it is for him to show. That experiment was no part of my proposal. I offered to point out the names of many Englishmen whose attainments in the Oriental languages, I thought, would surprise the Moonshee; and here are half-a-dozen, including members of the civil, military, and medical services: Shore, Sleeman, Macleod, Spilsbury, Banks, and Brown. I select these, not because they happen to be choice scholars, but because they were all serving at a small station in Central India, and as the Moonshee is perfectly familiar with all their names, I challenge him to deny that they were good colloquial linguists, and could severally read the proceedings of a case in Hindoostanee or Persian, without the aid of a moonshee. These are not rare instances; I could name a hundred others.

My own acquirements have nothing to do with the question, though I believe I could satisfy the Moonshee that I have found my way through many a tough missal without any aid. I must, however, say a few words in defence of my aumrah, whom the Moonshee erroneously thinks he has convicted of being asses. They were men of education and ability, whose names he would hear with pleasure; in proof whereof, I may mention that one of them compiled a work in the Hindoostanee language, which was printed at the expense of Government, and the Moonshee will be glad to learn that nearly all of them have obtained promotion for their good services.

Your correspondent has cited several instances of ignorance on the part of English officials in India, whereon he bases the assumption that all are equally deficient in knowledge of the native languages. His last and crowning example consists of a very stale scrap of Oriental Joe Millerism, the entire joke of which turns upon the fact, that the word "hurchund" is not only a Persian conjunction, but corresponds in orthography and pronunciation with a very common Hindoo proper name, "Hur Chund." The Moonshee, perhaps, will allow me to match this with "A story so pat, you may think it is coin'd,

On purpose to answer you, out of my mint;
But I can assure you, I saw it in print."

An Englishman was explaining to some natives of India the meaning of the word "gratitude," and, finding that it did not come home to their apprehension, called a beggar, and bestowed upon him rather a considerable sum of money. The man overwhelmed the Englishman with thanks. "Now, my friends," said he, "you see he is very grateful." "Ah," replied one of his auditors, who had made some advance in the English language, "I think master is great fool now." Your correspondent would no doubt think it very unreasonable in me to deduce from this anecdote that his countrymen neither understand the feelings of gratitude, nor are capable of comprehending the niceties of the English language; and yet he wants his readers to accept the figments he has enumerated as proofs of the grossest and most culpable ignorance of the native languages on the part of English officials throughout India.

Meanwhile, the press teems with translations of Oriental works, and the scientific societies of England and India are periodically publishing papers on the literature, antiquities, architecture, and mythology of the Hindoos,—subjects requiring great knowledge of the languages, manners, and customs of the people of the country,—contributed by Englishmen of every grade and branch of the Indian services. Nay, your very last number of the Indian Mail furnishes a refutation of the sweeping calumny of the Moonshee, in an article on the “language used in the Company's Courts;” from which it appears that a large body of Englishmen are familiar at least with one, if not with two, of the native languages; and this upon the authority, not only of the editor of the Friend of India (himself an Orientalist of no ordinary standard), but, moreover, of a memorial presented to Government by a number of the Moonshee's own countrymen.

The object of the Moonshee's ambition is highly commendable, and he has the ability to render himself very useful. But he must really allow Englishmen to be as good judges of the acquirements of Indians in the English language, as he has constituted himself of the attainments of Englishmen in Persian and Hindoostanee. He refers to Dr. Forbes as an authority in Oriental literature, and yet contradicts his statement that “no native of India ever did or ever will know English, idiomatically, unless he be brought here when very young;” a statement which can be exemplified in the Moonshee's own person; for, however well he may write the language, it is impossible to listen to the Moonshee's English for ten minutes, without discovering that his style and pronunciation are purely Oriental.

I am, Sir, yours obediently,

London, March, 1852.

AN OLD MULL.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

Sir,—I am glad to observe, from an article in your last number, that you call public attention to “The Sanitary State of British India.” From my own experience, I can confirm the statements of the writer, that, in India, disease “rides rampant;” that “epidemics prevail at all and every season;” that no steps are taken to protect the natives or our own countrymen from the fell destroyer; and that, in respect to sanitary conditions, “our Indian towns remain unchanged from what they were 2,000 years ago.”

I do hope, with the writer of the article I allude to, that the Indian authorities will see “the absolute and urgent necessity of putting in force, without delay,” a system of reform in this matter. This is the fittest season to urge the subject of sanitary reform in India; but so many other considerations of more obvious interest, though of less pressing importance, are likely to engross the attention of Parliament, that there is great risk of this being overlooked.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

A BENGAL MEDICAL OFFICER.

UNITED STATES EXPEDITION AGAINST JAPAN.

“Washington, March 10.

“The following is a list of the squadron recently sent to Japan:—The steam-frigates Mississippi (flag), Princeton, and Susquehanna; brig-of-war Perry; sloops-of-war St. Mary's, Plymouth, and Saratoga; and store-ship Supply. The Susquehanna, Saratoga, and Plymouth, are already on the Pacific coast, awaiting the arrival of the remainder of the squadron, which will be commanded by Commodore Perry. In addition to the usual complement of small arms, the Mississippi will be provided with 120 stands of muskets, and the same number each of pistols, cutlasses, &c.; she will take an equal number extra for the steam-frigate Susquehanna. The Mississippi will also take with her a park of twelve 24-pound howitzers. The objects of the expedition are as follows:—It is designed to effect a landing at the capital of Japan, Jeddo, at all hazards, and orders have been given to make various expeditions at different points, and to leave no efforts untried to open commercial relations with that long-sealed people. It is supposed that the expedition will be absent about eighteen months.”

The unusual strength of the force about to sail to the China Seas and the north-eastern coast of Africa, and the fact that the most distinguished and proverbially the most efficient officer in the navy, Commodore Perry, is about to assume the command of the East-India squadron, have naturally excited more than ordinary inquiry and discussion in relation to the immediate objects of the expedition. By some it has been characterized as a warlike expedition; and very generally it is believed to have in view offensive operations against the empire of Japan. In common with our cotemporaries, we have instituted inquiries in regard to the objects of the expedition, and we are gratified to learn that it is designed to be entirely peaceful in its character, but, at the same time, sufficiently imposing to command respect in the enforcement of justice, and of sufficient strength to enforce compliance with all proper demands.

The empire of Japan covers an area of more than 100,000 square miles, and lies between the 30th and 43rd degrees of N. latitude, and the 129th and 143rd degrees of E. longitude; and, lying on the eastern side of the continent, has a climate similar to our own, between the same parallels of latitude; that is, between New Orleans and New York. Its population is estimated at 30,000,000, and, covering an archipelago, its sea-coast is more extensive than the whole Atlantic coast of the United States. It not only lies directly opposite our possessions on the Pacific coast, but the two great islands of Nippon and Yesso form the Strait of Sangar, through which hundreds of our whale fleet are compelled annually to pass; but to land upon the shores of which for supplies of wood, water, or the necessities of life, or to be forced upon them by stress of weather, subjects the unfortunate whaler to robbery and death. Japan not only refuses to hold commercial intercourse with the rest of the world,—a very questionable right,—but she goes further, and, occupying as she does an enormous extent of sea coast, she not only refuses to open her ports to foreign vessels in distress, but actually opens her batteries upon them when they approach within gunshot of her shores; and when driven upon them by stress of weather, she seizes upon, imprisons, exhibits in cages, and actually murders, the crews of such ill-fated vessels.

Now, we deny the right of any nation situated upon, and occupying a portion of, the sea-coast of the world, to refuse all commercial intercourse with other nations. Such a course may be tolerated by civilized nations so long as it does not interfere with their commerce and the welfare of the human race; but we insist that it is the right of civilized and Christian nations to compel barbarians thus situated to submit to the general law of nations, and to a certain degree of intercourse; and especially is it the right of all the nations of the world to have free access to every port and every part of the coast of the whole world in times of distress and danger, and to demand, at the hands of the people occupying such harbours and coast, protection, aid, and hospitality. This, we say, is the right of all nations in all the harbours and on all the coasts of the world; and when this right is denied and withheld, it becomes the duty of a commercial people to remedy the evil, and to secure to their commerce the protection to which it is so justly entitled. Japan denies this right. Among the hundreds of American whalers annually compelled to pass the Straits of Sangar, some are inevitably forced by stress of weather upon the inhospitable coasts on either hand, and the consequences are imprisonment or death; and vessels in distress, instead of being permitted to make a friendly harbour for repairs and to rest, are compelled to keep at sea, to the almost certain destruction of all on board. This has been submitted to too long already, and the constant increase of our whale fleet, and the consequent increase of disasters in this barbarous and inhospitable region, have compelled our Government, unprompted except by its wise foresight, to insist upon a reform in the policy and bearing of the Japanese towards the rest of the world. The single fact that at one time, within the last year, there were 121 American whalers lying in the harbours of the Sandwich Islands,—far away from their cruising-grounds, because they could not enter any harbour on the coast of Japan for repairs,—shows not only the extent of our commerce in that region, but the claims of humanity itself for protection against the barbarians who thus cut off, as it were, the commerce of the Yellow Sea and the Sea of Ochotsk.

Without being prompted thereto, as has been charged, by the merchants of this city, but in obedience to a wise policy which seeks alike to extend our commerce and protect our manufactures and agriculture, the administration has most wisely determined to demand redress for past grievances from Japan, and to insist that in future the seamen of the civilized world, when cast upon their shores by the providence of God, or when compelled to seek refuge from the elements in the harbours on their coast, shall be treated with humanity at least, if not with the hospitality which it is their right to demand under such circumstances. With this view, Commodore Perry has been selected to command an expedition, which will necessarily require great prudence and discretion, united to great forbearance, firmness, and perseverance.

If we are correctly informed, Commodore Perry will not only demand redress for past offences against us, and the release of all American prisoners, but he will also insist upon the release of all who may be held in bondage merely for having been cast upon their shores by Providence, no matter to what nation they may belong. And he will insist, too, that in future, all the nations of the world shall have the right to seek the harbours of Japan in stress of weather, and to repair damages; and that they shall be hospitably received, and their wants be supplied by such as may be disposed to aid them, instead of punishing with death, as at present, whoever dares to succour the distressed. So far as commerce is concerned, if anything can be accomplished, it will, of course, be the result of peaceful negotiation; and he will negotiate for the United States only. But he will claim and insist that all nations and peoples shall have the right to use the ports of Japan in distress, and be protected by the government. We do not suppose that he will attempt forcibly to interfere with any of their police regulations, or demand the right to land men, if the wants of commerce are freely supplied without landing. But, once give the civilized world access to the harbours of Japan, and that great empire will no longer remain a terra incognita. Such access must lead to commerce, and commerce is the great civilizer of mankind. It may be years before we get free access into the city of Jeddo, the capital of the empire; but it will not be long before some clever Yankee informs us whether it has a population of 2,000,000 or only 500,000 souls. We shall then soon learn, too, whether the standing army of the emperor consists of 525,000 men, including 60,000 cavalry, or of nearly 1,000,000 of men, of whom 100,000 are cavalry. What we do know is, that Japan raises an enormous quantity of wheat, rice, barley, &c., which, together with silks, gold, copper, and silver, are sent down the coast to China, and that the revenue of the empire is estimated at 140,000,000 dra. We do know that every city and port is strongly fortified, as is the whole coast; and that if one of our whalers, in beating through the Straits of Sangar, gets within two miles of the shore on either side, she is sure to have a battery opened upon her; and if shipwrecked, her crew are taken prisoners, and never permitted to return to their country and their homes. We do know that these things should not and will not continue to exist under the present Whig President, with Daniel Webster at the head of the state department, and W. H. Graham secretary of the navy; and we hope and trust that the day is near at hand when, under a judicious protective system, we shall be sending enormous quantities of cotton goods, iron, &c., to Japan, and receive in return her gold, silver, and dyewoods; at the same time that the commerce of the world will find in her numerous ports safe and hospitable asylums, instead of the barbarism now extended towards it by one of the most populous kingdoms of the earth.—New York Courier.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS, MARCH 29.

Deposition of Meer Ali Moorad Khan.—The Earl of Ellenborough, in moving for copy of the proclamation issued by the Commissioner in Scinde (Mr. Frere), by order of the Governor-general of India, degrading Meer Ali Moorad Khan, of Khyrpore, and confiscating all his lands, except his hereditary possessions (which document appeared in our last publication), entered at much length into the case. He observed that the Meer was an independent prince, and an ally of the British Government, and that so strong a measure could be justified only under these conditions:—first, that the tribunal before which his offence was to be investigated should be free even from the suspicion of partiality; next, that the evidence taken before that tribunal should be free from taint; and, thirdly, that if the tribunal should be satisfied of the defendant's guilt, the punishment should be commensurate with his offence, and not inconsistent with the condition of the person accused. Not only had not these three circumstances combined in the case of Ali Moorad, but not one of them had taken place. Our quarrel with the Meer was that of one state with another, and we were justified in requiring from him the surrender of possessions he wrongfully withheld from us, and even to inflict a fine for an injury done; but there our power and rights as a state ended: we were not justified in dealing with him as a prince and as a subject at once. His lordship then proceeded to show the services which had been rendered to us by Ali Moorad, without which, he said, it was doubtful whether, Sir Charles Napier would have been able, in 1843, to terminate successfully the campaign in Scinde. Subsequently he had joined Sir Charles with a force of his own, and greatly contributed to our ultimate success. In 1846, at the commencement of the operations in Moultan, his quiescence even was of great value to us, and from the beginning to the end, there had never been the smallest suspicion of his political fidelity to our interests. Even had he been merely a subject, he would, therefore, have been entitled to great consideration in the investigation of the charges preferred against him. What was the tribunal which had tried this independent prince? The commission consisted of three persons nominated by the British Government, the plaintiff in the case, and which would obtain considerable profit, provided the result was in its favour. After commenting upon the qualifications of the commissioners, two of whom were military officers, and remarking that it would have been more satisfactory to have committed the inquiry to some high judicial functionary, the noble earl detailed particulars of the evidence taken by the commissioners, some of the witnesses being, he said, by their own confession, perjured, or guilty of fraud. Supposing, however, the decision of the tribunal to be correct, the sentence pronounced was not justifiable. Ali Moorad held his territories under three different titles; one part by his father's will, another part by the treaty of Nownahur, and a third part as rais, or head of the family under the cession of the turban in 1842. Our claim to the lands stated to be unjustly withheld by Ali Moorad did not exceed 4,000*l.* a year. Ali Moorad asserted that they did not amount to even 300*l.* a year. In consequence of the conclusion that Ali Moorad had committed a forgery, he had not only been compelled to give up those lands, but other lands to the amount of 100,000*l.* a year more. It seemed, therefore, that even if the crime of forgery had been committed, the punishment was excessive. But a question arose involving the good faith of this country, not only in the case of Ali Moorad, but also in that of the Nawab of Bahawulpore, our faithful ally for three generations. By a treaty with the Ameers of Scinde—which was afterwards rendered of no avail by the battle of Hyderabad—it was agreed that all the property formerly belonging to the Nawab of Bahawulpore, between our territory and the Indus, should be ceded to him; but the more valuable part of the property was never ceded, in consequence of a prior claim advanced by Ali Moorad. The Nawab had, therefore, been kept out of the largest portion of the territory which it was the intention of the British Government that he should hold, and which had been actually ceded to him by certain treaties. It was the fidelity of the present Nawab to his engagements with us that enabled us to proceed through his territories to Afghanistan. It was his support which enabled our army to retire from Moultan into his territory, and to march from it again to reduce that fortress. He therefore had a right to expect some territorial aggrandizement as the reward of his fidelity. As yet he had only received an annuity of 10,000*l.*, which was utterly inadequate to his services. He therefore hoped that, in whatever way the British Government might deal with the property of Ali Moorad, it would at any rate place the Nawab of Bahawulpore in the position in which he would have stood if the treaty with the Ameers of Scinde had been carried into effect.

Lord Broughton, as the President of the Board of Control who had authorized the transmission of the order by which the Meer had been deprived of his ill-gotten possessions, vindicated the measure. His lordship, having given an outline of the family history of Ali Moorad, who was the youngest of three sons of a chief of Bahawulpore, showed that he had wrested from his eldest brother, Roostum Khan, certain territories left him by his father, and which was relinquished to Ali Moorad by Roostum by treaty. But, not content with the legitimate reward of his victory, he contrived to substitute for a leaf of the Koran on which the treaty was signed another on which was a different treaty, and thus put himself in the possession of lands to which he had no title whatever. Whether the value of the land was great or small, what Ali Moorad did was to alter villages into districts, and by so doing he made himself master of lands to which he had no right, and imposed himself on the British Government as a more important person than he really was, and the British Government treated with him as such. That was not all; for Ali Moorad, at the time when Sir C. Napier entered into Scinde, persuaded his brother Roostum Khan to resign the headship of his family, and to give up certain lands attached to the headship. That he did this by the advice of Sir C. Napier, he (Lord Broughton) proved by an extract from one of Sir C. Napier's despatches. It thence appeared that it was the advice of Sir C. Napier on which the Ameer Roostum Khan acted, when he resigned the headship of his family; and that also appeared from expressions used by Roostum himself, in a conference which the Ameers of Scinde had with Captain Outram, and of which Captain Outram had given an account. But this was not all. Ali Moorad entered into another agreement in December, 1842, by which he agreed to give his brother compensation for the resignation of the turban, and for the cession of the lands attached to it. But the messenger sent to Sir C. Napier with this second agreement was intercepted by Ali Moorad; the agreement was taken from him; it was never known that such an agreement had been made or signed; Sir C. Napier knew nothing of it, and, in consequence of this abstraction of documents, Ali Moorad did not give up that which he had agreed to do, but remained in possession of those lands which he had agreed to give up. This was not only a piece of treachery towards his brother and his family, but a cheat practised upon the British Government, because if those territories had, at the time of the conquest of Scinde, been in possession of Roostum, they would have been forfeited to our Government. But even this was not all. Ali Moorad's next proceeding was to persuade his brother Roostum that Sir C. Napier, instead of being animated by a sincere desire to bring these transactions to a peaceable issue, was resolved to seize and imprison him and his family, and that Roostum's only resource was to fly. The old man fled accordingly, and his flight was the immediate cause of the hostilities between the British Government and the Scindians. As a proof that Ali Moorad was the man who instigated Roostum in his flight, Lord Broughton cited a letter from Sir C. Napier to the Governor-General, in which he said:—"Now, it strikes me that Ali Moorad may have frightened the old man into the foolish step he has taken, on purpose to make his possession of the turban more decisive; that, to do this, he told him I intended to make him a prisoner, Ali pretending to be his friend, and only waiting for his opportunity to betray him." There was also a letter written by the Earl of Ellenborough himself, dated January 6, 1843, in which this passage occurred:—"I feel no confidence even in Ali Moorad. I believe he managed the flight of Meer Roostum." But their lordships would, perhaps, ask how it came that, after the conquest of Scinde, no suspicion, further than that which was evidenced by the letters of the noble earl and of Sir C. Napier, was created as to the misconduct of Ali Moorad, and the forgeries of which he had been guilty? The fact was, however, that such a suspicion did reach Sir C. Napier himself, and was thus alluded to in a despatch from the Bombay Government:—"On this subject (Ali Moorad) we also beg to refer to a confidential memorandum by Sir Charles Napier, recorded when quitting the government of Scinde, and to a demi-official letter addressed by him to the late Governor-General (Lord Hardinge), of the 22nd of September, 1847, containing information relative to the alleged mode in which the supposed fraud was committed." There was also a minute by Sir G. Clerk on the same subject, to this effect:—"In a private memorandum left by the late Governor of Scinde, there stands recorded against this chief (Ali Moorad) an imputation of having, by means of the substitution of a fabricated for a genuine document, appropriated a district which belongs to the British Government. Sir Charles Napier assumes such to have been the case, and, apparently anticipating that still more evidence would be obtained, recommends that, preparatory to the resumption of the district in question, the commissioner and the officer commanding in Scinde should be present at Sukkur, and the troops in Northern Scinde reinforced." This showed that, even in 1847, Sir C. Napier had become cognizant of the supposed fraud, and in consequence of communications made to the Government of Bombay, when Sir G. Clerk, the then Governor, went to Scinde, he looked into the case, and became convinced of the serious nature of the charges. He reported his opinion on the subject, and Mr. Pringle, being desired to look into it, reported to the Government that he had no doubt of the guilt of Ali Moorad. The Governor of Bombay, however, wishing to give to the accused a better chance of escape than that which was afforded by the judgment of one person, considered that a commission ought to be appointed. Nothing could be fairer than the mode in which the inquiry was conducted. Ali Moorad was present; he examined the witnesses adduced in proof of the charges; he was enabled to offer evidence on his side; it was an open inquiry, as to the conduct of which he had never heard any complaint. The decision of this commission was, that everything alleged against the accused was capable of judicial proof; but they did not think it necessary to pronounce a judgment upon any other than the charges of forgery. The report of the commission and all the papers appended to it were transmitted to the Governor-General, who examined the whole, and the united reports of the Bengal and the Bombay Governments were afterwards sent home to the authorities. The Court of Directors had no doubt as to the guilt of Ali Moorad; he did not believe there was a difference of opinion in India, or even in England, on the subject; but there was a difference of opinion as to the punishment which should be inflicted. He did not believe that if the noble earl and Sir C. Napier had known as much then as they now did of the conduct of Ali Moorad, the conquest of Scinde would ever have taken place. The man had been guilty of the basest of crimes. He had defrauded his nearest relatives; he had been the cause of infinite bloodshed among his own countrymen, and he had cheated the very power to whom he owed his elevation. If the Government had only taken away that of which Ali Moorad had fraudulently sought to deprive them, it would not have been punishment, but restitution. He ought never to have had the land attached to the turban, out of which he had cheated the Government by concealing from them the mode in which it had been acquired. When, then, the Government were made aware of the conduct Ali Moorad had pursued, they had a right to act as they would have acted had they known his proceedings at the time; and even at this moment he was in possession of everything he would have had in the proper course, and of all his rights, save what he had acquired by his misconduct.

The Earl of Derby said, assuming that the guilt of Ali Moorad had been proved,—and it had not been denied,—the proceedings of the Board of Control and of the Court of Directors had been characterized by strict justice and equity, and by moderation in the penalty. We had cause of offence against him for having caused unnecessary loss of blood and treasure in wars fomented and encouraged by his misrepresentations. We might, therefore, have declared hostilities against him, and stripped him of his territory as an act of war and of retaliation; and that course was recommended by Mr. Pringle, commissioner in Scinde; and it was solely to avoid the possibility of any misconception with regard to the motives of the Government that the course was finally taken. The facts Ali Moorad himself had not ventured to deny.

Earl Grey hoped the East-India Company and the Government, after what had been stated by such high authority, would look back a little to the circumstances connected with the war in Scinde. When that war first broke out many persons entertained serious doubts as to the justice of it. Officers of the highest character—Sir Henry Pottinger and others—had expressed their opinion that justice had not been done to the unfortunate princes, the Ameers of Scinde. But now they heard, further, that Ali Moorad was accused of forgery, by which he obtained possession of his territory, and that, but for his pernicious influence with the other princes, they would not have adopted the steps which had brought these serious consequences upon them, because they would not have engaged in these unhappy conflicts. If this was the correct view of the case, it was incumbent upon the East-India Company and the Government to consider the position of the Ameers of Scinde, because those unhappy men were now languishing in confinement, and suffering most cruelly from these transactions.

The Earl of Derby, though not agreeing with the noble earl to the extent of admitting that the other Ameers were blameless, yet, in consequence of its having been discovered that Ali Moorad had been guilty of intrigues, was ready to allow that that put the case of the other Ameers in a more favourable point of view than before. So strong were the convictions of the Government that such had been the conduct of Ali Moorad, that instructions had already been sent out for the purpose, not of reinvesting these princes in their territory, but with a view of considering how far they had acted under the advice and influence of Ali Moorad. He could not exempt them from blame, but still less could he consider them persons to whom redress from an act of injustice was not due.

Earl Grey believed that no war would have taken place if these princes had not been driven into it by the persuasive influence of Ali Moorad.

The Earl of Ellenborough said, that in consequence of certain hostile proceedings on the part of the Ameers, a treaty was agreed to. They signed the treaty one day, and on the second day they were collecting their troops both in the front and in the rear of the British troops, and nothing but the gallantry of Sir Charles Napier on that occasion saved the British army. The Ameers were condemned, not for their treachery which preceded the treaty, but for their treachery afterwards.

The returns were then ordered, as matter of course.

The Kurrachee Advertiser, apologizing for the "shabby appearance of its sheet," describes it as the effect of "a jolly row" betwixt the proprietor and the editor!

A Ceylon paper states that the "Bloomer" costume is getting into vogue at Kandy.

EAST-INDIA HOUSE.

A Quarterly General Court of Proprietors of East-India Stock was held March 24; John Shepherd, Esq., Chairman of the Court of Directors, in the chair.

PATRONAGE OF THE EAST-INDIA COMPANY.

Capt. McGregor rose to submit a motion, which referred to the Military Seminary at Addiscombe. He was desirous of obtaining three returns: first, an abstract of all the expenses of every kind incurred by the East-India Company at or on account of the Military Seminary at Addiscombe, showing the total amount of charge connected with that institution; second, an abstract of the sums received from the cadets in each half year for board, clothing, and education, including extra expenses of all kinds; third, a return showing the number of cadets receiving education from the 1st December, 1851, distinguishing the sons of officers in the Company's service, whether retired or deceased, from all others. The two first abstracts embrace the years 1849, 1850, and 1851, as it is possible that the expenses and receipts at the Military College might vary at particular periods, and he wished to take an average of those receipts and expenses during the whole three years. With regard to the third return, he should request that not only might a distinction be made between the cadets who were the sons of Indian servants from those who were the sons of other parties, but that there should be a distinction made as to the presidencies to which the parties belonged. It had not been his intention to accompany this motion with any remarks, but merely to submit it to the Court; but, in consequence of information which had reached him, and which was confirmed two days ago by an official personage, he was induced, in order to remove misconception, to make a few remarks as to the object of his motion. He believed these papers would furnish grounds for submitting to the Court of Directors an appeal in behalf of the poorer classes of Indian servants, and more particularly the sons of the Indian army, that the expenses of their education at Addiscombe College may be reduced. Hoping that that information would tend to such a result, he was desirous of seeing introduced at Addiscombe such a graduated scale of charges as exists at her Majesty's College at Sandhurst. He had lately obtained from one of the Government officers a statement of the general regulation and charges for the education of cadets at Sandhurst. There are three classes of charges at Sandhurst, according to their rank. He found that the sons of all the officers of the army, including surgeons and paymasters, who may have died in the service, and who may have left their families in distress, only pay 40*l.* per annum; that the sons of another class of officers, including regimental field officers, pay 50*l.* a year; that the sons of colonels and lieutenant-colonels pay 70*l.* a year; that the sons of all general officers are charged 80*l.* a year, and the sons of private gentlemen are charged 105*l.* a year. The expense of educating a cadet at Addiscombe is 100*l.* a year: the difference between that sum and the amount charged at Sandhurst is very important. In some instances, the difference amounts to 60*l.* a year, and the smallest difference is not less than 20*l.* a year. Many of those cadets may be found to be pensioners on the Indian fund. These pensioners are, perhaps, receiving only from that fund a sum equal to the charge of 40*l.* a year. He could, however, only speak with precision as to what is allowed in the Bengal service,—that is, 40*l.* a year. Now the whole expense at Addiscombe may be taken at 130*l.* a year, and the student's family have to find the difference; therefore, the change he proposed would be a very important and a very beneficial one. The age and admission at Addiscombe is a point deserving of some consideration. The pension ceases at the sixteenth year, while a student does not enter Addiscombe till after the sixteenth year.

The Chairman.—You are mistaken; he enters in his fourteenth year.

Capt. McGregor.—But in the majority of cases the student does not enter till he is sixteen; therefore, during the period he is there, he may be altogether without pecuniary assistance, and exposed to the chance of being discharged for want of means to pay the expenses. Many instances have occurred where students have been compelled to leave Addiscombe on account of the heavy charges. He was aware of an instance where a widow lady had incurred a heavy debt in order to meet her son's expenses at Addiscombe; and he was also aware of a student having been obliged to leave Addiscombe in consequence of the expenses preventing his continuing there. With regard to the Company, there may appear to be a certain equity in increasing the charge to be paid by the student at Addiscombe, on account of the higher disbursements which the Company is called upon to pay on the student's account; but there is a counter-equity,—a strong moral claim in favour of the student, that he should not be charged any higher sum than that for which he could obtain a similar education and similar qualifications for entering the service elsewhere. He believed that no inconsiderable part of the difference of expense which is charged to the students at Addiscombe, and that which he would have to pay elsewhere for a similar education, arises from the fact that the whole institution is conducted upon a higher scale in the salaries to the various officers; and, in short, that the whole establishment is managed upon a more liberal footing than would be allowed in any other institution. He had such a recollection of Addiscombe, as to be aware that, within the last thirty years, the expense of education there was only 30*l.* a year. But he was also aware that the Company was in the habit of making a specific liberal allowance for preparing young men to undertake the duties of military engineers. This allowance has had the effect of raising the general standard of education, and from that period the expense for the instruction of all the cadets has reached the sum of 100*l.* With regard to the contrast of the system of expense of Addiscombe with that which exists in India, what he recommended was, that which exists under the Court's auspices elsewhere. Rewards were held out in India, varying in amount, to those who qualify themselves in languages; they were paid for that qualification which they obtained at the Company's expense, and which forms the groundwork of their future advancement. Now he thought it was not asking too much that one part of that principle of education should be applied to those young men at Addiscombe who are intended to enter the service, and that some part of the expense may be fitly made as a public charge, instead of being wholly laid on the individual. With regard to the third paper, he found that the number of pupils now under education at Addiscombe is 150; that the annual expense of each cadet is 100*l.*, which will make the total expense 15,000*l.* a year for the board and education of those 150 young men. He thought more was disbursed in their account than is necessary. He should not object to the disbursements being on the most liberal footing. There are officers who deserve well at their hands, and he should be glad to see all the masters well supported; but if the system requires the remuneration of the officers so much beyond what is required at similar institutions, then that is a good ground why a portion of the expense should be at the public charge. The object of the third return is to distinguish the students who are the sons of Indian servants from those who are the sons of private gentlemen. He hoped the numbers will be so stated as to show that, by increasing the charge for the sons of private gentlemen to 125*l.* a year, the charge may be reduced to the sons of Indian servants who may be shown to be in distressed circumstances. At a future period, if he obtained these papers, and should find that they confirm his present views, he should recommend the establishment of a similar scale of charges at Addiscombe to that which now exists at Sandhurst, and that scale should be reduced. Notwithstanding the distinct nature of the notice he had delivered to Mr. Melvill, he found that a misconception had arisen as to his real object, and that it has been supposed that it was his intention to submit a motion with regard to Indian patronage generally. From what he had now stated, it must be obvious that this had arisen entirely from a misapprehension. He held in his hand an extract from a letter from a gentleman who holds the rank of lieutenant-general in the Indian army, who said it would give him infinite pleasure to find that the Court of Directors would take into consideration the claims which the sons of the officers of every description in the Indian service had upon them for throwing a great portion of the expense attending their education upon the public. It was solely with the view of obtaining the necessary information for bringing forward at a future period such a proposition, that he now moved for these papers.

Lieut.-General Briggs seconded the motion, and said he was not at all aware that any observations would have been made by the hon. and gallant proprietor as to the contents of a private letter written by him, an extract of which had been referred to, and which letter contained matter of an entirely different nature from that which was then before the Court. His reason for seconding the motion was, that he thought, since the subject had been introduced, it ought not to be disposed of without some discussion. He admitted that the expense at Addiscombe was too high. He knew of many who were unable to send their sons to Addiscombe on account of the expense. At Sandhurst certain advances were made for the children of deceased officers, and he thought it was a subject for consideration whether the Company ought not to make a similar advance to the orphans of officers in the Indian service. This, however, was more for the consideration of the Directors than the Court of Proprietors.

The Chairman.—With reference to the first two documents which my hon. friend has moved for, I have to observe that these are returns that are made regularly in September of every year. The circumstance of my hon. friend not having been a proprietor for any length of time is no doubt a reason for his not being aware of that fact; but when he says that, finding he could not get the information he required, he was obliged to adopt the course he is now pursuing, I have no doubt he refers to the fact of his having made a personal application to me for those returns, when I informed him that it was not the practice to furnish returns to any individual who might think proper to ask for them, and that the obvious course for him to take was to move for them as a proprietor at the next Court. That course my hon. friend has adopted, and, as I have already stated, the first two returns are at the present moment before the Court. With reference to the third return, requiring a description of the various classes of cadets at Addiscombe, with designations as to whether they are the sons of officers or of civilians in the service of the Company, or of private gentlemen, I beg to say that I have had an abstract drawn up upon the subject, which the Court perhaps will allow me shortly to read. The number of cadets at Addiscombe is 146; of these 19 are the sons of military officers on the effective list, 5 are the sons of officers on the retired list, 10 are the sons of deceased officers, 14 are the sons of effective officers of other departments, the civil, the medical, and the ecclesiastical; 6 are the sons of such officers retired, and 3 are the sons of such officers deceased; making a total of all these classes of 57. Now this number of 57, as compared with the remaining 89 of all other classes of cadets, is, I trust, a piece of information calculated to give satisfaction not only to the hon. gentleman, but to the Court generally. With reference to the charges made for the education of the cadets at Addiscombe, the hon. gentleman has, naturally enough, drawn a comparison between the charges made at Addiscombe and those made at Sandhurst, but he has altogether forgotten that there is a great difference between the two systems, and that there is no analogy between the two services. In the first place we have a power, and which we are always happy to exercise, of giving the sons of such parties as the hon. proprietor has designated, namely, of deceased officers who had belonged to the effective service, direct appointments; and I am happy to say that is very generally adopted with reference to those parties. (Hear, hear.) There are gentlemen in this Court who have a perfect knowledge that these things are so, and who know that appointments are often given to the sons of the widows of officers not having sufficient means of support, and that to effect this object charges are often made to enable these individuals to make provision for their mothers and families; and also let it be remembered that the allowances made to our officers are upon a much more liberal scale, and they are therefore in a better position to pay for the education of their sons than the officers in her Majesty's service. But this subject has not escaped the notice of the Court of Directors. We have had it several times under consideration; but weighing the advantages and the objections of having new regulations at Addiscombe, after two or three deliberations on the subject, it was determined that the objections were more weighty than the advantages to be derived from those alterations. If they had not been so, the decision of the Court would no doubt have been in favour of such alterations. But I differ with the hon. proprietor in his view of the question of expense. He says the expense of education at Addiscombe is larger than it would be at other institutions where similar advantages could be obtained. My experience on this subject and my information differ very much from this view. I think the expense at other institutions for a similar education does not fall under 100*l.* a year, and those institutions not having the same advantages as Addiscombe, which is under a regular staff of officers, of a governor and of teachers, making it an institution more efficient in every respect than any other in the kingdom. I have known many instances where parties, being desirous that their sons should obtain the benefit of going to Addiscombe, have, although in straitened circumstances, preferred sending them there for the sake of the advantages which it was known they would enjoy. I might here conclude my observations upon this subject, having, as I think, answered the various remarks which have fallen from my hon. friend; but as the hon. proprietor has stated that he intends to confine his observations hereafter to that particular part of his subject, I must be allowed to advert for a moment to the course which he has thought fit to pursue out of doors. The hon. proprietor has issued a circular letter to the officers of the army generally, and I think that circular has misled many of them as to the mode in which the patronage of this Company is bestowed generally. The hon. proprietor, probably in reference to the subject which it was his intention to bring forward, sent to me an official letter, in which he indirectly referred to the distribution of the patronage of the Court of Directors. This being the case, I think the proprietors should be informed as to the real state of the distribution of that patronage. In his circular, the great grievance alleged by the hon. proprietor to exist, is in not preserving that proportion of military appointments which the general regulations for meritorious services would have dictated, and that very few appointments were given on public grounds. Now I must tell the hon. proprietor, that on both these points he is in error. In the first place, in his computation of the number of appointments given to the servants of the Company, he alleges them to amount to about one-eighth of the whole amount. Now I am sure it will be satisfactory to the hon. proprietor himself to hear that, instead of one-eighth, the number of those appointments amounts to one-third of the whole. From the statement which I hold in my hand, giving an account of the appointments from 1840 to 1851, both years included, the number given to the sons of the Company's officers had increased from 1,100 to 2,652, being above 2½, or about one-third. That, at all events, will show the hon. proprietor that he had better have waited till he had made his motion before he issued his circular conveying such an erroneous idea, for instead of one-eighth, the proportion is one-third. Then with reference to the hon. proprietor's observation that few of these appointments are given upon public grounds. This is an opinion rather than an accusation, as it is very difficult to tell what the hon. proprietor considers to be public grounds. If he means to say that the fact of an individual applying for an appointment, or of applying on the part of a friend for an appointment, is from that circumstance contrary to the principle of making appointments on public grounds, why then the whole of the appointments may be said not to be given on public grounds. If such a principle were to be maintained, we must refuse every person who makes application, and must take up the Army List and search for the sons of officers who have most distinguished themselves by their services. Surely my hon. friend cannot contend that that should be. I say we do make the whole of these appointments on public grounds. Let these appointments be compared with the same number of individuals in any other profession. Take the same number from the bar, or from independent gentlemen of this country, and see what proportion their numbers bear to the appointments given to the sons of officers. I will venture to say, that you will find nine out of ten are bestowed in favour of our army. Now is not that a sufficient answer with regard to the accusation of the hon. proprietor? But how impracticable would it be for us to act in accordance with his view, and to discuss the merits of the various officers whose services had distinguished them; or were to attempt to discriminate between the claims of a man who had ten children, and the man who had five, and the man who had only one! Are we to suspend the appointment of the sons of the man who had five children until the whole ten children of the other man are provided for? The whole thing is impossible. It would be very convenient for us to say to any applicant, "your application will be considered at the proper time;" but would that system meet all the cases? What would be the result? There must always be some disappointments,—more than two-thirds of the applicants must be disappointed. How are we to deal with them? Their cases probably would be taken into consideration some two or three years after their sons had become too old for admission, and then in what position should we be placed! What jealousy and dissatisfaction would not such a course create in the minds of the officers! I am very sorry to see that the hon. proprietor has succeeded in inducing a great number of officers to send in a memorial in aid of the views he is taking on this subject. No doubt many of the memorialists will soon discover the error into which they have been led; but it cannot be doubted that many also will have it impressed on their minds that their children will not receive appointments on public grounds, and therefore they will feel an earnest desire that the system of the distribution of patronage should be changed. But I again submit to this Court, when it has been shown that the proportion of those appointments given to the children of the army is one-third instead of one-eighth of the whole of the appointments, that these appointments are made on public grounds. Seeing, therefore, that the stream of patronage flows continually and steadily in the direction of our own servants, I think that the course taken by my hon. friend is not correct, in stimulating the officers of the Indian army to be dissatisfied with the present system. I will not occupy the Court any longer, as it is not intended to oppose the third return which has been moved for, the other two having already been placed before the Court.

Col. Sykes said that at one time he was disposed to entertain the same opinion with regard to the distribution of patronage as that which the hon. proprietor appeared to entertain, and he once thought that that patronage was not quite so fairly distributed as it might have been, and probably ought to have been

Some four years after he came into the Direction, he obtained a return of the distribution of patronage by the Company from the year 1813 to 1833; the substance of the statement contained in that return was quoted by Mr. Fergusson in the House of Commons on the 26th July, 1833, when a motion was brought forward by Mr. Wynn on the very subject which Capt. McGregor had just introduced. On that occasion, the motion of Mr. Wynn was negatived without a division. It appeared that the number of cadets was, in the whole, 5,092. Of these, 400 were the sons of Royal officers of the army, 124 were the sons of the Royal navy officers, 224 were the sons of civil servants, 401 were the sons of officers of the Company's army, 40 were the sons of retired officers, and 390 were the sons of clergymen; showing the proportion to be exactly one-fourth. He, however, was not satisfied with that return, and he obtained another, showing the distribution of patronage from the year 1840 to 1843. This return was drawn up according to the ranks of the parties, and he found that the total number of appointments was 1,976: that there were given to the sons of officers of the Company's army below the rank of captain 128 appointments in those four years; to the sons of captains, majors, lieutenant-colonels, and surgeons of the first rank, 143; to the sons of full colonels and major-generals, 77; making a total of 348 appointments. In the same four years there were given to the sons of the officers of the Royal army and navy, 380; the appointments being still in excess of the Royal service, and very properly and very justly so. The Royal army was constantly in the service of the Company, fighting their battles; those officers, therefore, had as much claim to the patronage in India as the Company's servants themselves, and he was glad that they had met with reward for their public services in India, even though it had been to a larger extent than to the Company's own officers. Having obtained this return up to 1843, he had never ventured upon the subject since, but was quite satisfied. Then there were given to the sons of civilians 105 appointments, and to the sons of clergymen 205, the clergy contributing most materially to the profession of arms, both in peace and in war. The appointments given to all other classes whatever were 938; the consequence was, that eleven-twentieths of the whole appointments of the East-India Company were given to the officers on account of public services; not one-fourth—not one-sixth—not one-eighth, but eleven-twentieths, being more than half of the appointments made in those four years. He thought that fact ought to set the question at rest, as far as the distribution of the patronage of the East-India Company was concerned. If it were possible to make it a rule that the East-India Company should set apart a certain amount of patronage to be given to the most deserving public officers, he should like to know how it would be practicable to carry such a regulation into effect. Suppose they had a hundred appointments set apart for that purpose, the whole of the time of the Court of Directors would be taken up in debating the merits of the claims of the respective parties. A year would not suffice for the debates on that subject. It would be utterly impracticable. Was it not much better to leave the matter as it then stood? It was quite right that the people of England should not be cut off from having the patronage of India; it would be a most unreasonable proceeding. One word with regard to Addiscombe. The hon. proprietor appeared to think that cadets at Addiscombe did not obtain an education equal to what might be obtained elsewhere; but he would not hesitate to say, that the cadets at Addiscombe were furnished with a better grounded education, and one of a more practical result, than the students of any military establishment in Europe, not excepting the Polytechnic at Paris, or the Berlin Academy. If so, then there was no ground for the present motion, though he was glad that the papers were to be granted, as they would satisfy the public that there was no necessity for agitating the question.

Mr. Clarke thought the answers which had been given by the Chairman and by Col. Sykes to the motion were perfectly satisfactory. Their statements were not conflicting, because they referred to different dates. Col. Sykes had shown that the appointments in India were extraordinarily in favour of the Company's servants, while the Chairman had shown that at a subsequent period the proportion was progressing yearly in the same direction, it having been, during the period to which Col. Sykes had referred, one fourth, whereas at the subsequent period mentioned by the Chairman the proportion was one third. How the hon. proprietor could get over that fact, he (Mr. Clarke) did not understand. He thought it rather extraordinary that, after issuing his circular, the hon. proprietor should come forward and attempt to explain away that which he had ventured to state in print.

Mr. Lewis considered that the explanation given by the hon. mover was perfectly irrelevant to the subject of charge made by him against the Directors, and he thought it very indecorous that such a motion should have been made without previous notice having been given. As far as he knew, the returns which had been read might be correct; no one, however, could form the slightest opinion upon them in the present shape of the question. The returns might prove to be one-sided. He, however, had never heard of or had any reason to impugn the way in which the patronage of the Court had been distinguished. He thought the motion was altogether premature, and he did not see how the Court could come to any conclusion upon it. The hon. mover had given them no statement himself as to the manner in which the patronage had been bestowed. No doubt, most gentlemen had heard complaints from disappointed parties; but it was impossible to satisfy all. If the hon. proprietor had any real complaint to make, he should bring forward a specific motion on the subject.

Lieut. - General Briggs said that, in justice to himself, the hon. proprietor, who introduced the motion, having stated a portion of the letter which he (Lieut. - General Briggs) addressed to him, ought have read the whole, that letter having, in fact, been written in reply to the printed circular issued by the hon. proprietor.

Capt. McGregor disclaimed any disrespect towards the hon. and gallant proprietor in having stated a portion of the letter which he had addressed to him; but the gallant general appeared to have forgotten that that letter referred to a public subject, and was an answer to a public document. The letter commenced, "Sir," and ended, he believed, in the usual way, "your obedient humble servant," with the military rank of the hon. and gallant proprietor attached. All those circumstances supported him in saying that such a letter could not be called a private letter. It happened, however, that he was not in a position to read the letter in extenso, because he had not brought it with him. In reference to the speeches of the Chairman and of Col. Sykes, the hon. proprietor said that he did not consider the observations made by those gentlemen were in any degree applicable to the question before the Court. They had taken the opportunity of addressing the Court upon the general exercise of the patronage of the Company. For his part, he did not object to those remarks. He was glad to find that such was the tendency of their patronage. But he had addressed the Indian army at home on a particular subject, upon which he entertained strong views, and which views he found to be very generally shared in by those who strongly supported the Court of Directors. But as to the observations made by the Chairman and by Col. Sykes, there was much in their statements which, hearing for the first time, he could not consider satisfactory. He did not admit the case they had set forth, and must have time to inquire into it. He did not wish to enter upon that question at all, as he should have another opportunity for doing so. He was obliged to the Chairman for the information, that the two first returns he had asked for were already before the Court, and also for his having consented to grant the third return. Was he to understand that there would also be given a return of the mode in which the general patronage of the Company was exercised? Were the documents which had been referred to open to him?

Col. Sykes said, he should be happy to give the hon. proprietor copies of those to which he had referred.

Capt. McGregor wished to add a few words in respectful self-defence. He stood before the Court that day under a strong sense of duty. It was true, he had circulated a letter to the officers of the Indian army resident in England. The first step he took was to place a copy of that letter in the hands of the hon. Chairman, therefore there was nothing like concealment on his part.

The Chairman.—But that letter had been previously circulated.

Capt. McGregor.—Not at all. The printed copies were not in his (Capt. McGregor's) possession until the 1st of January, and in the morning of the 2nd of January he went to the East-India House and delivered a copy of the letter. On that day he issued the circular; and then found that one of his clerks had previously sent away some fifty or sixty copies; but that could only have been on the 1st of January. In the course of preparing that circular, he consulted many officers of standing. He adopted that course in conformity with their counsel. The views expressed by him in that circular were those which he had heard expressed both in and out of the service, and which led him to believe that he had adopted a proper course. But for the present, his object had been obtained. When the subject with regard to patronage should be brought forward, it would appear that it did not merely concern the Indian army; for although he was then stating their case, yet, in point of fact, he was fighting the battles of others. It was the civil servants, of all classes in India, whose case was principally involved in the question. In reference to the memorial which had been signed by 220 field officers, and which had been presented to the Court, the answer to that would no doubt come in time, and he hoped it would be such as would express the views of the Court; and when those views were expressed, he should then have an opportunity of seeing to what degree he might have overstated the case. But in having overstated it, he might avail himself of this defence, that he could not go beyond the information he possessed; he had asked for information, but he could not get it. That information showed that 5,092 appointments took place in the course of twenty-one years, and that out of the number of those appointments, 401 were given to the officers of the Company's army in India, being at the rate of 19 annually. He was happy to hear that the subsequent returns would show that the proportion was considerably larger. He would not enter into any argument with regard to the memorial or the circular, as neither of them were before the Court. The only thing the Court then had to consider was a motion for papers, and which he had a right to consider was a proper motion, inasmuch as the papers had been granted.

The Chairman.—What I complained of was this,—not that my hon. friend had brought forward this motion, but that he did not wait to get the information which he was now asking for before he issued his circular. He issues a circular, in which statements are made of what he calls facts, but which are not facts at all, but are grossly contrary to the facts, and now he comes forward and states that if he had had the information he would not have done it. Why not have come here first?

Mr. Gray considered that the opinion of the hon. proprietor as to patronage was founded on erroneous views. The answers which had been given on that subject were perfectly satisfactory. So far from the conduct of the Directors being liable to the imputation of using unfairly the patronage of the Court, it would appear that they had used sound discretion in the apportioning of that patronage, and he hoped that the explanations which had been given would be considered satisfactory by the public.

Capt. McGregor said it seemed to be understood that the request he made for information from the Chairman was contemporaneous with the issuing of his circular; but the fact was, that his application to the Court of Directors was several weeks previous to his issuing that circular.

The Chairman.—I told you that you could not get the information but in the regular way, and that it must be by a motion in the Court of Proprietors.

The motion for the first two returns was then withdrawn, and the motion for the third return was agreed to.

THE AMEERS OF SCINDE.

Mr. Sullivan, having observed in the public journals certain information respecting the present condition of the Ameers of Scinde, said that if the information which he had received from that and other sources should be correct, he hoped an opportunity would be afforded for giving to those unfortunate Ameers some compensation for the enormous injuries which had been inflicted upon them. There were two or three facts which he wished to call to the recollection of the Court; the first was, that these unfortunate individuals were deprived of a most valuable portion of their territory on the strength of certain letters which were stated to have been written, but which letters they had never been permitted to see. When they were called for, the answer was, that the letters were in England, and when they were asked for again in England, then the answer was that the letters were sent to India. Those letters had never been produced, and yet they formed the whole case for the confiscation of Scinde, or rather that confiscation was founded exclusively upon those letters. The second point of which he wished to remind the Court was, that the protection which led to the ultimate destruction of the Ameers was forced upon them by Sir Charles Napier's hostile march to Hyderabad. Eight years ago he ventured to predict that if they took possession of Scinde it would prove a canker which would affect the very vitals of our Indian empire. At this very time it cost the Company more than twice its worth. If they consulted their own interests, they would use their best endeavours, both in India and in England, to effect a surrender of that territory which they had so disgracefully appropriated; but if they should not do that, still they ought to give some portion of the province, with a view to make some provision for those who had been so unjustly deprived of it. He saw that a notice had been given in the House of Lords for the production of papers relating to this case. He wished to ask the hon. Chairman whether he had any objection to lay those papers before the Court in such a shape as would enable hon. proprietors to form an impartial opinion upon the question?

The Chairman.—The notice of motion which has been given in the House of Lords is for papers, the production of which will, I have no doubt, be such as will enable their lordships, and every one else, to arrive at an impartial judgment upon the subject. With regard to the condition of the Ameers, it may be satisfactory for me to inform the hon. proprietor, that the question is now under the consideration of the Government of India. The Court then adjourned.

THE QUEEN'S LEVEE.—Her Majesty held a levee on the 24th March, the presentations at which included the following:

Lieut.-General Sir George Pollock, G.C.B.

Lieut. Applegarth.

Major Lord Burghersh.

Major T. Donnelly.

Lieut.-Colonel C. R. W. Lane.

Mr. M. C. Morrison.

Lieut.-Colonel Mundy.

Ensign H. H. Foord.

Ensign J. L. Reynolds.

Capt. J. C. Salkeld.

Mr. J. B. Saunders.

Mr. C. Shubrick.

Lieut. S. D. Turner, 21st Bengal N.I.

Mr. W. W. Wells, Bengal Medical Service.

Col. R. W. Wilson, C.B., Bengal Army.

Lieut. A. G. Bax.

Lieut. J. Dinale.

THE BURMESE WAR.—By an advertisement in another column, we perceive that Professor Wilson has in the press "A Narrative of the Late Burmese War," which will appear immediately.

SIR JAMES BROOKE.—In order to mark the sense entertained by the mercantile and shipping body, as well as by other members of the community, of the eminent services rendered by Sir James Brooke to the interests of commerce and humanity, in his endeavours to put down the evils of piracy in the Eastern Archipelago, and in his labours to advance the interests of civilization in that part of the world, it is announced that a public dinner will be given to his excellency at the London Tavern, Bishopsgate Street, on the 30th of April; R. W. Crawford, Esq., in the chair.

BATTLE OF FERROZESHAH.—An interesting picture has been exhibited at Berlin, the work of Herr Kretschmer, representing Prince Waldemar of Prussia at the battle of Ferrozeshah, supporting his dying physician, who was shot at his side on the first of those two bloody days. The portraits of Lord Hardinge, his two sons, and Major Broadfoot, are skilfully introduced, and the whole grouped most successfully, while every attention has been paid to the reality of the scene.

COCKERELL AND CO.—A dividend of threepence in the pound has been announced on the estate of Messrs. Cockerell, Larpent, and Co., who suspended on the 25th of September, 1847. A further small payment is ultimately expected.

MR. A. A. LACKERSTEEN'S debts and liabilities are stated at about 212,000*l.*, of which it is estimated 105,000*l.* will be provable against the estate. The assets in hand represent 1,000*l.*, and it is expected an additional 2,000*l.* may be received from Calcutta.

NEW CONVICT SETTLEMENT.—Pursuant to the determination of her Majesty's Government to form Freemantle, Western Australia, into a convict settlement, orders have been issued that a transport-ship should be fitted up to convey 500 male convicts to that colony. The convict guard will consist of 75 enrolled out-pensioners of Chelsea Hospital, who will remain at Freemantle as military colonists.

THE AMOUNT OF SPECIE shipped by the Peninsular and Oriental steamer for India and China is 3,500*l.* gold, and 98,000*l.* silver. About 120,000*l.* in gold will also be forwarded to Alexandria.

COTTON.—On Wednesday evening, Mr. Bazley, president of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, delivered a lecture, in the great room of the Society of Arts, on cotton, as an element of industry, its confined supply, and its extending consumption from increasing and improving agencies. The chair was taken by His Royal Highness Prince Albert, and the company assembled, which was very numerous, included Earl Granville, the Earl of Harrowby, Sir R. Inglis, M.P., Mr. M. Gibson, M.P., Mr. Bright, M.P., Mr. Hope, M.P., Sir J. Walmsley, M.P., Mr. Henry, M.P., Sir J. Boileau, and many other persons of rank and eminence. The lecture, which occupied two hours, was listened to with great apparent interest, though we are bound to say it added little or nothing to the elementary knowledge of the subject which may be picked up from the commonest books.

MESSRS. REID, IRVING, and Co. have announced a fourth dividend of 6d. in the pound, payable at their office, 2, Gresham

Place, on and after the 15th instant; this with former payments will make a dividend of 2s. 6d. from that estate.

THE Suir Cressy has been engaged for the freight of stores to Calcutta.

SHIPPING.

Agents—Messrs. Binny and Co.

The advantage offered by this Society is,—

A lower and more economical scale of Premiums for Life Assurance than hitherto demanded by the established Offices in India.

Annual Premium for assuring 1,000 rupees:—

CIVIL.			MILITARY AND NAVAL.
Age.	With Profits.	Without Profits.	Age.	With Profits.	Without Profits.
20	Rs. 33	Rs. 31	20	Rs. 38	Rs. 35
30	38	35	30	44	41
40	49	45	40	53	49
50	63	59	50	66	61
60	82	77	60	84	79

The Society also grants ENDOWMENTS and DEFERRED ANNUITIES for India, expressly calculated for the Public Services, &c., the Tables for which, with full information, may be had at the Office of the Family Endowment Society, No. 12, Chatham Place; or at the Office of the Secretaries in Calcutta, Messrs. GORDON, STUART, and Co.; or of Messrs. BINNY and Co., Madras.

UNIVERSAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY,

1, KING WILLIAM STREET, LONDON.

For the Assurance of Lives at Home and Abroad, including Gentlemen engaged in the Military and Naval Services.

DIRECTORS.

SIR HENRY WILLOCK, K.L.S., Chairman.
JOHN STEWART, Esq., Deputy Chairman.
Lieut.-Gen. Sir Richard Armstrong, Francis Macnaghten, Esq.
C.B., K.C.T., and S. Charles Oweay Mayne, Esq.
John Bagshaw, Esq., M.P. William Rothery, Esq.
Augustus Bosanquet, Esq. Robert Saunders, Esq.
Charles Dashwood Bruce, Esq. Capt. Samuel Thornton, R.N.
Ellis Watkin Cunliffe, Esq. Brodie McGhie Wilcox, Esq., M.P.
William Kilburn, Esq.

AUDITORS.—Robert Gardner, Esq.; Robert Hichens, Esq.; William Oxborough, Esq.

BANKERS.—Bank of England, and Messrs. Currie and Co.

SOLICITOR.—William Henry Cotterill, Esq.

PHYSICIAN.—George Burrows, M.D., F.R.S., 18, Cavendish Square.

ACTUARY.—David Jones, Esq.

The principle adopted by the Universal Life Assurance Society, of an annual valuation of assets and liabilities, and a division of three-fourths of the profits among the assured, is admitted to offer great advantages, especially to those parties who may wish to appropriate their proportion of profit to the reduction of future premiums.

The following Table will show the result of the last division of profits, as declared on the 14th of May, 1851, to all persons who had on that day paid six annual premiums, being a reduction of 45 per cent. on the current annual premium. This will be found a most liberal reduction, if the original premiums be compared with those of other offices adopting a similar plan of division of profits:—

Age when Policy was issued.	Date of Policy.	Sum assured.	Original Premium.	Reduced Ann. Premium for current Year.
20		£1,000	£19 6 8	£10 12 8
30	On or before	1,000	24 8 4	13 8 7
40		1,000	31 10 0	17 6 6
50	14th of May,	1,000	43 15 0	23 10 3
60	1846.	1,000	66 11 8	36 12 5

* * The attention of Gentlemen connected with India is particularly requested to the Regulations of this Society; as, on comparison with other offices, its terms will be found peculiarly advantageous, especially as regards the liberal plan adopted on the return of Indian Assurers to reside permanently in this country; and the Indian Rates have been calculated from extensive data and Tables exclusively in the possession of this Society, by which the true risk of life during residence in India has been most accurately ascertained.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle Street;

And to be obtained at all Booksellers, and Railway Stations.

A LADY, the Wife of a Clergyman moving in good society, and living in a very agreeable residence in a healthy part of Yorkshire, wishes to receive a LITTLE GIRL, from the age of 10 to 4 years, to EDUCATE with her own two little girls, under a superior governess.—Reference is permitted to their Lordships the Bishops in India, under the initials W. P.

Applications may be made in England to X. Y. Z., Post-office, Malton.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS, an EXTRAORDINARY REMEDY for LIVER COMPLAINTS.—Extract of a letter from Mr. Robert James, of Tredegar, Dec. 16, 1861:—"To Professor Holloway, Sir,—With gratitude I write to inform you of the wonderful cure your Pills have effected on my daughter, who had been suffering from the enlargement of the liver, palpitation of the heart, dropsy, and a troublesome cough. Her case was given up by the medical attendants. At this crisis I was induced to try your Pills, and, after taking them, it was astonishing to see how rapidly she regained her health. She is now recovered, and as well as a parent could desire."

Sold by all Druggists, and at Professor Holloway's establishment, 244, Strand, London; and by all European and Native vendors of medicine throughout the whole of the East Indies.

TO LADIES.—The high and universal celebrity which ROWLANDS' KALYDOR continues to maintain as an active, yet mild and soothing, extirpator of all impurities of the skin, is, during the period of Spring, most pleasingly evinced. This preparation, eminently balsamic, restorative, and invigorating, is equally distinguished for safety in application, as for unfailing efficacy in eradicating all redness, tan, pimples, spots, freckles, discolorations, and other cutaneous visitations. The radiant bloom it imparts to the cheek, and the softness and delicacy which it induces on the hands and arms, render it indispensable to every toilet. To ladies during the period of nursing, and as a wash for infants, it cannot be too strongly recommended. Gentlemen, after shaving, will find it allay all irritation and tenderness of the skin, and render it soft, smooth, and pleasant. Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle.

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, for the growth, and for preserving, improving, and beautifying the human hair. Price 3s. 6d. and 7s.; family bottles (equal to four small), 10s. 6d., and double that size, 21s. per bottle.

ROWLAND'S ODONTO, or PEARL DENTIFRICE, for preserving and beautifying the teeth, strengthening the gums, and for rendering the breath sweet and pure. Price 2s. 9d. per box.

The patronage of Royalty throughout Europe, their general use by the aristocracy and the élite of fashion, and the well-known infallible efficacy of these articles, have given them a celebrity unparalleled.

BEWARE OF SPURIOUS IMITATIONS!—The only genuine of each bears the name of "ROWLANDS," preceding that of the article on the wrapper or label. Sold by A. ROWLAND & SONS, 20, Hatton Garden, London; and by Chemists and Perfumers.

OVERLAND PARCELS and PACKAGES at very reduced rates to India, Ceylon, and China, 17th of every month. Periodicals from 1s. and parcels from 5s. upwards; also goods and parcels by steam and sailing vessels to all parts of the globe with economy, punctuality, and despatch. Passages engaged, baggage shipped, insurances effected, and fullest information given. Circulars of the routes via Southampton, Marseilles, and Trieste, gratis.—GEO. W. WATER CURE, BEN RHYDDING.

THE CELEBRATED WHARFEDALE HYDRO-PATHIC ESTABLISHMENT is now only 7 hours' distance from London, is 3 hours' distance from Harrogate, and 2½ from Fountains Abbey and Studley Park, 1½ from Leeds and Bradford, 2½ from Manchester and York, 3½ from Liverpool, and 7 miles' drive from Bolton Abbey, the beautiful seat of the Duke of Devonshire.

Physician to the establishment, Dr. WM. MACLEOD, Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, Edinburgh; Member of the Edinburgh Medico-Chirurgical Society; Honorary Member of the Royal Medical Society; formerly Lecturer on the Institutes of Medicine in the Argyle Square School of Medicine, Edinburgh; and Physician to the Royal Public Dispensary, &c. &c.

On a high eminence near the banks of the Wharfe stands this noble edifice; the extensive and varied scenery of the locality, with its salubrious springs and breezing air, have for centuries back rendered it a favourite place of resort for invalids.

The Establishment, for its situation and completeness, is unrivalled in England. It was built expressly for the Water Cure treatment, at an expense of £26,000, and is provided with every convenience, comfort, and even luxury.

The Estate, which has been elegantly laid out, consists of 65 acres of hilly and wooded pleasure-grounds. The Hotel, for the accommodation of friends of the patients, is complete in every department. Terms: Board, Lodging, Medical Attendance, &c. (including all servants), per week, £3. 6s.; Board and Lodging in the Hotel department (including all servants), per week, £2. 2s. Further particulars respecting coaches, &c., may be obtained of the House Steward, by letter addressed to him, Ben Rhydding, near Odey, Yorkshire. Dr. Macleod begs to refer those resident in India for further particulars of his establishment and method of treatment to his friend, Robert Browne, Esq., M.D., Superintending Surgeon of the Honourable East-India Company's Service, Dinapore, Bengal Presidency.

A SEARCH AFTER HEALTH, AND WHERE IT IS TO BE FOUND. A LETTER by a LIVERPOOL MERCHANT to his Brother Merchants, and to all who are labouring under the Great English Malady, the wear and tear of the system, or an over-wrought brain.

"The letter is written in a high tone of elation, because of a complete return to health.... He had consulted most of the eminent physicians at home and abroad; visited Harrogate, Buxton, &c., and the German Spas. All of no avail. At last he places himself under Dr. Macleod, at his palatial establishment of Ben Rhydding, from which, at the end of three months, he emerges completely cured."—Glasgow Citizen.

STEAM TO INDIA, VIA THE CAPE.—Notice is hereby given, that the Directors of the General Screw Steam Shipping Company have entered into a contract with Her Majesty's Government for a monthly postal service between England and Calcutta. The route on the outward passage will be St. Vincent's, Ascension, the Cape of Good Hope, Mauritius, Point de Galle, and Madras, to Calcutta; and on the homeward, the same line, inclusive of St. Helena. The service will be maintained by Iron Ships, of 1,900 tons, propelled by the Screw. They are constructed with fire-proof and watertight compartments, and are replete with every comfort and convenience for the accommodation of passengers. The first ship, the "QUEEN OF THE SOUTH," is appointed to sail on the 15th of June, and will be followed on the 15th of July by the "LADY JOCELYN." The successful results of the Cape service in small ships warrant the Board in stating that the passage to Calcutta, inclusive of stoppages, will not exceed 64 days.

For further particulars, application to be made to the offices of the Company, 2, Royal Exchange Buildings, London.

By order of the Board.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THIS mail adds but little to the stock of intelligence furnished by the last respecting the expedition against Burmah.

The latest advices from Rangoon are to the 23rd February, when negotiations were understood to be at end. The only incident of any moment was a message which had been received, about a week before, from the Governor of Rangoon, brought in a boat, inquiring what flag Commodore Lambert would hoist when he went up the river "with pacific intentions," in order that orders might be given to the stockades not, in that case, to fire on the Fox. "If, however, a distinguishing flag was not hoisted," the message added, "the frigate would certainly be fired at."

Her Majesty's brig Serpent, employed in blockading Bassein, was fired at from some stockades on the island Negrais, on the 19th February. Captain Luard sent his boats with a strong force on the following morning, which, landing, destroyed the whole of the stockades.

The letter from the King of Ava to the Governor-General, sent by the way of Moulmein (referred to in our last Summary), is said to repudiate the acts of the Rangoon Governor, and to propose the carrying on of negotiations with the Indian Government through the Commissioner in Arracan, the Commodore being an obnoxious agent.

It is understood that the Government has demanded full compensation for all the injuries inflicted on British subjects, and repayment of the expense occasioned by the demonstrations for an attack on Moulmein some ten years ago. The plan of operations prior to the rains will embrace, it is said, no more than the occupation of Rangoon, Martaban, and Bassein.

Some Burmese, who had arrived from their native country at Calcutta, report that an army of twenty thousand men had been got together to oppose the impending invasion; and that they are preparing to dispute every inch of the way from Rangoon to the capital.

A correspondent of the Hurkaru, who dates from Assam, advises that a force should be despatched to invade the country through Munneepore. He considers that this movement might be made without any great difficulty, and believes that it would paralyze the Burmese Government, by depriving them of the assistance of the Shan tribes, who are disaffected to the Court of Ava.

We have little or nothing to add to the intelligence from the north-western frontier which we reported in our last issue. We stated that the troops, under Sir Colin Campbell, had moved into cantonments at Peshawur, leaving garrisons at Dubb and Shabkuddur. It appears that the hill people, taking advantage of the withdrawal of our force, had come down and burnt some of the unprotected villages. On the evening of the 17th February, a skirmish took place near Dubb between our people and the Momunds, in which a jemadar of the 71st N.I. and several Momunds were killed. The Momunds came down in the direction of Mutta on the 16th, and it was reported that Saadut Khan had again moved to Gundab, and that the Halimzyes were mustering to join him.

The Lahore Chronicle very naturally asks, whether the ends for which the force was taken into the field have been answered or not?

"The great difficulty under which the chiefs arrayed against the British force laboured, was keeping together the tribes under their control, or who had joined in their undertaking, and this difficulty appears in the campaign, if we may so call it, which has just terminated, to have been overcome to a degree certainly not anticipated by the political or military authorities, when the force moved out in November. It was believed that a military demonstration would dissolve the coalition in a very short time, and that the chiefs and tribes would speedily express their willingness to come to terms, when they found the British force bent on keeping the field till they did so. But they have shown a perseverance on their part that bodes no good for the continuance of peace in their vicinity, and which has entirely upset the calculations of those best acquainted with them. They have stood fast to the last, and proved themselves much more determined than had been expected. It is no use to disguise the fact, that the Momunds have beaten Sir Colin Campbell at his own weapons. Their Fabius, whoever he may be, has had the best of it, and, while the British troops have been withdrawn from the debateable land, achieving little or nothing beyond keeping the jagheerdars out of their possessions, the Momunds and their friends and allies have the satisfaction of knowing or believing that they have tired out their enemy, and induced him to return to his cantonment, disgusted at the bold front and determination they have shown during nearly three consecutive months."

No mention is made of any troops going out again before April, when it is the intention of the authorities to build a fort in exactly the opposite direction to Dubb, at the mouth of the Kohat pass. Meanwhile the guerilla warfare, which has been going on around Peshawur for four months, is said to have had the effect of keeping a large portion of land uncultivated.

The Lahore Chronicle of March 3rd reports that the "bund" of the Momunds had been broken up. "The tribes have dispersed and betaken themselves to preparation for gathering in their crops; but we shall not be surprised, indeed we may calculate to a certainty, on seeing them again in the field so soon as they shall have completed their harvest, and secured the means of subsistence."

Sir Henry Lawrence, accompanied by Lord Stanley, left Peshawur on the 20th February for Kohat, via Attock and Khoosialgurh. He proposed to travel on the right bank of the Indus as far as Dhera Gazee Khan, returning to Lahore by Mooltan.

The Delhi Gazette learns from Herat that the Persians had evacuated that city and returned to Meshed, after concluding a treaty with the son of Yar Mahommed. The sons of Atta Mahommed accompanied them. "It is not very easy," it adds, "to account for this retrograde movement in the hour of victory, especially as they were actively supported by the Alikzyes, and might easily have obtained reinforcements of native Persians. It has been surmised, however, and perhaps correctly, that our ambassador had represented to the Shah that the British Government would never consent to his retaining possession of Herat, and that consequently it was better to give it up with a good grace."

The accounts from Afghanistan represent that Dost Mahomed is quietly ruling at Cabul, and Gholam Hyder was still at Jellalabad, with between four and five hundred regular infantry and about a thousand horse. Messengers had been sent from Cabul to Candahar for the purpose of learning the exact terms of the treaty lately made between Yar Mahommed's sons and the Kajars.

In Balkh, the son of the Khan of Muzar had rebelled against the Dost's authority.

All was quiet in Scinde. The whole of the troops had returned from Hyderabad and taken up their old quarters, in bad humour with Meer Ali Moorad, in that he had not bid defiance to our Government. The Meer's artillery had been received and lodged in the arsenal of Bukkur.

The letters from Lucknow, which are to the 20th of February, describe the king as scarcely compos mentis; over-indulgence having shattered his nervous system, and rendered him totally unfit to think for himself. His Majesty's engrossing amusement was flying pigeons, several thousands of which are sent up, and called back at the sound of the bugle.

From Hyderabad we are informed that the death of Akbar Jah had brought a great influx of wealth to the Nizam, and the Minister had announced to the Resident that he would soon be able to pay him thirty lakhs of rupees. Although this sum will not be sufficient to cover the amount of debt and the arrears, it will, it is stated, bring relief to the distresses which afflict almost every house in the city. "The long withholding of pay from the servants and departments of the State has involved almost every man connected with it inextricably in debt to the Arabs, who have now commenced, as if by general consent, a system of universal oppression; and refuge is sought by the debtors, flying from their houses, within the precincts of the Residency, or within the palace of the Nizam, or his Minister." Another letter says:—

"One, of several apartments, containing treasure, in Akbar Jah's house, has been opened, and has yielded a sum of fourteen lakhs of rupees. Of this, ten lakhs have been sent to the Resident, and four reserved for the use of Akbar Jah's family, and to pay the servants and dependants of the deceased, with whom, although a certain small subsistence was allowed them, no adjustment of their pay for the last nine years has been made."

From the Madras Spectator of the 5th March, we copy the following in reference to the prime minister:—

"It appears that Suraj-ool-Moolk had a narrow escape in the late conflict between his guards and the Pathans. The minister had a ball lodged in his cheek, which was cut out by Dr. Maclean, close by the opening of the ear, it having entered at the cheek-bone."

The Commander-in-Chief was still at Lahore on the 1st March, but intended to move on the 2nd, should the weather permit, there having been heavy falls of rain.

BURMAH.

It was thought by some that the question of peace and war was still dependent on the receipt of communications from the Burmese authorities, and that, when they found we were so fully prepared for war, they would be disposed humbly and submissively to accept the terms we had offered. All these expectations, however, have now vanished. The imbecile king's letter may have been of a pacific tendency, but those who wield the power of the state, and with whom alone we have practically to do, are evidently bent on trying conclusions with us in the field, and they have left us no alternative but to resort to arms. Every preparation has been made by them at all assailable points on the coast, to meet and repel our troops, and we are fairly embarked in a second Burmese war in spite of the most anxious desire to maintain peace.

The preparations for war on our part, since the Governor-General's return, have been carried on with a degree of vigour and despatch never exceeded and seldom equalled in India. At this presidency the 37th N.I. has been sent to guard Arracan, which will probably be invaded as soon as hostilities are officially declared. A portion of the 18th Royal Irish has been sent to Moulmein, which is now protected by a force little short of 2,500 men. H.M. 80th Foot is coming down from Dinapore by water with all speed; and so likewise is the 40th N.I.; they may be expected to reach the presidency by the 15th or 20th of the present month. One other native corps will be needed, but it is not known which will be selected. The arsenal resounds with the din of preparation, and it has been deemed necessary, as we hear, to borrow some hours from the Sunday for this work of necessity. The artillery about to be despatched will be of the most efficient and formidable character, and cannot fail to fill the minds of the barbarians with overwhelming astonishment. The guns and the troops will embark in steamers, which are coming up to convey them. An express has reached Madras, with instructions to hold the following force in readiness for immediate embarkation:—three companies of European artillery; H. M.'s 51st regt., and two regiments of native infantry. For the conveyance of these troops, a large squadron of steamers was ordered by express to leave Bombay without delay. Within three hours after these orders reached that presidency every arrangement was complete. The next morning the ships were reported to be in such a state of equipment that they were in orders to start on the third day. Of these vessels, two are of 500 horse power, and 1,500 tons; one of 800 horse power, and 1,200 tons, all armed with large swivel guns of 8-inch calibre, throwing hollow shot, shells, or grapnell, to the distance of a couple of miles. Two of the other steamers are about half the size of the others, but both are in a highly efficient state. Including the Hugh Lindsay, seven steamers will be despatched with troops from Madras across the bay. The whole, when assembled in Burmese waters, will form the largest and the most efficient and the most terrific fleet of steamers which has ever been collected together in the east. It will consist of the Peroze, the Mozuffer, the Seoastria, the Zenobia, the Semiramis, the Medusa, the Hugh Lindsay, the Tenasserim, the Fire Queen, the Enterprize, the Proserpine, and the Phlegathon, twelve steamers belonging to the Hon. Company, and one, the Hermes, of H. M.'s navy. The sudden assemblage of so magnificent a fleet of steamers, fully armed and equipped, will serve to prove the astonishing increase of power which the Government of India derives from steam navigation, and the complete command which it holds of the whole sea coast from Suez to the Yellow Sea. When we compare the astonishing celerity with which this expedition has been fitted out, and will be transported to the scene of action, with the long and dreary period which was wasted in collecting together the armament at Rangoon, in the first war, we have at once a reply to all the assertions that our empire is feeble from its own unwieldiness, and is falling to pieces with its own weight. It still exhibits all the vigour, the energy, and the elasticity of youth, though it is nearly a century old.

The force from Calcutta, which is to be under the command of General Godwin, will not be ready for starting so early as that from Madras, and as the two forces must act in co-operation with each other, it is scarcely possible to open the campaign before the first week in April, when there will be little more than a month left before the commencement of the rains. It has been confidently asserted that this powerful armament is to batter down the towns of Rangoon and Martaban, and then to leave the country, towards the latter end of May, in the expectation that this demonstration of our power will induce the Burmese to sue for peace. We think it far more probable that if we take possession of Rangoon, and other maritime towns, it will be not with a view to a precipitate retreat, but, as the lawyers say, to have and to hold, and that we shall not make any retrograde movement until after we have completely settled the affair. The present force is not sufficient for a march to the capital; and we naturally conclude that it is intended only as a demonstration, which may possibly induce the Government of Ava to throw itself at our feet and implore mercy, and pay for the rod that has punished it. If this expectation should be disappointed, then there will remain a cold weather campaign on a large scale, and the occupation of the capital and the country. If the Burmese, however, have not forgotten the experience of the last war, they will retire, after our first victory, towards the capital, and draw us into the interior of the country, and we shall probably find that we can dictate peace only within the walls of Amerapore. What ought to be the nature of those terms, it would be premature in the present stage of the business to dwell upon;—only we hope we shall not re-enact the truly English folly of sacrificing in our negotiations the advantages we have gained in the field, and thus bequeath to some future Governor-general the legacy of a third Burmese war.—Friend of India, March 4.

Lieutenant-General Godwin, C.B., who arrived two days ago at the presidency, to take the command of the expedition about to proceed to Burmah, is averse to anything being done at the present time, and advises, that as so much time has been lost, more should go after it; and nothing be done till the cold weather. Whether the counsel of this experienced and skilful officer will be followed or not, we cannot of course say. We think it ought to be, admitting, however, that the Burmese will form rather a curious opinion of us if it should. It would perhaps be as well, now that we are drawing near the rainy season, to halt a little: but again, it is possible that the terrible demonstration we should make at Martaban and Rangoon might open the eyes of the Burmese, and cure them of their mad infatuation. General Godwin commanded the brigade which overran and captured the province of Martaban in the first Burmese war, and served through the whole contest. He has also seen service in the Peninsula and elsewhere, and has been fifty-three years in the British army. Everything is now ready for the expedition, except the troops. The second draft of H. M.'s 80th is expected in Fort William to-morrow.—Chronicle, March 6.

THE LATE UNION BANK.

The special general meeting of the shareholders of the Union Bank of Calcutta, called at the requisition of Mr. J. W. Fulton and others, was held on the 28th February. Col. Sir John Cheape, Sir Henry Elliot, Major Hamilton Vetch, Mr. Charles Allen, Mr. Joseph Willis, and others, were among those who attended. Mr. T. C. Morton was called to the chair. Mr. Fulton, the Chairman, Baboo Prosunno Comar Tagore, Mr. Sutherland, Mr. Allen, and others, addressed the meeting. The result of the proceedings was, that a committee, consisting of Messrs. Fulton, John Jenkins, and F. J. Paul, was appointed to inquire and report "what has become of the assets of the bank." Mr. Fulton distinctly disclaimed any intention to cast a slur on the executive committee. His object, he said, merely was to elicit information, and recover as much of the property of the shareholders as was yet recoverable. It was proposed that the committee of inquiry should be associated with the present executive committee, in order to take such measures as might be necessary for realizing and recovering the assets of the bank, and protecting the interests of the shareholders; but this motion was negatived by a large majority, the general sense of the meeting being, that it virtually superseded the executive committee, and put upon it a stigma which it did not deserve. At the suggestion of Baboo Aushootosh Dey, who, being unable to attend the meeting, conveyed his proposition by letter, Mr. George Ackland was appointed to audit the accounts of the executive committee up to date, and to assist the committee of inquiry.—Hurkaru.

The unfortunate shareholders of the Union Bank have lately held a meeting, at which Mr. Fulton stated to the shareholders that his motive for calling them together was to inquire into the deficiency, which he states, including the contributions levied on shareholders, to be 54½ lakhs. Before any argument can be based upon this statement, it is necessary to know upon what valuation the assets at the stoppage of the bank were estimated at 81 lakhs. We have seen that the annual losses on factories were included in the sums at which they were estimated, so that the worst concerns finally became the most valuable; and the former secretary, at one of the meetings, declared he knew no other way of keeping accounts. Mr. Morton observed, that no faith was to be placed in such statements, for on one occasion Mr. Grant, then the director, made the assets 1,81,00,000, the concern no doubt being utterly insolvent at the time. Mr. Morton also stated that the deficiency was owing to so much property being forced on the market at a time of such great depression, and this he says was the work of impatient creditors. But though it is of very little use to find fault now, we may surely ask, whether those creditors might not have been compelled to wait? Surely, had the protection of the Supreme Court been sought, and a receiver appointed, the property would have been protected, and indeed creditors would not have pressed, had they been sure that all proved claims would be put on an equal footing. But if our recollection serves us, one of the first acts of the committee appointed after the stoppage on the 24th of December, was to sign judgment in favour of the Commercial Bank of Bombay, whose four lakhs had been misappropriated, just before the bank closed. The largest creditors were Messrs. Glyn and Co., and upon this, their agent was forced to proceed to execution, in which we have understood priority was only obtained by him by giving up the costs. It certainly appears to us that the committee might have prevented the sacrifice which ensued, and which Mr. Morton admits was so great, that a fortune might have been realized by purchasing at the sheriff's sales. Besides, if Messrs. Glyn and Co.'s very large debt is still disputable, and Mr. Morton informs us the next dividend will be withheld from them for that reason, why might they not have been compelled to adjust their account at first, instead of seizing and selling the bank's property?

With regard to the indigo, the disposal of which, we recollect, was the subject of one day's deliberation at a meeting of the shareholders, it is now said, that it was for the most part held by parties who had a lien upon it for claims against the estate of Hickey, Bailey, and Co., through whom they had purchased it. If Hickey, Bailey, and Co. sold it as brokers for the bank, it is clear that it could not be held for demands against them. But we believe the fact to be, that these gentlemen were employed to raise money for the bank from April, when the first pause took place, till the final stoppage in December. Mr. Scott's instructions were, Raise money, honestly if you can; but at all events, raise money. He did his utmost, with very little regard for the ultimate effect upon the bank shareholders, the object being to save several houses of business, his own among the rest, who must have stopped if the bank stopped. Monied men were tempted by extraordinary discounts to take the Union Bank's post-bills, and as early as June or July we publicly announced the rates at which they were selling as a caution to buyers. It may be concluded that the committee saw no hope of successfully contesting most of these transactions, for they did dispute some of considerable amount, where they had the advantage of a legal objection. It is therefore unlikely that much can now be recovered,—the mischief is done, and past repair.

We ought to notice a mistake which Mr. Fulton made about the Sindoorree and Bezoollee factories. Two post-bills of Co.'s Rs. 50,000 each, were received by the bank as part payment of the three lakhs, but there is no trace whatever of the payment of the remaining two lakhs.—Englishman, Nov. 6.

CASTE-OBSTACLES.—In a speech delivered by Baboo Ramlochan Ghose, principal sudder ameen of Zillah Nuddea, at the distribution of prizes to the students of the Kishnaghur College, 12th of January, he says:—"It is commerce that has given to Englishmen the sovereignty of the world, and in proportion to their wealth and superior knowledge they have obtained the honour and esteem of all the nations of the world. Unhappily for India, the distinction of caste is the greatest obstacle to commerce and navigation. The Hindoos think it a loss of caste to go on board a ship, and have shut themselves up within the precincts of their country for fear of incurring such an evil. As far as I know, I find no prohibition in the Shastras for embarking on board a ship, but, on the contrary, we all know that the Shastras hold out every encouragement to go on board a ship and engage in trade. We find it rather said, 'that there is no harm to come in contact or touch others on straw or wood in battle, when performing some religious ceremony, in a boat, on an elephant, in a journey, and in a marriage.' Under such an injunction, I do not know why our countrymen should consider it a loss of caste to go on board a ship or to engage in commerce. We find it rather said in history that, in former ages, the Hindoos made no scruple to go to Ceylon and other places for purposes of trade. I am quite certain that, if the Hindoos should go on board ships and enter into commercial intercourse with other nations and countries, there will be no possibility that India, so rich in fertility and natural resources, would ever become poor."

THE NAPIERS AND COL. OUTRAM.—It appears from a letter published as an appendix to Sir W. Napier's late work, that Sir C. Napier "formally" demanded, through the Governor-General in Council, the protection of her Majesty's Government, and that of the Court of Directors, against the "libels" of Col. Outram, i.e. the statements made by the latter in his reply to the libels on himself in the Conquest of Scinde—a History. The ground on which the hero of Meeanee bases his appeal is this,—that he was not responsible for what his brother wrote of Col. Outram! A very miserable subterfuge this appears to us for so great a man. It is well known, of course, that the historian was dependent on his brother for his materials,—that he could know nothing of Col. Outram except what he learnt from Sir Charles; but, says the high-minded Napier, "Lieut. col. Outram is responsible for what he puts his name to; I am responsible for what I put my name to, and General Napier is responsible for what he puts his name to; but none of us are responsible for what another man writes." Under all the circumstances of the case and the person, this is a very unworthy proposition. We think it would have been well to have kept such a letter in the dark.—Hurkaru, Feb. 9.

HERMETICALLY-SEALED SHELL-FISH.—Most persons residing in Calcutta heard, at the time of Mr. Reddie's death, a report that his illness was occasioned by eating hermetically-sealed lobsters. It is so usual to hear an attack of cholera attributed to the last food eaten or wine drunk, that the story did not cause any particular inquiry. Some of the cases containing lobsters were sold at Mr. Reddie's sale, and we yesterday received a letter from a gentleman who partook of one of them on his way by water to Kishnaghur. Two of the party were attacked with cholera, and one of them was considered to be in great danger for some time, though both have recovered.—Englishman, Feb. 10.

THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.—It would be preposterous to fix upon any spot as the permanent seat of the central authority, till our system of electric telegraphs is completed. This new principle of ubiquity, with which Governments have been endowed by the miracles of modern science, completely alters all our previous calculations, and nothing ought to be determined respecting the local habitation to the Government of India, till its result in India is clearly ascertained. It is, therefore, the bounden duty of Government to use the utmost diligence for the establishment of a net-work of electric telegraphs throughout India, during the two years which must elapse before it is necessary to adopt some definite plan. This is the most important of all political considerations,—the most pressing of all our emergencies. The cost will be about 200,000; and this sum should be appropriated to its completion, without hesitation or delay.—Friend of India.

THE NEW MARRIAGE ACT has been brought into practical operation. The registrars of marriages are in every case the registrars of deeds in the various districts; but a notification announces that any Christian minister, who may be desirous of the appointment of registrar, is required to send in his application to Government through the Commissioner.

RISE OF CHINESE COOLIES.—The Victory, with 350 Chinese coolies, bound for Callao in Peru, on the 10th December, rose, seized the captain and a sailor and murdered them. They then killed the second mate, James Aronson, and the cook, and compelled the third mate, Mr. Vagg, to navigate the ship on pain of death. They proceeded at first to Pulo Ubi, where eighty of their number left the vessel, and then made for the Gulf of Siam, and finally landed on the island of Kamboja, leaving Mr. Vagg to convey the ship to Singapore. No cause is assigned for the rising of the coolies, who were well treated and well fed.

THE LATE SUTTEE AT PACHETE.—A correspondent of the Englishman informs us that the investigation into the reported suttee at Pachete has closed, and Mr. Crawford has reported to Government that a suttee did actually take place. Mr. Russell is also of opinion that the person now put forward as the Ranees is one of the women servants of the late Ranees, and has ordered her to be detained. Capt. Oakes, on the other hand, is said to have expressed a contrary opinion, but the truth must soon be made manifest, as Major Hannington is in possession of documents signed by the late Ranees, which it would be difficult for the pretended Ranees to imitate exactly.

MADAME PFEIFFER, the celebrated lady traveller, has visited Sarawak, and penetrated to the residences of the mountain Dyaks. Thence she started for the Sakarran river, and after traversing Borneo, she intends to proceed to the Celebes.

DISORDERS IN THE DECCAN.—Letters from the Deccan mention that a party of Arabs and Rohillas were fighting, and as a matter of course plundering, to a great extent, in the neighbourhood of Mominabad.—Delhi Gaz., Feb. 28.

THE CAPITAL OF THE LA MARTINIÈRE INSTITUTION now amounts to Rs. 15,38,917: the expenditure for the past year was Rs. 74,952.

REV. J. J. WEITBRECHT.—We deeply regret to notice the awfully sudden death of the Rev. J. J. Weitbrecht, of the Church Missionary Society, and long known in Bengal as an active and zealously missionary of the Gospel. He preached in St. James's Church, Calcutta, on the evening of Sunday last, and was buried in the evening of the following day. He had been seized with cholera soon after he left the pulpit, and the attack was so severe, that although a healthy powerful man, he expired in a few hours.—Friend of India, Nov. 4.

A NATIVE GENTLEMAN, named Baboo Hurrochunder, has been appointed to the magisterial office in Calcutta, on a salary of Rs. 800 per mensem.

SHIPPING.—The Hurkaru states that the number of vessels which arrived in Calcutta in 1851 was 798, and their aggregate burden 402,478 tons. This is an increase of seventy vessels, or about 48,000 tons, on the preceding year.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.—It has been generally understood, that the Governor-General would leave India at the end of the present year. We have good reason to believe, that it has been determined that his lordship will remain two years longer at the head of the government of this country.—Lahore Chron., Feb. 25.

INDIA MEDAL.—G. O. C. C. announce that the Court of Directors have been pleased to admit the claim to the "India Medal" of all surviving officers and soldiers who served within the hills during any period of the war with Nepal, which commenced in the year 1814, and terminated in 1816.

CAPTURE OF A DHAKOO.—Mr. Dunlop, joint magistrate of Juanpore, has just captured a famous Dhakoo, named Runheer Sing. The capture was effected while the culprit was asleep, and in the Nawaub's territory, close to our frontier, and the whole business is said to have been managed with great judgment and decision. The King of Oude is so pleased at the capture of this individual, that it is said that his Majesty is about to present a sword to Mr. Dunlop, and a reward in money to those concerned in the capture, as a mark of his approbation.

THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.—The Hurkaru says:—"We are glad to learn, from the electric telegraph report, that the telegraphic line was, just half an hour before, successfully carried across the Hooghly above Diamond Harbour. This completes the communication betwixt Calcutta and Kedgerie."

CASTE QUESTION.—A case came up in the Small Cause Court of Calcutta on the 28th February, which illustrates a "domestic difficulty" now seldom met with in India. A table servant brought an action against his employer for six rupees eight annas, balance of wages due to him. The defendant admitted the debt, but denied his liability, inasmuch as the servant had refused to lift from the table a plate of ham, alleging that he would thereby lose caste. This defence was substantiated, and Mr. Willie immediately dismissed the plaintiff, observing that if the khidmutgar entertained scruples of that kind he must betake himself to some employment less obnoxious to his principles.

ANCIENT COINS.—The following advertisement appears in the Agra Government Gazette:—"Under the Instructions of Government, fifty-eight gold coins, of the area of Chitturgoopt, will be sold by public auction, at the Benares Collector's Office, on the 10th March, 1852. These coins were discovered in the village of Phissoora, in Thana Chundowlee, and are worthy the attention of numismatologists."

SIR H. ELLIOTT.—The Calcutta papers mention that Sir Henry Elliott, Secretary to Government in the Foreign Department, is so unwell, as to render relaxation from his duties absolutely necessary. He has consequently determined on applying for twelve months' leave of absence, and Mr. Charles Allen, of the civil service, whose substantive appointment is that of commissioner of Meerut, is to officiate for Sir H. Elliott during his absence. Sir Henry, it is understood, proceeds to the Cape.

A GENERAL COURT-MARTIAL is likely, it is said, to assemble at Ferozepore, to investigate certain charges preferred against a medical officers at that station. Some officers of H.M.'s service are said to have been summoned from Umballa on this duty.

STORM.—On the 2nd March, Calcutta was visited by the first nor-wester of the season—a furious storm of wind, thunder, hail, and rain. The electric fluid passed in large quantities along the wires of the telegraph, detonating in loud explosions at the stations, but beyond for a little interrupting the communication and endangering the attendants, it did no harm.

SMALL CAUSE COURTS.—The Citizen has heard that Government has under consideration a proposal for extending throughout the country, Courts of Small Causes similar to those already established at the three presidencies.

ON-DUTY.—General Godwin having left Umballa for Calcutta, the command of the Sirhind division devolves on Brigadier Gowan, c.b. There is every probability of the latter officer getting the command of the regiment of artillery, as Col. Shaw has been offered a divisional command, and the same proposal has been made to, and accepted by, Sir John Cheape.—Assistant-Surgeon W. Peskett has been permanently appointed to the staff of the Commander-in-Chief, and Dr. E. C. Thorp succeeds him in joint medical charge of Simla.—Mr. A. Ross, c. s., superintendent of Deyrah Dhoon, proceeds immediately to Bijour as collector, and Mr. H. H. Greathed, c. s., goes thence to Cawnpore as magistrate and collector.

MADRAS.

THE MADRAS BANK.

THE readers of this paper have long been familiar with the dissatisfaction felt by the general trading community with the working of an institution designed to advance the general commercial benefit, but warped by the selfish policy of the mercantile portion of the direction, into the mere convenience of a few of the leading firms. The crisis has at length arrived; the limits of endurance have been passed; the Government has placed itself at the head of the opposition party, and no long period will see the Madras Bank decently interred among the by-gones. The annual general meeting of the shareholders took place on the 1st instant, and as it was generally known that some skirmishing was expected, proprietors mustered in force. Mr. S. D. Birch, of the civil service, presided, and the general expectation was amply realized in a lengthened, warm, and animated discussion. The chief subjects of the debate were, the excessive amount of accommodation granted to the firm of Messrs. Binny and Co.,—the incompetency of the bank secretary, Mr. Hunter, —and the letter of Government animadverting with just severity on the recent policy of the management. The facts elicited confirmed the most unfavourable of the current rumours. It turned out that about one-third of the whole capital of the bank, nearly eleven lakhs of rupees, had been loaned to the single firm just named, and that within the short period of about three weeks; that this accommodation had been granted without the cognizance of the directors; that the objects for which it had been sought and obtained, were mere stock-jobbing operations; and that these transactions had been the primary cause of the almost total paralysis of the Madras money-market, for a period of unprecedented duration. The extent of the financial embarrassment under which the commerce of this place has been labouring for months past, may be estimated by the single fact that even Court of Directors' bills, generally considered for purposes of currency as good as bank-notes, had ceased to be negotiable!

The conclusion to which a review of all the circumstances has led the Governor in council is, that "it is scarcely practicable, circumstanced as Madras is, for the bank to be so worked as to combine the interests of the shareholders and of the leading firms with those of the community generally, which are in fact those of the Government—the Governor in council can only come to the conclusion, that the interests of this presidency must suffer most seriously so long as the Madras Bank exists as at present constituted,—and is not under the direct and full control of the Government—a control not nominal, but real. But as this cannot be under the present charter, it is therefore expedient to submit to the hon. court, the propriety of acting under the provisions of section 42, Act 9, 1843, and giving notice of the dissolution of its charter and the withdrawal of Government from all part in its concerns."

The great body of Madras merchants and traders have wisely determined not to let slip so auspicious a moment for obtaining the redress of their "grievances." A memorial has been prepared and numerous signed, praying the Government to take steps for the revivification of the Government bank, and it is not unlikely that they will get what they pray for.—Athenæum, March 13.

The Madras Bank is getting deeper and deeper into trouble. A large number of the traders of Madras have addressed Government, praying for the re-establishment of the Government bank, and as if to give effect to their representation, the existing institution has lowered its rates only one per cent., that is to eleven, although its specie amounts to about fifteen lakhs, and with a prospect of a further considerable increase. Surely this is neither a wise nor equitable proceeding!

We regret much to hear that three directors have resigned, in disgust at late reflections on the conduct of the majority of the board.—Spectator, March 12.

THE EXPEDITION TO RANGOON.—The troops at Madras are ready for embarkation, and the steam flotilla at anchor in the roads; the word to start is alone wanting, which will, according to present advices, not be given for a few days longer; the Calcutta division not being expected to reach the rendezvous before the close of the month. Lieut.-Col. H. M. Elliot, H.M. 51st, has been promoted to the rank of brigadier, and named to the command of the Madras force, with Major Griffiths, of the 11th N.L. for his major, of brigade. Major Boulderson goes as deputy judge-advocate-general, and Major W. H. Budd, assistant commissary-general, in charge of his department; Capt. G. Allan, 3rd M.N.I., D. A. quarter-master-general; Bt. Capt. J. W. Russell, to be field engineer, Bt. Capt. J. D. Scott to be brigade major of the artillery, and Surgeon W. G. Davidson, of the artillery, to be senior medical officer. H.M. 51st regiment will be relieved in a day or two by the left wing of H.M. 25th, now on the march from Bangalore.—Athenæum, March 13.

THE MOPLAH.—The information communicated by our Malabar correspondent of the restoration of peace and quietness in that district, is, we are happy to say, confirmed by intelligence from other sources. The apprehensions excited by the prospective seizure of the Tangul, or Moplah pontiff, a gentleman of as ambitious and turbulent a turn of mind as any of his western confreres, are now considered satisfactorily set at rest; his reverence having been visited with an accession of devotional feeling, which nothing will delay short of a pilgrimage to Mecca. That the payonets of H.M.'s 94th regiment may have exercised a gentle influence on the holy man's deliberations is, we are disposed to think, not at all unlikely; but where the tendency of his aspirations has so valid a claim on our approval, we feel it would be indecorous to scrutinize too narrowly the agency which has influenced it.—Athenæum, March 13. The Bombay Telegraph, however, states that a formidable outbreak of the Moplahs was expected to take place in Southern Malabar; that about 4,000 of that desperate class, at Shernad, near Munjer, had expressed their determination to defend the Teeroovangudy Tangul, their high priest, whom the authorities are seeking to apprehend for the purpose of bringing him to trial, as the prime mover of the late Chaverry outbreak.

The Begum's costume has reached India under very unfavorable circumstances. A police report of the Madras Athenæum says:—"The body who made such a sensation in Bloomsbury costume at Government House on Thursday evening last, was brought up before the sitting magistrate, under an escort of police,—herself and her fancy dress looking somewhat the worse for a night's lodging in the Tannah station. The lady had lost none of the vivacity which so charmed the large circle of visitors at the fancy ball, as will be evident from the dialogue that ensued on her becoming vis-à-vis to the magistrate." The lady had been taken up by the police on a charge of drunkenness, but was discharged by the magistrate with a reprimand.

THE SUGAR TRADE.—We regret to say that the sugar trade of Madras is ruined. It has grown up within the last twelve years, and afforded a hope that the destruction which has overtaken the native manufacturers might be compensated for by the export of this prime article of Indian produce. No less than 16,000 tons were brought forward in the Madras market last year, and considering that there is a greater breadth of land under cane cultivation at this moment, there is little doubt that the crop of the present season will amount to 20,000 tons over and above the amount necessary for internal consumption. Of this out-turn, perhaps the refiners at Rajahmundry, Bimlipatam, and other places, may take 6,000 tons; but we question if a single ton of the article, as manufactured by the native process, will be shipped in 1852. The prices now ruling in the home market show a loss of fifty per cent. against the exporters, and there is not the slightest chance of improvement from this day forward. The Madras sugar has hitherto been the purchased by English refiners, very little of it as landed from the vessel being fit to retail. Now that the sugars from the Continent can be laid down almost as cheaply, it is of course driven out of the field, and will never again command a remunerative price in the market.—Athenæum.

BOMBAY.

THE LONDON MAILS of Jan. 24th and Feb. 9th arrived at Bombay on March 9th.

THE REBELLION at GOA has been suppressed, and that settlement has returned to its usual condition of comolence. The "rebels" were attacked in the jungle by a large force under the command of Col. Mendes and Major Theodores, and, after a brief skirmish, in which three officers and five soldiers were wounded, the insurgents threw down their arms and fled.

COL. OUTRAM.—The Bombay Catholic Laymen states that the Pope has presented a gold medal to Col. Outram, in token of his gratitude to that officer for having protected certain Roman Catholic priests from insult in Egypt.

BOOKS, according to the Bombay Times, are sold at that presidency at the English prices, with an advance of two annas on the shilling.

MUSCAT.—We have been favoured with the following intelligence, received by the Brilon.—"MUSCAT, FEB. 8.—In September last, H. H. the Imaum of Muscat, went to Oman to settle some feeling of discontent or avarice, on the part of some of his relatives occupying the town called Sahar. After seizing Khaboorah and Sam, by coup de main, he hesitated, being naturally of a forgiving disposition, to see what effect this rush of success on his part might have on the Sahar chief, but it would seem that H. H.'s delay only emboldened the usurper Caishin Huzzahu, the Sahar chief, which caused a tedious negotiation, and as some one must pay the piper, H. H. the Imaum, it is believed, sacrificed a great sum on this occasion, after which a respite of two months was asked, for some reason unknown. All appeared very quiet till the 15th ultimo, when Syed Thuanees clandestinely left Muscat, and took with him a force of Bedouins by land into Oman, and two days subsequently Mahomed bin Salim, the governor at Muscat (a person believed to be a great administrator), sailed in H. M.'s frigate Faidth Alum, for Sahar. These noblemen, through their unwearied zeal and gallantry, have most happily caused a termination of the disruption in their family; hence the wars in Oman have also come to an end. H. M.'s son Syed Thuanees, and his cousin Mahomed bin Salim, having met at Oman, they seized the town of Chenas and Looah, the property usurped by the Sahar Chief within the last few years. The usurper finding his own town Sahar surrounded by troops, deemed it best to surrender it, and this day he has been brought to Muscat in H. H.'s frigate Faidth Alum by the victors, to confront the Imaum of Muscat: the old adage, 'all is well that ends well, is verified,—this day being a day of rejoicing to small and great in this town. May success ever attend so kind a king as the Imaum of Muscat, is the prayer of even his enemies.'—B. Times, Mar. 2.

SIR C. NAPIER AND MAJOR JACOB.—The last-named officer having, in a letter published in the Bombay Times, asserted that Sir C. Napier had told him he had saved his life, Sir Charles, in a letter to the Bombay Gazette, thus explains the matter: "But let me come to the saving of my life by Major Jacob. My columns were closing on the Ameer—my long-arranged operation had arrived at a crisis of the most intense anxiety to me. Suddenly I heard the distant sound of cannon. It came from Jacob's camp: was he victorious or beaten? In this state of doubtful anxiety I was struck down by the sun, and found lying insensible;—when recovering, my returning mind running confusedly upon the firing—I heard the steps of a horse approaching rapidly towards my tent, and I cried out, 'That's Jacob's despatch!' Had he beaten the Ameer? 'Yes.'—The excitement of the moment drove away my overpowering drowsiness which, in those cases, is fatal,—and I felt life coming back—for the sudden relief after months of intense anxiety, I cannot better describe. My success was complete, and I felt that the lives of those who had died from the heat had not been lost in vain. I rejoiced, too, that Jacob's had been a bloodless affair for us; not a man had fallen, either killed or wounded, on his side, and but five or six on that of the enemy: so far I owed my life to Lieutenant Jacob, but I owed it more to Lieutenant Colonel Roberts, to Captain McMurdo, to Doctors Gray and Gibbon!" Major Jacob, in the Gazette, thus replies: "With regard to the saving of Sir C.'s life, &c., Major Jacob quoted Sir C.'s own words and those of his brother in the Conquest of Scinde: the letter written by Sir C.'s order, on receiving Major Jacob's despatch, also contains similar expressions. All this regarding the affair of Shadadpoor he reluctantly brings forward. It is only wrong from him by Sir C.'s false and rash accusations. The generalship of Sir C. Napier was at least curious—and had not the Major been successful, the result might have been damaging to the General's reputation."

KHUTPUT.—From Baroda we still continue to receive intelligence most painful to our feelings, and humiliating to our pride, as Englishmen. The removal of Col. Outram, as too honest to fill the post of resident at the corrupt court of Baroda, the intrigues of that place continue to represent as the result of "Khutput made in Bombay"—i.e. of bribery on the part of high Government officials. And day by day are circumstances coming to light which cannot fail to satisfy the native community that these representations are correct; that English gentlemen will not hesitate to barter away the honour and reputation of their country. If there be any truth in the proverb that "it never smokes but there is fire," it is difficult to believe that there has not been venality on the part of one or more individuals. But we would fain hope that only one or two are implicated: and, lamentably as the prestige of Britain has suffered of late, in connexion with Baroda matters, much of what has occurred is explicable on the supposition that all are pure.—B. Telegraph, March 15.

AN EARTHQUAKE was experienced on the 24th January in Upper Scinde, Cutchie, and over Goozerat; in the second-named it seems to have occasioned much mischief. On the 24th February we had irregularities in the weather all over India, with heavy falls of rain in the Punjab and to the northward.—Bombay Times, March 14.

SIR JOHN GREY signalized his departure from the Bombay command by an order for the discontinuance of stocks and stiffeners for the men of the native army.

THE MAILS.—The mystery of the missing mail of the 24th January was solved on the 8th inst. On the evening of that day, the Zenobia, from Aden (without any mail), and the Ajdaha, from Suez (with both the mails—of 24th January and 9th February), arrived in this harbour. The cause of the detention was an accident which befell the machinery of the P. and O. Company's steamer Haddington shortly after leaving Suez with the 24th January mail, and which forced her to return to Suez. No damage occurred on the occasion either to the mails or to human life. The presently mid-monthly mail, it will be observed, leaves Bombay earlier than usual. This is because it goes by the Bombay, a small steamer belonging to a private company here, and which it is supposed will take longer on the trip than a steam-frigate of the Company's would. The Zenobia started for Madras and Rangoon two days after her arrival here, to join the other war steamers already despatched from this port for the scene of action in the Burmese waters.—Ibid.

FRAUDS.—The investigation into the Masulipatam frauds is rapidly going forward. Upwards of Rs. 50,000 have already been levied in fines on the revenue delinquents: and other cases are nearly ready for decision, in which parties on conviction are liable to penalties amounting to Rs. 82,600; making a total of drawbacks to the complete success of iniquity of Rs. 1,33,567-3-2. This is only the beginning of the end, and the inquiries involve the conduct of the public servants in only two Talooks and the Hoozoor. There are fourteen other Talooks yet to be investigated and hosts of charges yet to be taken up against those already tried and sentenced in other cases, which would occupy two or three officers for a year to come.—B. Telegraph, Nov. 15.

ONE OF THE EARLIEST MARRIAGES celebrated under the new Indian Marriage Act requires a passing notice. We allude to that of one of the Hindoo students, who accompanied Dr. Goodeve to England, to a wife of English extraction. Though there have been many disreputable connections between Europeans of the male sex with females of this country, we believe that the marriage alluded to is the first instance of a pure native allying himself permanently with one of the conquering race. "We cannot say," remarks one journalist, "that we hail the marriage, as the type of a class, with any great degree of satisfaction. We would rather that the ambition of the educated Hindoos should be to raise the social status of their own countrywomen, so as to make them fit companions, than that they should show a disposition to be absorbed themselves into the ranks of their instructors."—Ibid.—The native referred to is Soorjoooomar Chuakerbutty, M.D.

FURLONGHS AVAILABLE.

—Bombay Castle, Feb. 23, 1852.—The following disposition list of furloughs is published for general information:—

Furloughs available on this date, 9.

Admitted, Mr. W. A. Goldfinch.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

Bombay Castle, March 3, 1852.—The Right Hon. the Governor in Council announces with sincere regret that his Excellency Lieut.-General Sir John Grey, K.C.B., has been compelled by the state of his health to resign the office of Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay army, and to proceed to Europe.

Lieut.-General Auchmuty, C.B., the senior officer on the staff of this presidency, is appointed commander of the forces from the date of the Commander-in-Chief's departure from India.

Sir John Grey issued the following farewell order to the Bombay army:—

By the Commander-in-Chief.—"Lieut.-General Sir John Grey has been compelled by ill-health to relinquish the command of the army.

"Brief as the period is during which he has held this command, it has sufficed to confirm the high opinion which the Lieut.-General had previously formed of the Bombay army, and to impress him with a deep feeling of respect and regard towards the officers and soldiers composing it.

"The Lieut.-General offers his cordial thanks to officers commanding divisions, brigades, and regiments, for the support and co-operation they have afforded him. To the officers at the heads of departments, and to staff officers generally, the Lieut.-General also tenders his thanks, especially to those attached to the head-quarters of the army, whose able and zealous assistance on all occasions claim his warmest acknowledgment.

"The excellent conduct of the troops of all ranks, European and native, has rendered the Lieut.-General's duty as the head of the Bombay army, one of almost unmixt pleasure, and it will ever be a source of proud satisfaction to him to have had the distinguished honour of commanding it."

PASSAGE-MONEY.

Bombay Castle, March 3, 1852.—N. 150 of 1852.—The Right Honourable the Governor-General in Council is pleased to fix the following scale of passage-money to officers proceeding on duty from Kurrachee to the several ports named, to the Northward of Bombay:—

From Kurrachee.

Names of Ports.	Field Officers.	Captains or Subalterns.	Remarks.
Mandavie	Rs. 45 0 0	Rs. 35 0 0	Boats, with cargo are generally to be procured between these ports, thus regulating the rate.
Junia	35 0 0	25 0 0
Porebunder	65 0 0	55 0 0
Gogo	135 0 0	125 0 0	Boats seldom go direct to these ports from Kurrachee, rendering it necessary to proceed by Broach.
Surat	135 0 0	125 0 0

SURGEON, B. A. NICHOLSON.

At an "European General Court-Martial," assembled at Bombay, the 9th February, Surgeon B. A. Nicholson, of the Bombay medical establishment, was tried on the following charges, preferred by Capt. Wilson, 26th regt. N.I., commanding a detachment of recruits proceeding from England to Bombay, on board the barque Bussorah Merchant.

Charge.—For highly disrespectful and systematically insubordinate conduct towards me, as the officer commanding the said detachment in the following instances:—

1st. In having, on or about the 3rd of October, 1851, on board the Bussorah Merchant, when called upon to withdraw a note of a highly disrespectful nature, falsely accusing me of harsh treatment towards a woman named O'Brien, the wife of recruit Edward O'Brien, belonging to the detachment under my command, refused to do so.

2nd. In having, at the time and place above-mentioned, when called officially before me, on the subject of the note referred to in the first instance, addressed me as follows: "You have called me into this cabin to take advantage of me and bully me, but I will not be bullied by you," adding, "You have treated me unlike a gentleman ever since I came on board," or words to that effect.

3rd. In having, in a letter dated "Bussorah Merchant, 3rd of October, 1851," after having been placed in arrest, addressed to me, the officer commanding the detachment, falsely accused me of having gone to his cabin and bullied him cruelly.

4th. In having, in a letter dated "Bussorah Merchant, 16th October, 1851," in reply to one of the previous day's date, written by my direction, made use of the following expressions:—"In pages 5 and 6 you endeavour to throw the onus of Private Horse's case on me, by accusing me of neglecting my duty; this does not surprise me, for I have received nothing but contumely and injustice."

5th. In having, in a letter dated "Bussorah Merchant, 21st October, 1851," in reply to one of the same date, written by my direction, made use of the following expressions:—"Whilst I was still suffering from the effects of a severe injury, yet continuing the discharge of my duty, you thought proper to visit me with a series (reiterated) of ungentlemanly conduct, simply because I had extended my aid to a poor unfortunate woman, whom your treatment had reduced to a very dangerous state of illness."

6th. In having, in a letter dated "Bussorah Merchant, 27th November, 1851," addressed to me, the officer commanding the detachment, made use of the following expressions:—"I have the honour to request that I may be furnished with a copy of this day's orders, accusing me of dereliction of duty, because I was necessitated to appeal to you against the cruel treatment to which the sick men have been subjected, and which I was in hopes was not sanctioned by you."

7th. For having in a letter, dated "Bussorah Merchant, 22nd November, 1851," addressed to me, the officer commanding the detachment, made use of the following expressions:—"But for my professional skill, in the disparagement of which you offered me such gross insults, your cruel treatment would, in all probability, have hurried Mrs. O'Brien to a premature grave; I would, therefore, beseech you to accept my offer in order to avoid the chance of such a catastrophe in Mrs. Webb's case, and, ill as I am, I shall attend to her in person: if you refuse to accede to this, and the case ends fatally, her blood be on your head."

Additional Charge.—For conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, and for the prejudice and good order and military discipline, in the following instances, viz:—

1st. In having, in a letter dated on board the Bussorah Merchant, December, 1851, to the address of the military secretary to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, made the following false and unfounded statement, reflecting most injuriously upon me, his commanding officer:—"In this view of the affair, I am afraid that unless he feels certain that he can ruin me, he will endeavour to prevent the scandal of a court-martial, involving his appearance as the oppressor of a defenceless woman, and thus the gross insults that he has permitted himself, under the cloak of authority, to outrage me with, as well as my imprisonment, and the indignities that I have suffered, may pass without yielding me that redress, the hope of which alone, in a very bad state of health, enabled me to bear up against the most unmerited oppression."

2nd. In having, in the observations recorded in the official Medical Journal kept by him since the 27th of July, 1851, as surgeon in medical charge of the troops on board the ship Bussorah Merchant, at paragraphs 4 and 5, made the following false and unfounded statements with respect to the treatment to which the sick men and a woman of the detachment were subjected, viz:—"I had much reason to be dissatisfied with the great disregard shown for the health of the men under my charge, who were sometimes taken hot out of the sick bath, made prisoners, and exposed on the poop without regard to the time or season, and also without any consideration for the treatment the men might be under, who were thus often for trifles made prisoners without my sanction or even knowledge. One of the soldiers' wives was for some time in a very dangerous state from harsh treatment by order of the commanding officer."

(Signed) G. Wilson, Capt. and Brevet Major, 20th Regt. N.I., late commanding detachment of recruits, on board the barque Bussorah Merchant.

Bombay, 31st January, 1852.

Upon which charges the court came to the following decision:—

Revised finding.—On the first instance of the original charge Guilty of having refused to withdraw the letter, but attaches no criminality to that, and acquits him of the rest of this instance.

On the second instance, guilty.

On the third instance, not guilty.

On the fourth instance, guilty.

On the fifth instance, guilty.

On the sixth instance, not guilty.

On the seventh instance, guilty.

On the first instance, of the additional charge, guilty, with the exception of the words "false and unfounded."

On the second instance, guilty, with the exception of the words "false and unfounded."

Sentence.—To be severely reprimanded.

Confirmed.

(Signed) S. B. Acharya, Lieut. Gen. Com. of the Forces.

Head-Quarters, Bombay, March 12, 1852.

Remarks by the Commander of the Forces.—The Court, in its finding on the first instance of the original charge, has pronounced the prisoner guilty of having refused to withdraw the letter, but attaches no criminality to that, and acquits him of the rest of the instance, that is to say, it acquits him of the highly disrespectful nature of the letter, and the false accusation stated to be contained in it; but such a finding being virtually an acquittal of the whole, and systematically insubordinate conduct grounded on it, the prisoner was entitled to a verdict of not guilty of this charge, in the first instance, the Court attaching no criminality to his refusal to withdraw the letter. Again, the prisoner has been found guilty of both instances of the additional charge, with the exception of the words "false and unfounded," a verdict tantamount to an acquittal of this charge, especially in the second instance, as the imputation of conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman cannot be said to apply to the mere fact of Surgeon Nicholson's having, in the performance of an imperative duty connected with his responsible charge, made entries in the medical journals respecting the treatment of his patients; those statements being true, the word guilty used by the Court in its finding on the original charge in the first instance, not being intended to imply criminality, is not applicable, as no one can be guilty without being culpable.

The Court having found the prisoner guilty of highly disrespectful and systematically insubordinate conduct in the second, fourth, fifth, and seventh instances of the original charge, and not having acquitted him of conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, as set forth in the additional charge, ought to have awarded a sentence adequate to the offences of which it had convicted him; and which a severe reprimand does not appear to be. The acquittal of Surgeon Nicholson of the first instance of the original charge, and of his having made false and unfounded statements in the entries in his medical journals relative to the harsh treatment of his patient, throws the odium of such harshness upon Captain (now Major) Wilson, and the evidence recorded upon these proceedings not only exhibits a want of consideration in this respect, but makes it apparent that there was an irritating interference evinced upon the part of Major Wilson with the arrangements of Surgeon Nicholson for proper ventilation, a duty which undoubtedly devolved upon the medical officer, who was responsible for the health of the men of the detachment. The above circumstances, added to a want of properly concerted measures between the commanding officer, and a medical officer of the detachment, have been the principal cause of these misunderstandings so fatal to discipline. Major Wilson ought from the first to have required a daily list of sick men and women, under Surgeon Nicholson's signature, and required that officers to enter in his daily report the names of such men as were unable to attend the day's roll call, and of such women as he wished to be exempted from bathing and the operation of any rule established by him. The usual and regular detail system would have obviated the necessity of appeals on the part of Surgeon Nicholson in individual cases, and have afforded no opening to a correspondence upon the subject of his patients. In these particulars Major Wilson is much to blame.

Surgeon Nicholson has been found guilty of highly disrespectful and systematically insubordinate conduct, and sentenced to be severely reprimanded; but so reprimand, however severe, is an adequate punishment for a military offence of so dangerous a tendency and of so grave a character.

Had the Court martial sentenced Surgeon Nicholson to be cashiered, the punishment would not have exceeded what is due to the crime.

(Signed) S. B. AUCHINCLOSS, Lieut.-General.

Surgeon B. A. R. Nicholson is released from arrest.
